Cutter Saves 7 CCC Boys Adrift on Ice Off Cape Cod

Break-up Divided Marooned Party

Two Die in Lake Boat; Third Fights Way to Safety.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Hyannis, Mass., Feb. 10.—Seven young CCC workers, who entertained themselves by wrestling, boxing, dancing and singing "Red Sails in the Sunset" during the 22 perilous hours they were marooned on two ice floes in Cape Cod Bay, were safe tonight after being snatched from possible death by a Coast Guard cutter.

Four of the youths were aboard the cutter Harriet Lane. The other three castaways had been transferred to an airplane and brought to Cape Cod Hospital, where despite frozen or frostbitten hands and feet, they smilingly recounted the story of their long exposure to rain, snow and subfreezing weather.

TNT Used to Free Ship.

Coast Guards resorted to TNT to blast free the Harriet Lane, which had become ice-locked in the bay some 2 miles from the shore with the following four rescued youths, all of Rhode Island, aboard:

Thomas Malone, 18, Portsmouth; Tony Ray, 19, West Warwick; Manuel Bottello, 19, West Warwick, and Nicholas Scunzio, 19, Thornton.

The other three, also Rhode Islanders, are in the hospital here. They are John Fitzsimmons, 19, of Portsmouth, who was found to be suffering from frozen feet; Albert Papa, 18, West Warwick, and Norman Beaulieau, 19, Pawtucket, both of whom were suffering from general exposure. Their feet were severely frost-bitten.

The Lane planned to land the youths either at Provincetown or Sandwich.

The youths had been stranded on the floes since Sunday noon, when they went for a walk across the ice-coated bay. A stiff southeast wind and high tide combined to chip off an ice floe a quarter mile long and 1,000 yards wide, carrying the boys into the bay. During the night their floating prison split in two. Five boys were found on a large cake and two on a much smaller one.

Flier Spots Castaways.

After the Lane had plied through the bay all night in a futile search, the boys were first spotted early today by Maj. Barney M. Giles, of Langley Field, Va., piloting an Army bombing plane temporarily stationed at Concord, N. H., airport.

Giles and the three members of his crew swooped to within 50 feet of the boys and dropped them messages. Two other planes arrived at the scene later and, flying low, dropped food and blankets to the marooned youths. Giles then radioed the cutter Lane, which sped to the vicinity and put a dory on the ice.

After a hazardous trip of some 400 yards along the frozen surface, the rescue party picked up Fitzsimmons and Papa, who were on the smaller floe.

The other five, adrift on the larger floe, were reached by another rescue party from the cutter Lane, beating a crew from the Orleans Coast Guard station to the scene.

At mid-afternoon an amphibian took three of the youths, Fitzsimmons, Papa and Beaulieau, ashore.

Beaulieau said he and his four companions, boxed, wrestled, danced and sang through the night after being separated from Fitzsimmons and Papa. He told how he and his four buddies built a blockade of ice to barricade themselves against the wind.

"Fitz froze his feet trying to get

E. S. McLellan, 60, Clad in Pajamas, Disappears Near San Francisco.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Feb. 10.—Clad in pajamas, Capt. E. S. McLellan, 60, disappeared today from his Army transport Republic as it neared the United States from Honolulu with the bodies of six Army airplane victims and Father Damien, famed leper colony priest, aboard.

He vanished some time after 5 a. m. when the Republic was about 30 miles off the Golden Gate, it was revealed officially after the vessel docked. Capt. McClellan, who entered the service as a seaman in 1900, gave instructions to be called when the boat reached the lightship, 7 miles off shore.

A steward found him missing when he called at the captain's cabin. No message was found there, reports indicated, which would explain the disappearance. Pictures of the captain's wife and family were picked up, face downward.

Tonight an Army board of inquiry began an investigation.

Army authorities were silent, but from authoritative sources it was learned the Republic carried the bodies of six Army fliers killed in a midair crash of bombing planes near Honolulu. The widows of two of the victims were aboard.

The body of Father Damien, who gave his life in service on Molokai Island's leper colony, is en route to his homeland of Belgium for burial.

Gen. James A. Woodruff, of Fort Mason, appointed a board of inquiry, consisting of Col. A. E. Ahrens, Lieut. Col. J. H. G. O'Rear and Maj. W. C. Mahoney. The board will report to Gen. Woodruff, who in turn will forward the findings to Washington.

The captain's wife, who lives here, could shed no light on his disappearance. She said he wrote her several times during his trip to Hawaii, which he left February 3, on the return voyage.

Capt. McLellan, a native of California, attended school in Pasadena, Oakland and San Francisco, and had risen through all grades before becoming captain in the transport service.

Airport Road Closing Hinges On $50,000 Price Fixed in Bill

House, Senate Committees Set Figure to Avoid Fight in Upper Chamber; Field's Directors Meet Here Today to Discuss Acceptance.

By James D. Secrest.

The closing of Military road as a hazard to air transportation and motor vehicle traffic at Washington Airport last night depended upon willingness of the directors of the National Airport Corporation to buy a portion of the highway for $50,000.

After a day of conferences between members of the Senate and House Military Affairs Committees, Chairman McSwain, of the House Committee, drafted his third joint resolution to close the War Department's road and said he would introduce it in the House today.

The new measure, approved by Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, as chairman of a Senate sub-committee, represents an about-face upon the part of the Senate and House committees since last Friday when they agreed to sponsor a resolution to close the road temporarily, pending further legislation by Congress.

$50,000 Price Set.

The new resolution provides that the portion of Military road adjacent to the Washington Airport shall be sold to the National Airport Corporation for $50,000, the money to be expended by Arlington County in constructing a substitute highway.

Samuel J. Solomon, vice president of the National Airport Corporation, was called into conference with Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, late yesterday and told the terms.

Last night he said the corporation's directors will come to Washington today to decide whether to accept or reject the offer. He said he had not made up his mind what to recommend.

"I am not at all optimistic over the prospects," he said.

The about-face upon the part of the Senate and House committees is understood to have been brought about by the threatened opposition to the former resolution by a bloc of Senators headed by Byrd, of Virginia.

McSwain is reported to have conferred with Senator Byrd and Smith before proposing the new resolution to the sub-committees.

Solomon, obviously nettled at the sudden turn of events, pointed out that the insertion of the mandatory sale at a fixed price in the resolution complicated the problem in two major aspects.

"If the Federal Government should decide later to buy the Washington Airport for a Federal-District airport," he said, "it will

7 Americans Held Captive by Ethiopian Chief

By the United Press.

London (Tuesday), Feb. 11.—Seven Americans and a British missionary are held prisoners by a corrupt Ethiopian chieftain at Wallamo in the Province of Gamo, the London News-Chronicle's correspondent at Djibouti, French Somaliland, reported today.

The Americans reportedly are members of the Sudan Interior Mission. Their names were given as the Rev. Harold Street, Mrs. Street and their four children, and Miss Bray, a nurse. The British missionary was said to be the Rev. John Trewin, a Canadian.

Street and Trewin are bound by chains in a filthy native hut serving as a prison at Chencha, capital of the Gamo district in the southern lakes region of Ethiopia. The women and children were said to be under strong guard at a mission station at Shama, 50 miles south of Chencha.

Soldiers peremptorily ordered the men to mount mules and forced them to leave the women and children. The dispatch said the men were taken to Chencha.

No Report Received Here.

By the Associated Press.

The War Department said last night it had not been informed through any official channels of the capture of seven Americans by an Ethiopian chief, as reported in London dispatches.

It was observed here that the capture, said to have been made in the Province of Gamo, would be in the area which all Americans were advised to vacate by the State Department.

When the warning was made, department officials said they would be powerless to aid Americans who stayed in the danger zone.

'Anti-Social' Views Dropped; Tangier Hails Food-Bearers

By Clarence DuBose.

A Staff Correspondent.

Tangier Island, Feb. 10.—It was not so long ago when the natives of this little island out in Chesapeake Bay liked to be left alone. They were suspicious of strangers, particularly those bearing cameras.

Once a man came here to deliver a lecture and show lantern slides. The islanders, thinking his magic lantern was a camera, chased him to the mainland.

But all such wariness had disappeared from Tangier Island today. And with it the danger of hunger.

Strangers came with food—tons of it. They came in huge Army planes, in the Goodyear blimp, Enterprise, and in Coast Guard cutters.

Late today the town hall here was piled almost to the rafters with food—sacks of flour, cans of lard, and sugar, milk and beans.

The islanders—hardy fishermen and their wives, for the most part—filed through the town hall while Red Cross agents piled their baskets with the articles needed.

Four Army bombers from Langley Field flew here in the course of the day, dropping the food, well wrapped in burlap, as they swooped close to the ground.

The blimp, which battled her way from Washington in a near-gale, dropped her landing lines and was hauled to the ground by islanders.

Commander Karl Lange and First Officer Ernest Smith handed out the School Boy Killed As Sled Hits Auto

Paul Gagnon, 13-year-old Mount Rainier, Md., school boy, was killed instantly last night when his sled crashed into the rear wheel of an automobile at Thirty-first and Beech streets.

Betty Carmichael, 15, a friend, escaped serious injury, being thrown clear of the sled.

The boy and girl were coasting down the steep ice-covered hill on Thirty-first street, near their home. The sled struck the automobile of Dr. Oscar LaVine, of Mount Rainier, as he drove into Thirty-first street from Beech.

Residents of the town were aroused when they learned of the fatal accident. Several said officials had been asked to rope off the Thirty-first street hill for sledding and had failed to do this.

Mass Health Parley Scored By Blanton

But Committee Ignores Texan and Forwards Invitations.

Auditorium of Central High to Be Scene of Gathering.

Representative Blanton hurled a charge of "bulldozing" yesterday at plans for a public health mass meeting but, despite his opposition, the committee on arrangements for the assembly decided last night to hold it next Sunday as scheduled.

Dr. Sterling Ruffin, president of the District Medical Society, called a special meeting of the committee after Blanton, chairman of the House sub-committee now considering the District's 1937 supply bill, told him he was "surprised" that a mass assembly to discuss the present inadequacy of funds for tuberculosis control, hospital maintenance and other public health activities was deemed necessary.

The mass meeting will be held Sunday at 3 p. m. in Central High School auditorium. Invitations to participate were mailed yesterday to various civic organizations.

Declaring that his sub-committee expects to add enough money to the District supply bill to continue operation of the Tuberculosis Hospital on Upshur street after the Glenn Dale hospital is opened, Blanton said:

"Why, of course, we are going to take care of the Tuberculosis Hospital.

Called Group Sympathetic.

"This committee is sympathetic to the health needs of the District. We are going to do everything we can.

"But these people are going about it the wrong way when they call a mass meeting. We are going to need a lot of help on the floor to get this budget through, and there are a lot of Congressmen who refuse to be bulldozed by any damned mass meting."

Blanton's volley came as he emerged from another day's executive hearings on the 1937 District budget, from which the Bureau of the Budget struck out a request by the District Commissioners that the Upshur street hospital, with its 225 beds, be continued in operation after its successor at Glenn Dale, Md., is opened.

Deny Hostility.

Dr. Ruffin and other members of the general committee on arrangements re-emphasized last night the point they stressed when the mass meeting plan was adopted last Saturday, namely, that the District Medical Society is not seeking to antagonize Congress or any other Government agency or official.

"We simply feel it is our duty," they said, "to stress the emergency that exists with regard to health."

Except to admit that Blanton had telephoned him earlier in the day to express his surprise, Dr. Ruffin declined to go into the incident. Asked whether he wished to make a statement in reply to the Congressman, the Medical Society president answered in the negative and other members of the committee concurred.

It was indicated that the society does not expect restoration by the House subcommittee of health items eliminated by the Budget Bureau but is planning a campaign to secure a deficiency appropriation which would, in effect, have the same result. After that the medical group, which believes the public health estimates submitted to the Budget Bureau by the District Commissioners are insufficient to meet the city's needs, would work for further increases.

Gains Momentum.

With the Capital's public health budget for 1936-37, as it now stands, tolerant of serious space congestion and shortage of personnel at Gallinger Hospital, laboratory deficiencies and other handicaps in the Health Department, inadequacy of funds to care for tuberculosis patients and numerous other emergencies, feeling against the critical situation is rapidly gaining momentum.

In the last few days this writer has received letters and telephone calls calling attention to this condition or that.

"At Gallinger Hospital one nurse, working from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m., has to care for as many as 38 newborn infants," I was informed by one doctor. "It's all one nurse can do to handle 20 or 25, which is the average responsibility in private

Black to Succeed Coolidge, Report

Eugene R. Black, Jr., second vice president of the Chase National Bank of New York, was reported last night slated to succeed Thomas Jefferson Coolidge as Undersecretary of the Treasury on Saturday, when Coolidge's resignation becomes effective.

The report was given color by two circumstances yesterday—a conference between Black and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Morgenthau's refusal to deny the rumor.

Black, a conservative, is a specialist in municipal bonds.

President Roosevelt was reported to have virtually decided on Black. The post of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury also becomes vacant shortly, when Lawrence W. (Chip) Roberts' resignation becomes effective.

Black is the son of the late governor of the Federal Reserve Board. His father, prior to that appointment, was head of the Federal Reserve Bank at Atlanta.

Homes for Workers Planned Around Campuses; Factories Slow to Move in With Jobs.

By Felix Bruner

Copyright, 1936, by The Washington Post.

Following is the second of a series of four articles concerning the Resettlement Administration, its widespread activities, its methods of operation, its financial resources and its objectives:

The Resettlement Administration, headed by Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, is, like so many New Deal emergency organizations, taking a whirl at solving the housing problem. And, like most New Deal emergency agencies, its housing program bears relationship to that of any other Government body. The Resettlement suburban housing activities are among the many which the Administration is attempting at last to unscramble and bring into some semblance of co-ordination.

As might be expected, the resettlement suburban housing scheme is aimed at the establishment of idealistic conditions. Like all things Tugwellian, it is far different from accepted ideas—at least, far from those accepted in America. The plan was imported from Germany and the Scandinavian countries.

Homes Around Campus.

The housing division of the Public Works Administration turned its attention to slum clearance. The Federal Housing Administering is encouraging private building. The Home Owners Loan Corporation has been rescuing home owners who haven't been able to meet their mortgage payments. But the Tugwell organization has an entirely different idea.

Their plan is the construction of houses on the outskirts of cities for low-income families whose heads work in the cities. The idea is to buy large areas of land, to build houses, not on streets but surrounding a "campus"—there is always something collegiate about Tugwell schemes—and to make living conditions as near ideal as possible.

Early New Deal ideas contemplated moving persons from "stranded communities" into similar centers where industries would spring up and the residents could step from their front doors and walk a few blocks to the job. This idea has now been given up.

There was only one hitch, but it proved to be a serious one. No one

Allen May Quit Commissioner Post This Year

Youngest Man Ever Named to Group to Resume Hotel Business Here.

Commissioner George E. Allen announced yesterday on Capitol Hill that he will probably resign before the expiration of his term.

The disclosure was made shortly before he appeared at a hearing of the District sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee.

He did not say definitely what line of activity he would follow, but indicated that after the November elections he will return to the hotel business.

Since his appointment January 15, 1934, Commissioner Allen rejected several private busines offers. One was to head an insurance company and another was the post of president of a railroad.

On numerous occasions he told friends that he was "losing money" in his present position as Commissioner, but that he wanted to organize the District relief set-up properly before resigning.

His term expires next January 15.

Allen was the youngest man ever appointed to the Board of Commissioners. When President Roosevelt sent his nomination to the Senate as successor to Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, Allen was 37 years old.

He was born in Tupelo, Miss. He is a member of the bars of Mississippi and the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

He spent little time in active law practice, engaging chiefly in the hotel business before coming to Washington eight years ago, to manage the Wardman properties.

His appointment to the District Commission was a surprise nomination by the President. Allen was a "dark horse," whose chief sponsor was Senator Pat Harison, of Mississippi.

During his tenure as Commissioner, Allen concentrated chiefly on the relief problems of the District, and headed various emergency relief agencies.

Supreme Court Ruling Upholds Press Freedom

By Robert C. Albright.

Holding "informed public opinion is the most potent of all restraints upon misgovernment," the Supreme Court struck an effective blow for press freedom yesterday by invalidating a special tax levied by the administration of the late Huey P. Long upon 13 Louisiana newspapers.

The decision was unanimous. Speaking for the court, Justice George Sutherland traced the successful battle for an unfettered press in this country from early English origins and assailed the tax as a "deliberate and caluculated device" to limit the flow of information.

"A free press stands as one of the great interpreters between the Government and the people," he said. "To allow it to be fettered is to fetter ourselves."

The decision highlighted a day of anxious waiting for the Supreme Court's TVA ruling, which—again—was not forthcoming. Once more the tiny courtroom was packed to overflowing and once more an atmosphere of anticipatory tenseness gripped the chamber. There was no explanation of the delay and all attempts to pierce the court's silence were futile. It has been nearly two months since TVA arguments were completed. A disappointed throng filed out of the courtroom to return in fresh anticipation next Monday.

Split decisions on two cases involving the New York milk control law, however, threw interesting light on the shifting conservative and liberal alignments within the court.

In the first, the court, by a 5-to-4 ruling, with liberals in the ascendancy, held constitutional a section of the New York act permitting milk dealers not having a "well-advertised trade name" to sell milk at 1 cent a quart below the price asked by "well-advertised" dealers.

In the second, the court held invalid a provision of the act limiting the right of sell milk at the lower price to dealers not well known who have been in the business since April 10, 1933. This decision was

$3,000,000 Newspaper Estate Is Willed to Harvard College

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Feb. 10.—The bulk of the estate of Mrs. Agnes Wahl Nieman, consisting chiefly of a controlling interest in the Milwaukee Journal and estimated at between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000, was left to Harvard College, her will disclosed today.

It was specified the bequest be used in elevating the standards of journalism.

Mrs. Neiman, who died a week ago, was the widow of Lucius W. Nieman, founder of the Journal and its editor for 53 years.

The funds were bequeathed to "the president and fellows of Harvard College of Cambridge, Mass." Their disposition was vested in the Harvard governing board.

The Harvard bequest is to be known as the Lucius W. Neiman and Agnes Wahl Nieman Fund. The will directed that the income be used "to promote and elevate the standards of journalism in the United States and educate persons deemed especially qualified for journalism." Scholarships and prizes for writers or students, to be named for Mr. Nieman, were provided.

Mr. Nieman, who died last fall, left his Journal holdings, amounting to 55 per cent of the stock, in trust, with his widow receiving three-fourths of the income and a niece, Miss Faye McBeath, one-fourth. In the event of sale, the will directed that both receive equal shares of the proceeds. It is the widow's share of the sale receipts, together with her other holdings, that is to go to Harvard and the other beneficiaries.

Congress Opens Drive to Build Up All of Nation's Defenses.

'Incredible' Idea, Is Tokyo Reaction

House Speeds Action on Biggest Army in Peace Time.

With plans for immediate passage of new neutrality legislation abandoned, Congress yesterday started consideration of building up the armed defenses of the United States.

In the Senate, Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, warned that the policy of Japan in China constitutes a threat to the United States. He declared that this country must support the construction and maintenance of naval and air forces "that will be sufficient to protect our citizens."

Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, followed with a speech in which he hinted at an alliance between Soviet Russia and Japan to control the Far East and designed to keep the United States out of Eastern markets.

Biggest Peace Army.

In the House, consideration was being given by the Appropriations Committee to the biggest peace-time Army appropriation in the history of the United States. Actual military funds totaling $388,782,232 were requested, with $168,359,985 for non-military purposes.

The bill would provide a regular Army enlisted strength of 150,000, with 565 more airplanes and an extended National Guard.

The Senate Munitions Committee heard testimony to the effect that the Navy League has received substantial donations from munitions makers and shipbuilders.

The Pittman speech, in which the Foreign Relations chairman told the Senate that China's open door "is to be closed to us, even if war is necessary to accomplish it," caused a stir on both sides of the Pacific. In the course of his speech, he demanded a universal respect for peace treaties and indicated that he still believed nonaggression pacts to be very much alive.

Commenting on the Pittman speech, Secretary Hull said:

"I have not yet had an opportunity to read Senator Pittman's speech. Senator Pittman occupies an important position in the legislative branch of the Government. There has been, as regards his speech, no consultation nor collaboration between him and me. There is no reason why I should make any comment."

"Incredible," Says Tokyo.

From Tokyo, the Associated Press reported that a foreign office spokesman said Japanese officials would refrain from comment until they had seen the speech, but that he felt that it was "incredible" that such a responsible man as the chairman of the Senate's Foreign Relations Committee would make such a speech criticizing a friendly nation."

In Washington, Japanese Ambassador Saito said that Japan had no intention of closing the door of commerce in China to the United States or any other nation. He said that he would undertake no answer to the speech other than to say that "the Japanese people have no desire to fight and I see no cause for either country fighting." Saito characterized Lewis' hint of a Japanese-Russian alliance as "something new and novel."

"Up to now, all the talk has been about the possibility of war between Soviet Russia and Japan," he said. "I do not, of course, expect that."

Pittman opened his talk with the declaration that it was high time Congress took cognizance of the Japanese policy with regard to China "and its intended effect upon the United States."

Policy Is Understood.

The Senator quoted a recent speech by Saito in which the Japanese Ambassador likened the policy of his country to the Monroe Doctrine of the United States. He quoted Saito as saying that Occidental aggression in China had caused the Japanese to wage several minor, and at least one major war.

The conquest of Manchuria, Pittman said, "was in violation of the Covenant of the League of Nations, the Kellogg-Briand pact to outlaw war, and the nine-power pact adopted in Washington in 1922." He declared that acceptance of Japan's demands upon China would mean the surrender of Chinese sovereignty.

"Yes, we full, understand Japan's

House Military Bill Sets Peak For Peace Time

389 Million Asked; Senate May Get Measure by Tonight.

By the Associated Press.

A peace-time record call for Army funds, aimed at a heavy strengthening of the Western defenses as part of an actual military expenditure totaling $388,782,232, yesterday was started through the House.

Warned by the Army high command that these are "troublous times in the world," and told by their own committee that "a larger military budget for 1937 was inevitable," House leaders planned to rush the huge appropriation bill to the Senate by tonight.

Included in the measure also were curtailed provisions for $168,359,985 in nonmilitary expenditures for rivers and harbors, bringing the total well above the half-billion mark. New funds for actual military spending would be stepped $23,803,501 above those for the current fiscal year.

Increase in the Regular Army enlisted personnel to 150,000.

Addition of 5,000 officers and men to the National Guard to bring this branch of the defense to 200,000, with increased allowances for artillery and aviation equipment.

The spending of $45,540,177 on new Regular Army airplanes, providing 565 more planes, plus replacement parts, for the corps.

The spending of nearly $7,000,000 more than was originally contemplated on strengthening of the defenses on the West Coast, Hawaii and the Panama Canal.

The measure, upon which debate immediately was initiated, resulted from extensive hearings. Field commanders from Hawaii, Panama and the West Coast were called in to testify privately on defense needs in the Pacific.

Armament "Impotent."

Like Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Air Corps, all of the commanders told the same story of inadequate defenses at the Western outposts. Westover termed air defense for the possessions "almost impotent."

The measure, consequently, carried $3,379,511 for the coastal defenses of the insular possessions, principally Hawaii, or $3,000,000 more than was recommended in the budget. A similar boost to $3,915,391 would be granted for the United States' own coast defense, with $1,223,892 more for Panama. The latter figure represented a $725,000 increase over budget estimates for seacoast defense there.

Committeemen explained that these allowances would go principally toward completing approved projects for the areas estimated to cost $6,765,321, $15,610,143 and $9,816,32, respectively.

In providing for an Army enlisted strength of "not less than" 150,000 in the next fiscal year, the bill overrode the Budget Bureau's request for an Army of not more than 147,000.

In so doing, the committee emphasized the increase would enable bringing the Hawaiian and Panama garrisons immediately to their full strength.

On last October 31, the Army had 139,763 enlisted men, not including those in the Philippines, and 11,943 officers. The present bill would provide for 12,000 officers in all.

Slight Progress Made.

Calling attention to decreased appropriations for seacoast defense since the World War, the House Appropriations Committee reported:

"So little progress has been made that conditions generally have become extremely disturbing. Because there is a lack of everything —heavy guns, light guns, antiaircraft guns, fire control, mine defenses, etc., the committee feels that we should no longer neglect this important element of our defense team."

Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, a committee member, opened debate with new demands for adequate coastal defense, including air bases in Alaska. He emphasized that "some very illuminating and helpful information, a great deal of it, of necessity, off he record," had been placed before the committee by the Western commanders.

It is unusual for Appropriations Committee hearings to be expurgated, but yesterday's volume had only asterisks marking the highly confidential details unfolded by the officers in super-executive sessions.

Recommending $45,540,177 for airplanes, including $10,689,786 in contract authorizations, the bill boosted that allowance by $16,038,655 over the current year.

Alhtough the War Department had insisted on being allowed to proceed with its 800 planes a year program, the committee decided that if another 565 planes were provided and delivered in 1937-38 there would be a total of 2,214 delivered between Juy 1933, and July, 1938, "or 566 more than the 1,648 quota." The committee reported lack of housing facilities in dismissing consideration of the department's recommended 2,320-plane quota.

5,000 Added to Guard.

In jumping the National Guard's allotment up $4,232,133, to $37,856,156, the bill provided for 5,000 more officers and men to bring its total strength to 200,000. Nearly $1,000,000 more would be available for modernizing half the Guard's field artillery pieces, to provide 50 more observation planes, and to pay for more armory caretakers and a larger gas and oil allowance for armory drills.

"When the Appropriations Committee gets through its program," Blanton said on the House floor, "if Congress backs it, the United States is going to be adequately prepared."

Blanton visited Hawaii during the recess, and came back urging that the War and Navy bills this year not be cut below last year's record $1,000,000,000 total. This was considered significant, even before the Appropriations Committee took up the legislation, as Blanton's nickname on Capitol Hill has long been "Watchdog of the Treasury."

The Appropriations sub-committee also had ben reminded by Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, that "Asia is resounding to the tramp of marching men," and that while they were far from the United States shores, "it is unwise to neglect the lessons of our past experience."

Sen. Pittman's Japanese Foreign Policy Speech Smacks of International Window-Breaking.

By Franklyn Waltman

PERHAPS there was some justification for Senator Key Pittman's belligerent speech on Japanese foreign policy, perhaps he was provoked by Japanese spokesmen, but what good is accomplished by a performance which smacks of international window-breaking?

Militarists and ardent advocates of a strong national defense, of course, along with those who see a Yellow Peril around every corner, will like the speeches delivered to the Senate by Senators Pittman and J. Hamilton Lewis. They should like them because these remarks are supplying the motive power for the passage of the largest national defense appropriations in the peace-time history of the country.

The objective of the two speakers, as far as it is visible to the naked eye, was to point out the necessity for increased national defense needs. As Senator Pittman was speaking, the House Appropriations Committee reported out a bill containing in excess of $375,000,000 for the Army, with emphasis on strengthening that military branch in the West.

Shortly there will come forth an appropriation bill for the Navy, bringing the total for national defense, as estimated in the budget, up to the gigantic sum of more than $937,000,000, or $400,000,000 greater than the sum actually spent for that purpose in the year which ended last June 30. This sum, in good part, will go for ships, guns, fortifications and ammunition that will be obsolete within a short period.

And this is just the beginning. Ships built this year are more expensive—if not as useless—as Passamaquoddy and Grand Coulee dams, because next year a permanent charge must be added to the budget, to pay men to operate them.

In addition, the result of such national defense expenditures, along with such inflammatory speeches as that delivered by Senator Pittman, will be to give the military party in Japan, if not also elsewhere, a strong talking point to urge greater expenditures in their own country. Then two or three years hence we shall see another peril in the Far East and start out afresh to make our national defenses "adequate," to no end except an increasingly burdensome budget.

Senator Pittman's criticism of the Japanese furnishes an apt chronological illustration of how such things work. Some weeks ago Senator Pittman was quoted in a dispatch from his home State as assailing Japanese policy and warning that the Nipponese would soon tramp through the United States if we were not prepared.

The Japanese Ambassador here openly gave the Pittman remarks a "horse laugh" and was quoted as urging the American people not to pay any attention to the chairman of their Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which was not so diplomatic. The Tokyo foreign office expressed its pain over the whole incident, while the Japanese press cited the incident as a demonstration of how Americans feel about Japan—which many Americans do not.

Then a Japanese journalist or two tossed a few more faggots on the fire, and now Senator Pittman comes back at the Japanese. The Tokyo foreign office expresses incredulity, and the Japanese press—even before Senator Pittman spoke—gives his remarks a big play. The next act in the drama will come when the Japanese military uses the entire incident as a reason for greater expenditures for the army and navy.

More than ordinary significance was attached to Senator Pittman's speech, because he is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, a potent force in the formulation of American foreign policy. Many foreign correspondents here have difficulty in understanding how Senator Pittman could make such a speech without Administration approval.

In order to clarify the situation, Secretary of State Cordell Hull found it necessary to take the embarrassing step of disavowing any responsibility for the speech. Even then, because the Secretary, in an apparent effort not to offend the Senator, hinted that the latter was entitled to his point of view, some think that, after all, perhaps this Government does feel that way.

All of which goes to make more difficult Secretary Hull's already thorny task of trying to get some sanity back into world relations. Nor did it contribute an iota to solution of the Far Eastern problem, which springs in major part from the economic condition, first of the Japanese, and, secondly, of the Chinese. Screaming at the Japanese in no way relieves that pressure on those people, nor does it make the Chinese any better equipped to withstand Nipponese pressure on them.

An undertaking with constructive potentialities is the idea which has been projected by the Administration—and it is still in an ideal stage, although several Latin-American governments have been discreetly sounded out—of a Pan-American peace conference. The objective would be to consolidate the Western Hemisphere nations, so that they would act as a group in seeking to promote world peace. President Roosevelt, in his "message on the state of the Union," spoke as though such a consolidation had taken place, and that he had been elected as spokesman.

And speaking of things foreign, Joseph H. Baird, United Press correspondent, is back after more than two years in Moscow, weighing 25 pounds more than when he left, thus effectively disposing of rumors of famine and starvation in Russia— at least among foreign correspondents.

'Dictatorship' New Deal Aim, Knox Declares

He Calls on Business Men to Fight to Retain System of Free Enterprise.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 10.—Col. Frank Knox, in a blanket attack on the New Deal, tonight likened government under the present Administration to the governments under Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler.

In a speech prepared for delivery before the Manufacturers and Bankers Club—his second address of the day in Philadelphia—the Chicago publisher charged that "New Dealers are determined to gain possession for themselves of the system of free enterprise that has been built up in this country."

"But wholly without shame," he declared, "the New Dealers stand before us and tell us—'This is a people's Government.'

"What people's Government? The American people's?

"Not unless Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler are maintaining 'people's government.' Not unless the government of every other dictator in the world's history was a people's government. * * *

Calls Upon Business.

He warned that "Business men must get into politics or get out of business," and repeated his statement in his afternoon address before the Republican League of Pennsylvania, that he was not in the political campaign for "selfish interests."

"Somebody has got to make this fight," he said. "It is of no concern to me who heads the Republican ticket, but it is concern of mine to arouse the Republican Party. The fight must be won."

He described the New Deal as "sloshing through the mire."

Georgia Vote Requested.

Atlanta, Feb. 10 (AP).—President Roosevelt's Georgia campaign manager today formally requested Gov. Talmadge's State Democratic executive committee to call a Presidential preference primary.

Marion Allen, the Roosevelt manager, sent his request to Chairman Hugh Howell by messenger as the campaign committee of 28 met in a downtown hotel to start actively the drive for the President's renomination and re-election.

The messenger returned with Howell's reply, which read in part:

"You and those you represent today should come back to the Democratic Party; come back to the Constitution of the United States, under which this country was settled and has grown to be great; come back to the Democratic platform of 1932; come back to good, old-fashioned honesty in government and repudiate, as will be done in November, the New Deal theorists, crack-pots, Socialists and Communists, as represented by Wallace, Tugwell, Felix Frankfurter, Zimmerman and others of their kind."

Allen said:

"The chairman's answer is no answer at all.

"It would appear that the State committee will not conduct a primary and probably means that the committee won't even be called to discuss the matter."

Delegates Listed.

A White House conference yesterday between Postmaster General James A. Farley and Culbert Olson, State chairman of California, resulted in the selection of a tentative slate of names for posts as delegates to the Democratic national convention, Farley said yesterday.

In the anteroom to the President's office the two labored yesterday for some time over a group of names, Farley said, which were submitted to the President.

Interest attaches to the announcement of the names of the delegates because the EPIC (End Poverty in California League) recently delivered an ultimatum to the President to choose a delegation predominantly EPIC.

The fight is particularly between Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, the California national chairman, and the EPIC group, which challenged McAdoo's leadership. EPIC compiled a list of 128 names. At least 30 of the delegation were to be EPICs. Senator McAdoo and others have made their own recommendations. California sends 48 members to the national convention, with 44 votes.

Senators Told Of Fund Pleas By Navy League

Shipowners Were Solicited, Is Testimony; Steel Heads Members.

By the Associated Press.

Efforts of the Navy League to rehabilitate its finances through the solicitation of those who would benefit commercially in a big Navy and big merchant marine were detailed yesterday before the Senate Munitions committee.

From documentary evidence and the testimony of League officials, the committee drew this information:

That although barring shipbuilders from its membership, the League actively sought contributions from ship owners on a "tonnage basis."

Big Names in League.

That men prominent in the steel industry, including Charles M. Schwab and Eugene Grace, of Bethlehem Steel, were members of the League. Lists of life members and periodic supporters included John J. Raskob, former Democratic National chairman, and "a miscellaneous group of Du Ponts." The "miscellaneous group" included Alfred J. du Pont, A. Felix du Pont, and Miss Evalina du Pont.

That secret files of the Navy's General Board relating to the Washington Arms Limitation Conference were thrown open to William H. Gardiner, then president of the League, who was opposing the Naval limitation treaty of 1930.

That the League maintained a constant effort to achieve the publication of "big Navy" news releases in the hope of influencing editorial policy and thereby the votes cast in Congress.

Picturesque proposals for courses of action were brought into the record with the reading of letters written League officials by Harold C. Washburn, a solicitor of contributions, who used the title of executive secretary, with the knowledge but not the entire approval of League officers.

"Crack Down" on Churches.

One communication asked if the "strategic time" had not arrived for the League to "crack down on the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America" and expose "an interlocking directorate of church organizations, Socialists and even Communists."

Another reported a rumor that early in the Roosevelt Administration there was a plan to restrict naval expenditures and suggested that league officials intercede with Rexford G. Tugwell, Prof. Raymond Moley and Lewis Douglas, then director of the budget.

"That was stuff out of Mr. Washburn's head," snapped Nelson Macy, president of the league. "He was always making suggestions. We kept him in New York, where we thought he would do as little damage as possible. He was always doing irrational things."

Chamber Officer Welfare Speaker

Money for the betterment of social welfare conditions, whether collected in the form of taxes or given through the Community Chest, comes from business, according to Morris Edwards, of the United States Chamber of Commerce. Edwards spoke yesterday on "Social Procedure in Modern Business," at the sixth of a series of lectures for volunteers in social work being held under the auspices of the Council of Social Agencies.

Describing efforts of the Administration to work out a plan for social security in old age as "amateurish," Edwards said that many of the big business firms of the country had already in effect a balanced, well developed and soundly financed system of old age pensions. Under the new law, he said, these probably would be scrapped.

Three-Man Board May Govern FAA

By the Associated Press.

Although a new Federal alcohol administrator was nominated yesterday, Administration sources predicted a bill will be introduced in the Senate this week which would alter the job he is to take over.

President Roosevelt named Willford S. Alexander, of Meriden, Conn., as administrator to succeed Franklin C. Hoyt, of New York, who resigned recently.

The new bill would remove the FAA from supervision of the Treasury Department and place a three-man board in charge instead of the single administrator.

The old FACA, made powerless by the Supreme Court's NRA decision, had been an independent board. Former Administrator Joseph H. Choate, jr., and Secretary Morgenthau objected to placing the new FAA under Treasury guidance. Hoyt repeated these objections.

Alexander has been prominent in American Legion and banking circles in Meriden for many years. He resigned recently as president of a bank.

Japan a Threat, Pittman Says

policy toward China and toward our Government with relation to China," he said.

Pittman said the Monroe Doctrine did not give to the United States the right of conquest. He added that there is a Monroe doctrine applicable in the Far East. He quoted the pact of Washington in which the integrity of China was guaranteed.

The Senator continued by quoting Vice Admiral Takahashi as warning that if the United States did not renounce its naval policy "aimed at expansion and protection of her foreign trade," the Japanese cruising radius would have to be expanded. He quoted the Japanese officer as suggesting that the United States stick to national defense.

"He commands in language that cannot be misunderstood," Pittman said, "that we abandon our naval policy, refrain from expanding our commerce in China, and cease the protection of our foreign commerce. The command is accompanied with the threat that if we do not yield to his demands, Japan will increase its fleet and fortify its islands.

"Is there any doubt as to the meaning of this threat? We are warned that the admiral intends that we shall be unable to protect our commerce in the west Pacific by reason of the overwhelming Japanese fleet. The admiral should qualify his statement, lest some might be led to believe that it includes our commerce and our relations with the Philippine Islands.

"Never in the history of modern times has such an undiplomatic, arrogant and impertinent statement been volunteered by one holding such a position. * * *

"Of course, Congress will not be bulldozed into the abandonment of our national defense, the protection of our legitimate foreign trade, or our commerce with China, a friendly nation that is at peace with us, and the rest of the world."

Propaganda Is Charged.

Pittman accused "Japanese propagandists" of attempting to persuade peace-loving people of this Nation to "restrain the proper action of our Government."

Referring to the Government's neutrality policy, the Senator said:

"The United States does not intend to surrender the freedom of the seas, and recognizes no jurisdiction in any government on the high seas beyond the 3-mile limit in time of peace.

"The pending neutrality legislation, moreover, expressly reserves and reaffirms all of its rights under international law even in time of war. Foreign governments may be warned that any restrictions that the United States may see fit to put upon its citizens in time of war will not constitute any warrant for illegal treatment of our citizens by foreign governments, nor deprive our Government of the right to take any action it sees fit, voluntarily, on behalf of its citizens."

Returning to peace treaties, Pittman continued:

"We have a right to worry over the violation of peace treaties. We know that there are two ways of protecting our peace: One is through the respect for and obedience to peace treaties, and the other is through a sufficient Navy and air force. We prefer the former method of maintaining peace.

"I deeply regret that some of our greatest peace advocates and peace societies, who have given so much to obtaining the execution of these peace treaties, are incomprehensibly silent when they are openly and ruthlessly violated and their instrumentalities challenged."

The Senator quoted at considerable length a recent address by Prof. Grover Clark, of the Department of History and Political Science, before the National Committe eon the Cause and Cure of War.

Peace Machinery Failed.

He quoted Clark as saying:

"The peace machinery did not do that for which it was created simply because we were not sufficiently determined to make it work. * * * Truly, we of the West, by our failure to use the peace machinery when the situation cried out for its use, and by our continued dealing with the Japanese government as though it were a thoroughly dependable and honorable member of international society, have demonstrated that our desire for peace is of the lips only, and our machinery for securing peace is a castle in the clouds of Spain."

Pittman concluded:

"It is my purpose to continue to give my support to the maintenance of respect for and obedience to peace treaties and the enactment of legislation that will tend to keep us out of war without the surrender of any of our international rights, but until the time arrives when there is universal respect for and obedience to peace treaties, I favor and will support the construction and maintenance by the United States of naval and air forces that will be sufficient to protect our citizens, those dependent upon us, and their legal rights."

Senator Lewis, in following Pittman on the floor, drew applause from the galleries with the statement that "the real defense of this country lies in its ability to show before the whole world that we contemplate no quarrel with any people, but that if there be any who contemplate a quarrel with us, we are ready to resist the advance."

In building up his argument of a possibility of an alliance between Japan and Russia, Lewis pointed to the size of the Japanese navy and of the Russian army.

Commenting on the Pittman speech, Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War, said, in a statement:

"Senator Pittman advocates, in effect, building up of our naval and air forces to a point where we can cross the Pacific and fight Japan for the sake of our investments in China. I cannot imagine a more unpopular cause to die for."

Japan Withholds Comment.

Tokyo, Feb. 10 (AP).—A Foreign Office spokesman said today the Japanese government would "refrain from all comment" for the present on the speech delivered in the United States Senate by Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"It is incredible such a responsible man as the Chairman of the Senate's Foreign Relations Committee would make such a speech criticizing a friendly nation," the spokesman said.

The spokesman also said there was no justification for the statement by Chairman Pittman that he hoped the signatories of the nine-power treaty would "give consideration" to Japanese activities in China as soon as Europe is stabilized.

The spokesman said the Japanese government holds that nothing contained in the nine-power pact nor anything Japan has done in Manchuria or China gives the other signatories of the treaty the right to review Japan's action.

2 Hunted Here After Ballston Bank Robbery

Net Is Spread for Armed Pair Who Fled to City With $2,000 Loot.

Two heavily armed bandits who yesterday afternoon held up the Old Dominion Bank of Ballston, Va., at the point of a sawed-off shotgun and escaped with more than $3,000 in cash were believed to be at large in Washington last night.

Equipped with machine guns, specist squads of detectives and police searched the city for the men after their abandoned automobile had been found on C street, near Nineteenth street northwest, less than an hour after the daylight holdup.

The robbery occurred about 1:30 p. m., when the bandits drove up to the curb in front of the one-story, red brick building and walked inside, where Cameron R. Dye, cashier, was talking to Mrs. Harriett Thompson, a client, who had brought $20 to deposit.

Brandishing the shotgun, the bandits ordered Dye to put up his hands, and then bound and gagged him. As one of the pair guarded Mrs. Thompson, the other scaled the top of the cashier's cage and rifled the money drawers, putting the bills and coins in a sack.

Director Enters.

At the height of the robbery, Harry W. Cuppett, hardware merchant and a director of the bank, entered with two $20 bills, for which he wanted change. As the door slammed shut he saw the wicked looking gun.

"What's going on here?" he demanded.

"I've got a good idea," replied Cuppett.

One of the bandits snatched the bills from Cuppett's hand, and forced him to sit in a trash basket.

"That's not good enough yet," he snarled.

Cuppett was forced to lie on the floor while the robbers completed their job.

"Don't worry," one of the men told her.

"We don't hurt ladies, and we don't take their money."

The men left the bank and leaped into their automobile, driving away at breakneck speed.

Workers See Them.

They shouted at Mrs. Engel, and drove away just as Welburn Howell came out of a filling station he operates across the highway.

"Stop," yelled Howell, pursuing the automobile. He got the license number before the bandits had sped away.

A lookout was broadcast to all Washington police scout cars to stand by for the robbers, who were believed headed for Georgetown.

Evidently the bandits crossed the Potomac by Highway Bridge. Their crippled auto wheezed along until it came to the spot where it was found. Across the street members of the Twenty-ninth Army Transport were at work breaking ice and shoveling snow.

They told police later they saw two men leap from the automobile and run toward Virginia avenue. A few minutes later they went to the car, where they found the sawed-off shotgun. When police arrived they took the shotgun to headquarters along with the battered car.

For several hours detectives, armed with tear gas bombs and machine guns, searched for the bandits.

They operated with the hasty descriptions of the gunmen in mind. One was described as being about 50 years old, stocky, roughly clad and of rough appearance. The other was said to be 25 to 28 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 140 pounds in weight, wearing an old, dirty gray coat and a tattered brown cap.

In the abandoned automobile police found a notebook, a letter, the contents of which they did not divulge, and a cap.

"We'll ferret these men out if they're in Washington," said Capt. Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, who has ordered his men to concentrate on taking the robbers into custody.

Police last night announced that the automobile used by the robbers had been stolen from a repair shop in Rosslyn. It had been left there for repair of a bent front axle. Police said this explained why the automobile seemed out of control at times and was probably the reason the men abandoned it so quickly.

George F. Cook, president of the bank, said last night it would be some time before the exact loss is known. The bank is protected by insurance. Two Department of Justice agents interveiwed Dye late yesterday for further information which may lead to the capture of the robbers.

"I was scared and surprised when the men didn't hurt me," said Mrs. Thompson last night.

"It happened so quickly I hadn't time to think," asserted Dye.

"Of course I was frightened," Cuppett remarked. "I did the only thing I could under the circumstances and that was what the robbers told me."

Statler Heiress' Estate at Stake As Trial Opens

3 Testify as Local Man Fights for Approval of Wife's Purported Will.

By the Associated Press.

Carthage, N. C., Feb. 10.—A jury was selected and a purported will of Mrs. Elva Statler Davidson, leaving her estate to her husband, H. Bradley Davidson, jr., put into the records today as the court battle over her $560,000 share of the Statler hotel millions was begun in Superior Court here.

Arrayed against each other in the litigation are Davidson, 40-year-old Washington and Pinehurst sportsman, and heirs of the late E. M. Statler. The heirs contend Davidson "virtually drove" his young bride of little more than a month into making the will, two weekrs before she was found dead under strange circumstances at the Davidsons' Pinehurst home last February.

Preliminary motions and selection of the jury, composed largely of farmers, consumed the greater part of the day, and only three witnesses were heard.

2 Teachers Heard.

These were Livingston Hall, an assistant professor of law at Harvard University; Miss Victoria L. Mercer, secretary to Prof. W. Barton Leach, of the Harvard Law School, and Leach, who drew the document upon which Davidson's claim is based.

Hall and Miss Mercer witnessed Mrs. Davidson's signature to the document and were called by Davidson's attorneys in offering it in evidence to identify it and their signatures.

With this done, Davidson's attorneys rested his case. J. M. Broughton, of counsel for the caveators, protested, however, that Leach, who also signed the bill, should be called.

One of the contentions of the caveators is that Davidson had Leach's aid in influencing Mrs. Davidson to make the will.

Denies She Was Moody.

During questioning of Leach, Broughton asked if Miss Statler had not consulted a psychiatrist some time prior to her marriage on January 3, 1935. Leach said he did not know and in reply to another question denied that Miss Statler appared to him to be moody or abnormally temperamental.

There was only a handful of spectators at the opening of court.

Davidson sat with his attorneys and Miss Isabella Baer, of Minneapolis, with counsel for the caveators. Miss Baer was Mrs. Davidson's roommate at Radcliffe College and was named executrix in an earlier will. She is a caveator along with Mrs. Katherine Morgan Statler, of Tucson, Ariz., guardian for 4-year-old Joan Marie Statler, a foster-niece of Mrs. Davidson, and Ellsworth Statler, of England, who like Mrs. Davidson was an adopted child of the hotel magnate.

Ex-Bootlegger Asserts He Wasn't Near Home of Liggett.

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Feb. 10.—A claim to a barbershop alibi and six crisp words of denial were Isadore Blumenfield's defense today to the State's charge he murdered Publisher Walter Liggett.

As a thronged courtroom watched, the former bootlegger took the witness stand in his own defense and replied to his counsel's question whether he had anything to do with the slaying:

"Not a thing in the world."

A moment later, queried as to whether he was in the neighborhood of the Liggett apartment December 9, when a machine gunner killed the newspaperman, the witness responded:

"No, sir."

Blumenfield's own account of his movements the afternoon of December 9 was a virtual repetition of that of previous defense witnesses, who placed him in a downtown barbershop from 5:30 or 5:35 p. m. to 6:30, or 6:35 p. m. Liggett was killed at 5:41 p. m.

About that time, the witness testified, he was discussing the Bruno Hauptmann case with a manicurist in the barbershop.

After being picked up by police shortly after the assassination, Blumenfield testified, he gave them a statement and demanded to be taken before Mrs. Liggett. She had named him as the slayer to police almost at the same time. His request was not granted, the witness said.

2 Army Fliers Unhurt In Emergency Landing

Two Army fliers, both enlisted men, escaped injury yesterday in a forced landing on the frozen surface of Broad Creek, near Fort Washington, Md. Motor failure forced the landing. The plane nosed over, breaking the propeller, the only damage.

Corpl. John Way was the pilot, and a Private Ernest, his passenger. Both are stationed at Bolling Field.

to shore for us fellows," Beaulieau said. "Both had plenty of nerve. They took a 20-foot log to aid them in doing this."

Fitzsimmons told of how the ice they had been exploring broke away from shore.

"There was 15 feet of water clear," he said. "If we'd known what we had to go through, we'd have jumped in and tried to swim it then."

The plight of the youths had first been seen by Hudson Ellis, former Brewster highway surveyor, who saw their predicament through field glasses.

Harbor Springs, Mich., Feb. 10 (AP). Clayton Brown, 25-year-old Charlevoix fisherman, lost with two others since their boat was swept into Lake Michigan aSturday, walked into an Indian cabin at Goodheart, isolated fishing village, tonight.

Brown told Walter George, the Indian whose cabin he reached, badly frozen and semi-conscious, that his father-in-law, Claude eBardsley, 51, and Earl Cunningham, Coast Guardsmen, were dead in the rowboat in which they drifted from Charlevoix.

Te boat lodged against an ice floe 7 miles off shore early today, Brown said, and he spent the entire day working his way across the ice.

A storekeeper at Goodheart said George's cabin was on the lake shore beneath a high bluff, and it would be impossible to move Brown without aid.

A Coast Guard crew from the Charlevoix station was reported on its way here to bring in the boat.

Brown said one of the men died Sunday night and the other just before he started across the ice. "I decided I'd rather die walking," he was quoted as saying.

2 of 11 Reach Safety.

Paducah, Ky., Feb. 10 (AP).—Two of the 11 men marooned on a Government workboat in the Ohio River 35 miles above here crossed the half-mile of ice cutting them off from the banks in safety Sunday, the U. S. Engineers' office here learned today. They were Harley Loven, 29, of Karnak, Ill., and Truman Windhorst, 28, of Joppa, Ill.

Stopped Hearts Started Beating By New Needle

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 10.—A new electric needle, which restarts hearts that have been stopped by shock or certain forms of disease or electrocution and retsores to life persons officially "dead," was announced here tonight.

As an example of its possibilities, the death of "Roxy," Samuel Rothafel, was cited. Had the new needle been available soon after his heart stopped, the radio entertainer might be alive today. He would still have his heart ailment, but would be no worse than before an untimely stoppage cut short his life so abruptly.

The new needle was announced by Dr. Albert S. Hyman, speaking at the fifth Carolina Greenwood lecture, held jointly by the section on aviation medicine of the Medical Department, United States Naval Service, of the Third District, and of the Witkin Foundation for the Study and Prevention of Heart Disease.

Pacemaker Needle.

This needle is a development of the "pacemaker" needle, announced by Dr. Hyman about three years ago. The new one uses a different kind of electrical current to start hearts. With all equipment, it is only the size of a hand flashlight, and runs on a single dry-cell battery. The old needle required 40 pounds of equipment.

In cases of angina pectoris and coronary troubles, the types of heart disease which kill many leaders of business, industry and government, the new needle offers its best opportunities.

Between 150 and 200 cases of these two types of heart disease, Dr. Hyman said, have been retsored to life after the heart had stopped.

The needle and current do not cure the trouble. They make a heart start beating again, and in many cases, the heart once retsored, keeps on going for months or years.

Death by Shock.

This quality of the heart has been thoroughly proved in cases of death by shock, particularly of the person who stands on a wet bathroom floor, reaches for the electric light fixture and receives a fatal shock. This needle and its predecessor have restored to life nearly 1,000 persons in the United States who "died" in that fashion either of electrical or other causes.

Angina and coronary troubles are in a different class, Dr. Hyman said. Yet many of them resemble electric shock deaths to some extent, in that chronic heart trouble momentarily gets so bad it stops beating, without destroying the heart's ability, provided it can be restarted after the momentary stoppage.

The restart must be made within a few minutes after official "death."

The needle is thrust into the right auricle of the heart. There it delivers a peculiar kind of current to the heart, designed to stimulate the organ's natural physioelectrical impulses to beat.

Jellico Left $65,000 Estate, Will Shows

London, Feb. 10 (AP).—Lord Jellicoe, outstanding British naval figure of the World War, who died November 20, 1935, left an estate of £13,000—$65,000—it was revealed today.

His naval books and documents go to his son and heir, Patrick Viscount Brocas. Admiral Jellicoe's decorations, swords and honors, and a gold watch given him by the late King, are to descend as family heirlooms.

Police Chief Slain At Headquarters

South River, N. J., Feb. 10 (AP).—Police Chief Charles Eberwein, 53, was shot and killed at police headquarters tonight by an assailant who then critically wounded himself.

The chief's slayer was Jacob Rutkowski, about 50, a tavern keeper, who was due to have a hearing tonight on a charge of selling illicit liquor. He was awaiting grand jury action on a similar charge, made against him some time ago.

Eberwein was talking to Willard F. Griffiths, an agent of the State alcoholic beverage commission, when Rutkowski entered police headquarters. Griffiths was one of the agents who raided Rutkowski's place.

The tavern keeper drew a revolver, pointed it at Eberwein and shot him through the heart. Then he opened fire on the police desk clerk, John J. Quinn, jr., who ducked. Another bullet missed Police Commissioner Matty Zaleski, who was waiting in the room.

Rutkowski then put the revolver under his chin and pulled the trigger.

Aviator Sights Plane Missing Over a Month

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 10.—The Army pursuit plane in which Lieut. John T. Helms disappeared December 30 was reported found today by a sharp-eyed transport pilot who also found the wreckage of a lost airliner in 1929.

Capt. George Rice, commercial airline veteran, said he positively identified Lieut. Helms' plane while on a regular flight today. It is lying crumpled in the San Bernardino Mountains near Big Bear, he said.

Capt. Rice located the airliner that crashed on Mount Taylor, near Gallup, N. Mex., killing eight persons.

As soon as he landed here, word was flashed to the Army base at March Field and Lieut. Col. John H. Pirie, post commandant, sent ground searching parties into the mountains, about 60 miles from the field.

In Philadelphia, Toby Wing, screen actress appearing there on the stage, brust into tears at the news. Miss Wing said she had known Lieut. Helms for several years, but that they could not be considered formally engaged.

"I just know he's still alive," she exclaimed.

Capt. Rice could not see Lieut. Helms' body, but it was feared at March Field it would be found in or near the plane. If this is true, Capt. Rice would be eligible for the $500 reward offered by March Field.

Lieut. Helms disappeared on a routine flight from San Francisco to March Field. His plane was last seen, apparently in distress, near Bakersfield, Calif., about 100 miles north of Big Bear.

Long's Widow Assumes Duties As U. S. Senator

Reception Precedes Oath; to Continue Policies of Her Husband.

Mrs. Rose McConnell Long, of Louisiana walked down the green-carpeted aisle of the Senate chamber at high noon yesterday to be sworn in to complete the term of her husband, the late Huey P. Long.

Mrs. Long, a tall feather bobbing above the black hat that fitted closely over her red, bobbed hair, a corsage of orchids on her shoulder, marched to the dais on the arm of Senator John H. Overton, Louisiana Democrat, her husband's friend.

Outside the swinging cloakroom doors she had shaken hands with many of the men who had fought bitterly with her husband, and even with one whom Huey had sworn to "get," Senator Pat Harrison, Mississippi Democrat.

Garner Administers Oath.

Demure, smiling delightedly, excited, clad in mourning black silk except for a white edging at the throat, she took the oath administered by Vice President John Garner before a gallery packed in as tightly as the audiences Huey used to draw.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Arkansas Democrat and majority leader, smilingly nodded to her as she entered, but didn't shake hands. He, too, was a particular object of Huey's wrath in the days when the white-suited Emperor of the Bayous shook his fist skyward in the Senate and vowed to work for Robinson's defeat in Arkansas.

She returned to her seat with Senator Hattie F. Caraway, of Arkansas, the first woman elected to the Senate, and the two chatted happily, both privately and at a newsreel rehash of the proceedings.

Accompanied by Children

Her sons, Russell, who looks like his father, and Palmer, and her daughter, Rose, a Louisiana State University student of high rank, attended her during the long sessions before the 15 still photographers and 2 moveing-picture cameramen.

Mrs. Long told reporters she would continue the "share-the-wealth" program of her husband, and would "work for the cause of the farmer and of labor."

When reporters asked which of her husband's plans she would further, she hesitated. Rose, the daukhter, broke in quickly:

"No one can state his aims better than he did. As time goes on people will better realize and appreciate his work."

Mrs. Long was then asked about the future of the share-the-wealth campaign. Again she paused, and the daughter said:

"The movement will go on."

The new Senator Long said she didn't know whether she would make a speech, as "I've never made a speech."

Around the large photograph of Huey Long on her desk were baskets of flowers and telegrams expressing good wishes.

Widow's Appropriation Made.

The usual appropriation to a Senator's widow, $10,000, has been sent through Congress and now awaits the President's signature in a deficiency bill. Her salary will be the usual $10,000 a year.

She was accompanied to the floor by Gov. James A. Noe of Louisiana, who appointed her to the position. The late Gov. O. K. Allen, who died suddenly recently, was to have had the job.

Now she will be up in April for formal election to fill Huey Long's unexpired term, ending next January, and the State central Democratic committee has already chosen her as the nominee for the general election, which is tantamount to election.

When Vice President Garner concluded administering the oath, with the words:

"* * * and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter; so help me God," the voice of the second woman Senate member came through in a soft and audible drawl:

"I do."

Then as she left the chamber, she remarked:

Powers Ready For Ship Limit Of 35,000 Tons

Maximum Insisted on by America Is Expected to Be Accepted.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 10.—An agreement by the four-power naval conference on a 35,000-ton maximum for battleships was authoriatively called "probable" tonight.

The United States had insisted upon this maximum, while France and Italy demanded a smaller one.

The technical committee today began drafting sections of a proposed new treaty dealing with all other types of vessels. The surprise turn of events on the battleship issue was the result of energetic conciliatory efforts by Viscount Monsell, first lord of the British admiralty, and Norman H. Davis, head of the American Delegation.

A private meeting of heads of delegations was called for tomorrow by Monsell to discuss a formula for agreement on battleships. This, it was believed, will be ready for adoption by the technical committee Wednesday. The treaty is expected to run for five to six years.

Limitation Drafted.

The committee is drafting the following limitations and definitions:

"Light surface craft," section A 10,000 tons, 8-inch guns as maximums, with a building holiday during the length of the treaty. This is the present large cruiser class. Section B, 10,000 tons, 6-1-inch guns as maximums, but during the agreement the type shall be limited to 8,000 tons. This is the present small cruiser.

Section C, 3,000 tons and 6.1-inch guns as maximums. The existing type destroyer of 1,850 tons with 5.1-inch guns was eliminated.

A special section of light surface craft—minor combatant vessels of 2,000 tons with 6 1-inch guns and 20 knots as maximums,, but with no torpedoes—was allowed.

France to Compromise.

The powers can call ships of the fourth section what they please.

Aircraft carriers were limited to 22,000 tons and 6.1-inch guns, submarines to 2,000 tons with 5.1-inch guns. There are no restrictions on auxiliary vessels.

French opposition to large battleships is so bitter that Viscount Monsell searched secretly over the week-end for a formula for continuing today. France took a sudden interest in talk of a compromise formula so the committee made quick progress when it met.

The formula will be worked in such a way as to preserve some of the French viewpoints on the size of battleships but will, it was authoritatively stated, set 35,000 tons as a maximum.

President Acts To Speed Ship Subsidy Bills

Hears Views of Deadlocked Officials; Moran Pushes Mail Pay Fight.

Seeking ship subsidy legislation at this session of Congress, the President yesterday called in representatives of the Postoffice and Commerce Departments in an effort to break a deadlock between these agencies over provisions of bills now pending.

Coincident with this development, demands that payments stop on 41 of the 42 existing ocean mail contracts were sent to Comptroller General J. R. McCarl by Representative Edward C. Moran, jr. (Democrat), of Maine.

McCarl following an earlier letter from Moran, had invited him to supply definite information to show the contracts were awarded in violation of the law, stating: "If you will advise me thereof the matter will be promptly examined into."

Moran, who helped lead the fight on the ship subsidy bill which narrowly passed the House last session, yesterday submitted 8 pages of information in response and replied: "I am sure you will agree with me in the general position that sound public policy does not permit continuation of any form of contracts let in violation of law."

Attending yesterday's White House conference, centering around the Copeland ship subsidy bill now pending in the Senate, were Postmaster General Farley, Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. M. Johnson, and Assistant Postmaster General Harlee Branch. After the conference Farley expressed hope that suitable legislation can be enacted this session.

Commerce and Postoffice officials each presented their side of the controversy over the Copeland bill. The Commerce Department is said to oppose Potsoffice proposals to deny Government aid to shipping companies which do not adhere to the proposed new Maritime Authority's plans. The agencies also differ over the length of time for adjustment of existing ocean mail contracts.

Representative Moran, who has a bill of his own for a long-range merchant marine program under Government supervision, in his letter to McCarl yesterday charged that 41 contracts "were let in violation of the law, and therefore payments thereon should be disallowed.

His action followed House approval of a $26,000,000 appropriation for payments under the contracts during the next fiscal year. Moran argued that the merchant marine act of 1928 required competitive bidding and the contracts contested were not awarded on that basis.

The steamship companies holding contracts, the legality of which is being considered by the Comptroller General, are:

Munson Steamship Co (receivership), Gulf Mail S. S. Co. (Munson), Export S. S. Corporation, American South African S. S. Line, Grace Lines, Eastern S. S. Secrecy Guards War Exercises As Fleet Sails

Sea Defenders Plan New Experimental Maneuvers; Press Is Barred.

By the Associated Press.

San Pedro, Calif., Feb. 10.—The United States fleet moved out today for battle exercises clothed in greater secrecy than any past movements of the Nation's sea defenders.

The exercises will continue five days off southern California. Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander in chief, aboard his temporary flagship, the dreadnaught New Mexico, gave no hint of their nature.

About 400 fighting airplanes were with the battle forces, including the squadrons aboard the carriers Lexington, Saratoga and Langley.

The main battle line comprised 11 dreadnaughts, with supporting lines of 12 heavy cruisers, 6 light cruisers, 8 heavy submarines and 28 destroyers.

It was indicated that Admiral Reeves will maneuver the fighting forces as a single high seas fleet unit, rather than the customary tactical exercise of dividing the vessels into two forces, each under command of a force commander in a problem embracing the search and combat functions of two fleets.

While secrecy was thrown over fleet movements by Admiral Reeves immediately after confidential maneuvers in the mid-Pacific last spring, in the regular monthly tactical exercises, information had been given out on the general nature of the problems involved.

In this month's battle exercises, no public hint of the problem involved has been permitted.

Usually, a four-day tactical exercise is held monthly, as a workout between forces of the fleet.

News photographers and correspondents have been barred from the tactical exercises, it being reported that the fleet was engaging in new experimental work, the nature of which must remain a strict naval secret.

Mrs. Dolbow, Suitor Convicted of Murder

Salem, N. J., Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Mrs. Marguerite Fox Dolbow and Norman Discroll were found guilty of first degree murder tonight in the death of the woman's husband, Harry Dolbow.

The jury gave no recommendation of life imprisonment in either case, and both defendants face death in the electric chair for the beating to death of Dolbow with a harrow axle.

The jury received the case at 8:24 p. m. and returned the verdict in two hours and ten minutes.

Cold Continues With No Relief Seen for City

Today to Be Fair, Mercury Staying Below Freezing; Low to Be 8 Degrees.

Washington was gripped by relentless, bitter cold yesterday, while the Weather Bureau predicted no immediate relief, asserting that temperatures would remain below freezing today.

A lusty northwest wind whipped across the snowdrifts and the ice-bound Potomac last night as officials said the mercury would sink to 8 degrees above zero before dawn, and climb slowly thereafter. Today will be fair, with temperature little changed from yesterday's readings. Yesterday's maximum of 24 was reached at 3:30 p. m.

Two persons fell on icy streets and fractured bones. Drivers of automobiles, now almost acclimated to the Arctic weather, were careful, and no major traffic mishaps were reported. Here and there fenders were dented and bumpers locked, but street car and bus service was nearly normal. Yesterday's low was 19 at 9 a. m. and at 6 p. m. yesterday it was 21.

A quick flood along the Potomac watershed would produce serious floods, comparable to the overflow in 1918, but scientists last night expressed the hope that when the thaw comes, it will be gradual, so that the river will keep within its banks.

In the parks late yesterday afternoon warmly-dressed men and women appeared on skiis, and speeded down white hillsides on sleds.

An army of men was busy on the streets and highways in an around Chicago, keeping open vital arteries of travel.

The Associated Press reported they labored in bitter cold to reach snowbound communities and isolated homes. They worked against time to restore railroad facilities and to clear highways for movement of badly needed supplies of coal, meat and milk.

In Minnesota at least 25 hamlets were cut off by drifts. The same was true of portions of Michigan, Utah, Wisconsin, Illinois and the Dakotas.

Watertownu, S. Dak., resembled an Eskimo village under 12 feet of snow. Dakota ranchers were forced to burn fence posts and hay. There has been no communication with the Marcus settlement of 200 in the historic Black Hills since last Monday. A searching party struggled through the snowdrifts.

Most rail systems, the Associated Press reported, resumed nearly normal operations.

Hagerstown, Md., reported high winds, which drifted snow 3 to 5 feet deep on secondary roads and isolated sections of Washington County. All the State road commission's snow plows were at work on main highways and snow-blocked roads. No main highways, however, were closed.

Deep snow drifts in Oakland, Md., caused officials to ask the dismissal of schools. School authorities were warned to have the pupils returned to their homes in buses before the drifts became too deep.

Man Convicted In Threat Note To Roosevelt

Former Army Officer Put on Probation After Jail Term Is Imposed.

Accused of sending a threatening letter to President Roosevelt, Ira ashein, who resigned a commission in the United States Army June 27, 1934, was tried, found guilty and sentenced, all within an hour, yesterday in the District Supreme Court. Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue sentenced Bashein to serve a term of from one to two years and then placed him on probation.

Bashein, 28 years old, resigned his commission while he was attached to a New York State unit of the Army. Shortly after he wrote a letter reading:

"I, West Point graduate, June, 1933, will bomb your quarters. Be careful.

"I, United States Military Academy, June, 1933, have been seeking job. Am desperate. Will commit desperate deed to secure economic security."

The letter was mailed to the President, police said.

In his own defense, Bashein said he was "so drunk" May 6, the date of the writing of the letter, he remembers nothing. He said he had nothing but the highest regard for the President. In April of last year the former officer obtained a job as an educational director in the CCC. Later he has been a foreman for a construction company, and on December 17, last year, while he was at liberty on bond, he was married.

Roosevelt Is Invited To 'Eviction' Party

New York, Feb. 10 (U.P.).—The following invitation has been sent to President Roosevelt and other high officials of the State and Nation:

"Mr. and Mrs. James P. Gilleeny and family, of 45-18 Middleburgh avenue, Sunnyside Gardens, Long Island, invite you to take part on the occasion of their eviction from their home. Sheriff William F. Brunner officiating for the Governor; Thomas I. Parkinson officiating for the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States."

Residents of Sunnyside Gardens have gone on a strike against paying any more installments on their houses because they consider mortgage rates excessive.

Money Bootlegging Holds 12 Italians

Genoa, Italy, Feb. 10 (A.P.).—Capt. Ferdinando Pesce, commander of the steamship Augustus, one of Italy's crack transatlantic liners, was arrested tonight with 11 others on charges of illicit currency exchange operations.

The dozen arrested include the purser of the Augustus, Benedetto Giacolone; Vittorio Merello, a co-director of the Banco Commerciale Italiana, and that bank's representative aboard the ship.

Fines which have already been levied against the 12 members of the so-called ring totaled 6,500,000 lire (the lira is worth about 8 cents), following the government's policy of fining "money bootleggers" to the extent of their operations.

Capt. Pesce's fine was 440,000 lire. The Augustus has been traveling between Italian and Latin-American ports.

New Deal Spurs Industry Gains, Says Secretary

Pay Rolls Up 122 Million Since 1933, Asserts Miss Perkins.

By the Associated Press.

Waterville, Me., Feb. 10.—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said tonight labor and business were on "a rising curve." She attributed the upsurge to Administration measures.

Secretary Perkins told a Colby College-Institute the Roosevelt Administration's recovery program was "proving successful" and "approximately 5,000,000 men and women who were without jobs in March, 1933, have since been returned to work in private industry."

"More than 4,000,000 others," she said, "have found work on PWA construction projects, in CCC camps, on State road work and on WPA jobs."

The December weekly pay roll for industries surveyed by the Labor Department, she said, was $122,000,000 larger than the weekly pay roll in March, 1933, when President Roosevelt took office, representing "an increase of more than 50 per cent from the low point of the depression."

Farm income for the first ten months of 1935 was more than a billion dollars greater, she said, than in the same period in 1933.

Miss Perkins listed gains by wage earners since March, 1933, as including unemployment compensation and old-age security embodied in the social security act, inauguration of labor boards to handle industrial disputes; greater co-operation between State and Federal labor departments, and development of the Federal employment service in co-operation with the States.

"While American wage earners have made great gains since March, 1933," she said, "production, farm income, profits and dividends have all shown a rising curve since then and banks, insurance companies and railroads are in a much stronger economic position.

"Administration measures to raise wages, shorten hours, improve farm prices, increase purchasing power and to aid the banks and railroads have been primarily responsible for improved conditions and indicate that the substantial progress already made will continue."

Directors Are Renamed By Telephone Company

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., at its annual meeting last night, re-elected these directors: William W. Everett, Robert V. Fleming, Edwin C. Graham, Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, John Poole, Harry L. Rust, jr., John Saul, Merle Thorpe, Philip O. Coffin, Marshall D. Sedam and Lloyd B. Wilson, of Washington, and Fred Levis, of New York.

Five More Slain In Syrian Riots Against French

'Gray Shirts' Victims as Disorders Increase; 25 Now Dead.

By the Associated Press.

Beirut, Syria, Feb. 10.—French authorities, seeking to crush the "Gray Shirt" Syrian Fascist movement, killed five more rioters today as the disorders spread to Deir-ez-zor on the Euphrates River.

The new casualties brought to 25 the number killed since the uprising, supervised by the Syrian National Party, started 23 days ago.

(In Paris, officials and members of Parliament expressed concern oer the disturbances. The Chamber of Deputies sub-committee on Syrian affairs visited Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin to ask him what the government intends to do to quiet the mandated territory and halt the bloodshed.)

Follow Leader's Arrest.

The continuing riots, whose most recent manifestations occurred at Deir-ez-zor and Damascus, follow the arrest of Anton Saadeh, Nationalist leader, and 39 prominent members of the party.

Charged with being members of the secret party which has failed to register under French law, the 39 were found innocent, but Saadeh received a sentence of six months' imprisonment. Police have admitted they have been unable to find any other definitely illegal acts on the part of the "Gray Shirts."

The party's membership, variously estimated from 4,000 to 15,000, encompasses only Syrians, but no religious lines have been drawn excluding Moslems, Christians or Jews. Members swear allegiance to a council of 12 and a leader in the plan to develop and improve the country.

The primary purpose of the Syrian Fascists is to throw off the French rule, set up under a mandate.

Outside Links Denied.

Germany and Italy have been reported interested in the movement against the French authorities, but an official investigation disclosed no confirmation for such reports. The party leaders have denied emphatically any connection with outside agents.

Syrian students, in sympathy with the nationalist movement, have struck repeatedly as the riots continued and have marched against authorities after some of their numbers have been imprisoned.

Invetsigation of the movement resulted in the removal of Emir Assad El-Ayoubi, Beriut chief of police, after the party used in pamphlet form an article on economic conditions written by the officer. The emir contended he had no idea of the use to which his article was to be put when he allowed it to be published.

Countess Barbara Weak, Given Blood Injections

London, Feb. 10 (U.P.).—Countess Kurt Reventlow von Haugwitz, the former Barbara Hutton, has received several blood tdansfusions because of pronounced weakness, it was learned tonight. The heiress to the Woolworth 5-and-10 millions is in a London hospital awaiting birth of her first child.

Barbara, one of the world's wealthiest women, married a Danish count, Kurt Reventlow von Haugwitz, after divorcing Prince Alexis Mdivani, who later was killed in an automobile accident. The countess is suffering from an anaemic condition.

French, Czechs Plan Defenses Against Nazis

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 10.—The work of strengthening central and eastern Europe's defenses against a possible Nazi attack went forward today with Pierre-Etienne Flandin, French foreign minister, conferring with Premier Milan Hodza, of Czechoslovakia.

Officials reported the two in complete agreement on a plan to assure Austria's independence and reinforce economic ties of Danubian nations. The talks will continue for at least three days.

Marshal Mikhail Toukatchevsky, of Soviet Russia, and Louis F. Maurin, minister of war, discussed means of applying the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact, which the Chamber of Deputies will discuss tomororw, preparatory to ratification.

Now Effective.

The treaty was signed May 2, 1935, by Pierre Laval, then French foreign minister, and Vladimir Potemkin, Russian ambassador to Paris. For all practical purposes it has been effective since then.

A report by Deputy Henry Torres favoring ratification, which comes before the chamber tomorrow, asserts the government is not required by law to obtain chamber ratification.

The treaty, he says, safeguards the interests of France and the peace of Europe within the framework of the League of Nations.

'Essential Segment.'

"It is an essential segment of the plan, mutually initiated by French and Soviet diplomacy," the report says, "to extend to all of eastern Europe a safeguard against the risks of the insufficiently protected collective guarantees so happily established by the Locarno agreements.

"This treaty is not a conclusion but a preface. It is not a summit but a base. It remains open to all the states of eastern Europe in accord with their will for peace. It can be replaced by other agreements in which it would be submerged."

Debate may touch on the charge yesterday by General Andre Niesset that Germany has moved 40,000 armed men into the demilitarized Rhineland zone.

Rome Denial of British Aid to Ethiopia Asked

London, Feb. 10 (A.P.).—Great Britain twice has called Italy's attention to reported broadcasts from Rome saying British officers are commanding Ethiopian troops, Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, told the House of Commons today.

The foreign office first broached the subject to the Italian ambassador here. Then the British ambassador to Rome was instructed six days ago to raise the question there and urge the Italian government to issue a denial.

Eden replied, "No, sir," when asked by a Communist member whether the British government intended to recognize the independence of Manchukuo.

Roosevelt Approves Bill To Repeal Control Acts

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt late yesterday signed the bill repealing the Bankhead cotton act, the Kerr-Smith tobacco act and the Warren potato control law.

Repeal of the three compulsory crop control acts was recommended to Congress just a week ago by the President with the explanation that they were "auxiliary" measures to the agricultural adjustment act killed by the Supreme Court.

Tangier Gets Tons of Food

bundles of food, but before it was all gone they discovered that the blimp was getting unruly. Some of the islanders, it turned out, had been letting go of the lnading lines to carry away food. The result was that the blimp had to take off with 100 pounds of flour still in the gondola.

Smiths Island, which like Tangier, has been icebound for more than two weeks, also was remembered by the Red Cross today. The Army bombers from Langley Field dropped part of their cargoes there.

Two Coast Guard cutters—the Sebago, out of Norfolk, with 5,000 pounds of Red Cross food, and the Dix, out of Curtis Bay, with 2,500 pounds, got near enough to Tangier today for the food to be brought across the ice.

Garey Arrives.

On the cutter Sebago was Maj. Enoch B. Garey, chief of the State police, who last Friday led the ill-fated expedition across the ice from Crisfield in an attempt to reach Tangier with 2,000 pounds of food.

State Trooper Wilbert V. Hunter, a member of the expedition, died of exposure on the trip. As a result of complaints, Gov. Harry W. Nice appointed a court of inquiry to investigate.

Maj. Garey said here today he will testify before the court in Baltimore Wednesday.

On the mainland, Maj. Garey has been severely criticized for pushing ahead on the ice when Eastern Shore natives warned him to turn back. These natives have said that the death of Sergt. Hunter, who left a wife and three children, was "needless and outrageous."

But on the islnad today Maj. Garey was hailed as a hero.

I came here today in an airplane piloted by Al Bennett. We took off from the ice-covered bay of Crisfield nad nosed up into a wind that made the wires of the ship whine from strain.

Looking down I saw what heretofore had been my conception of a polar sea. The ice was solid except for a narrow strip of channel, and this was dotted with ice floes. In between these floes bobbed thousands of ducks, undoubtedly having a hard time of it finding food.

A thousand feet in the air, the wind was tossing our little plane around madly. At least, so it seemed to me. Al Bennett merely grinned and continued on.

The first thing we sighted was the two Coast Guard cutters, the Sebago and the Dix. The Dix had reached a point where one could debark and walk across the ice to Tangier.

Flying over the island, Bennett volplaned toward Tangier's "airport"—a cleared football field in back of the high school. The field was a sea of slush and mud and when we landed a good part of it enveloped us and the plane.

Bennett and I walked to the Town Hall, followed by at least 300 children. I don't think I ever saw so many children in such a small community. Nor were they bashful children. They yelled at us, asking us whence we came and where we were going.

At the Town Hall, I talked to the Rev. R. A. Bailey, religious shepherd of the island and the local Red Cross representative.

"Conditions here," the Rev. Mr. Bailey said, "have not been exaggerated. The arrival of supplies here last week practically saved lives.

"We were completely out of sugar, lard, meat, butter, vegetables and fruit.

"This morning a man offered a flier $1 to bring him back a pound of butter."

The clergyman said the great need of the island now is fuel. Coal oil is used here to a large extent. There are only three drums of it left on the island.

Wood also has run out and since the island is virtually barren of trees, the mainland must be depended upon for fuel supply.

There are nine persons ill on the island, five suffering from pneumonia and four from grippe. None of them is in a critical condition. A physician and two nurses are in attendance, and shipments from the Red Cross have assured enough medical supplies.

It has been somewhat difficult to learn exactly how dangerous the food situation here has been. The stories told by the residents vary greatly.

One man said his larder was exhausted, but another scoffed when asked about the "famine." He pointed out Tangier had survived many a "freeze" before.

David S. Barry, Former Senate Official, Dead

1933 Sergeant-at-Arms Had Enviable Record as Newspaperman.

David Sheldon Barry, 77, former sergeant at arms of the Senate and former prominent newspaperman, died at his home, 1816 Jefferson place northwest, yesterday.

Born in Detroit, he was the son of James Richard and Elizabeth Cotter Barry.

He became a page in the Michigan Legislature in 1871, and four years later came to Washington as a page in the Senate.

After studying stenography at night school, he secured a position as clerk in the Treasury. Later he served in the Postoffice and Census bureaus in a similar capacity.

In 1879 he began his newspaper work as correspondent for the Detroit Post-Tribune. Following this he served in the Washington bureau of the Chicago Times, and as correspondent of the Detroit Evening News and the Detroit Evening Journal.

In 1889 he became chief of the Washington bureau of the New York Sun, after serving two years in the bureau.

Leaving Washington in 1904 to become editor of the Providence Journal, he returned in 1907 as the Journal's Washington correspondent, which position he held until 1919, when he became sergeant at arms of the Senate.

Due to an article which he wrote for the magazine Outlook, Barry was suspended from his post in February, 1933, and after a stormy debate in the Senate at a 3½-hour night session, he was dismissed from his position.

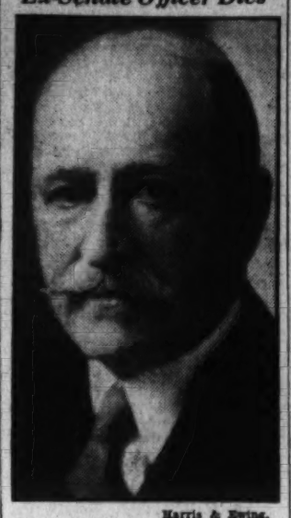
The article was interpreted as implying that on occasions some members of Congress had the habit of selling their votes.

From 1912 to 1916, Barry also served as director of publicity for the Republican national committee.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Cora Bonney Barry; two daughters, Mrs. Sevellon L. Brown, wife of the editor of the Providence Journal, and Mrs. Wilder D. Baker, wife of the Naval Attache at the American Embassy in London; two sons, Commander James R. Barry, U. S. N., and Maj. David S. Barry, jr., of the United States Marine Corps.

Barry was a member of the Metropolitan Club, the Chevy Chase Club, the National Press Club and the Gridiron Club.

Ex-Senate Officer Dies



Harris & Ewing.
DAVID S. BARRY.

John Feast, 76, Dies at Woodside

John Feast, retired Government worker and prominent Montgomery County citizen, died yesterday at his home at Woodside, Md., following a heart attack. He was 76.

Two years ago, Feast and his wife, Mrs. Catherine Serrin Feast, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. She is his only survivor.

Feast, who was born in Baltimore, came to Washington 54 years ago. He first worked in the Government Printing Office and later in the Pension Office, from which he was retired in 1928.

He had lived in Woodside for many years. One of the charter members of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department, he had served two years as its president and 12 years as vice president. In 1927 he was president of the county firemen's association.

Hearing Set on Sale Of Rapid Transit Firm

A public hearing on the proposal of the Capital Transit Co. to purchase the Washington Rapid Transit Co. will be held February 19 before the Public Utilities Commission.

The hearing was announced after a conference between People's Counsel William A. Roberts and Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman. The transit company has offered $539,673 for the line. A previous offer to buy the line for $843,000 was refused by the commission.

Mrs. Henderson Is Dead at 68; D.C. Poetess

Writer Is Survived by Son and Daughter; Rites Set for Tomorrow.

Mrs. Harriet Olds Henderson, 68, author of a book of poems, "Mornings Glories and Moonflowers," died of a cerebral hemorrhage Sunday at her home, 2945 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Born in Bloomington, Ill., Mrs. Henderson later resided in Galesburg and Sterling, Ill., and wrote feature articles for newspapers in all three cities when a girl. She later lived in New York, Philadelphia and New Hampshire before coming to Washington 12 years ago.

Her book of poems is the result of 40 years' work and travel in this country. A recent poem, "Expose," dealing with the antics of Pegasus, winged horse of mythology, is published in the book, "Contemporary American Women Poets."

She is survived by a daughter, Miss Ruth Evelyn Henderson, an educational adviser on the staff of the Junior Red Cross here; a son, Harry Earl Henderson, of Oshkosh, Wis., and a brother, William Lyman Olds, of Chicago.

According to tentative funeral arrangements she will be buried here tomorrow, although the place of interment and hour have not yet been determined.

7 Die, Many Hurt In British Storm

London (Tuesday), Feb. 11 (U.P.).—Seven persons were known dead and scores injured as the most violent gale of the winter swept Great Britain last night and early today.

Coast guardsmen reported an unprecedented number of large and small vessels were in distress in mountainous seas off the Southern, Western and Eastern coasts.

Life boats were rushing to their assistance, but a pelting rain made visibility almost impossible.

60 Days, G.O.P. Judge Tells 'Best Democrat'

Joe Bailey, who calls himself the "best Democrat in Washington," was fined $100 or 60 days in jail yesterday, when arraigned before Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt, Republican, for being drunk.

About a month ago Bailey was brought before Democratic Judge Walter J. Casey. His defense was, "I'm the best Democrat in Washington." Judge Casey sent Bailey to jail for 20 days.

Yesterday Judge Schuldt said:

"I'll do the best I can under the circumstances. One hundred dollars or 60 days."

Kansas Capital Honors Curtis; Funeral Today

Body of Ex-Vice President Lies in State; Indian Tribe Pays Homage.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Feb. 10.—Kansas reserved its highest tribute tonight for Charles Curtis, returning in death to the city that watched his rise from jockey to Vice President.

The majestic State Capitol, for the first time, will be the scene of a funeral for a private citizen.

The body of the 76-year-old Kansan, who died unexpectedly in Washington Saturday of a heart attack, will lie in state in the capitol rotunda for two hours before funeral services in the House of Representatives hall at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

Bow, Arrow Sent.

The Kaw Indian tribe, of which Curtis was a member, planned to be represented officially at the rites.

"He was a great leader of our people," said Mose Dellmard, assistant chief of the Kaw council.

From the Apache tribe, Chief Deerfoot sent a bow and arrow "to take with him to the happy hunting grounds."

"He was a great man and we loved him," Chief Deerfoot told Curtis' sister, Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, before her departure from Washington aboard the train bearing the body of her brother home.

Business Suspended.

With her was her husband, Edward E. Gann, and Mrs. Webster Knight, a daughter of Curtis. Other relatives expected to attend the funeral included another daughter, Mrs. C. P. George, of Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and a son, Harry Curtis, of Chicago.

State business will be suspended here tomorrow. Officialdom, headed by Gov. Alf M. Landon, will attend the services, conducted by Dr. Harold C. Case, pastor of the First Methodist Church.

Burial will be in Topeka Cemetery, beside the body of Mrs. Curtis.

Senate in Recess.

Out of respect for former Vice President Charles Curtis, who died Saturday, the Senate recessed yesterday.

The Senate concluded a brief session with brief comments from three Senators, including Robinson, the Democratic leader, on the career of Curtis. Tribute also was paid to Curtis in the House.

Spaid, Friend Of Allen, Given Welfare Place

William W. Spaid, a close personal friend of Commissioner George E. Allen and a member of the stock brokerage firm of W. B. Hibbs & Co., was yesterday appointed to the Board of Public Welfare.

Spaid has been an unofficial adviser to Commissioner Allen on relief matters; and will probably be the Commissioner's representative on the board. He will fill the vacancy left by the late John Joy Edson.

The new board member is a native of Ohio. He has resided in Washington for the past 37 years. He came to the Capital as a telegrapher for the Hibbs Company, and finally became manager of the house.

He also has been president of the District Bankers Association, the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, the Associated Stock Exchange; and vice president of the Association of New York Stock Exchange Firms.

Flier Weds Girl Hidden in Convent

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Madrid, Feb. 10.—Juan Ignacio Pombo, who flew an ocean, wrecked an airplane and lost his appendix last summer in a four-months "dash" to his childhood sweetheart, stole her from a convent Saturday where she had been hidden by her mother, and married the girl secretly.

The mother, Senora Concha Rivero, was completely surprised today when she learned that her 19-year-old daughter, Maria Elena, and Pombo were married in a civil ceremony. The news leaked out when Pombo invited a friend to attend a religious ceremony tomorrow.

The mother, worth several million pesetas, had forbidden Maria Elena to marry before she was 21 and sent her to the convent six weeks ago to prevent her from seeing Pombo.

Air Commerce Office Accused Of Inefficiency

Senate Investigators Hear Charges of Incompetence and Politics in Unit.

Officials of the Bureau of Air Commerce were charged with "inefficiency" yesterday as the first half dozen of a long list of witnesses testified before a special Senate Commerce sub-committee conducting an inquiry into the safety of air transport.

The hearings were the first in the investigation authorized last summer following the death of Senator ronson Cutting in an airplane crash near Macon, Mo.

Carol Dolan, a former committee investigator, said that in some cases employes of the Department of Commerce had "violated regulations 100 per cent."

He added that the ureau of Air Commerce's accident board consistently had "whitewashed" Government tofficials in reporting the causes of accidents, and urged that its make-up be altered to bring about "an unbiased attitude."

Dolan, who recently left the committee's service to enter private employment, was followed by Homer erry, head of the aviation department of an oil company, who declared the Government has not kept pace with commercial aviation and that politics and incompetence have crept in.

He urged a permanent aviation policy and development of a "career service" among aviation inspectors and radio engineers.

The story of a commercial transport pilot who followed a Government-maintained radio beam between Charleston, S. C., and Jacksonville, Fla., only to find himself many miles off his course and over the Gulf of Mexico was told by Paul Brattain, assistant general manager of Eastern Air Lines. He recommended that new radio equipment be installed "at once."

T. W. Tomlinson, flight engineer of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., and holder of a number of world records, declared that untrained farmers and trappers were used by the Bureau of Air Commerce to gather weather information.

Among those who heard the charges against the Government's administration of aviation matters was Eugene Vidal, director of Air Commerce. He and his subordinates are expected to be called later.

Pickpocket at Work.

Two men had their pockets picked yesterday while waiting for trains in the Union Station. Both said they were jostled by an elderly man in a black coat. Peter Powers, of Jenny Lind, Ark., said his wallet containing $32 and his ticket home were taken, and Andrew Koehler, Miami, Fla., reported the thief made off with his pocketbook and $30.

New Postoffice For Arlington To Be Discussed

Rep. Smith Speaks Tonight at Special Meeting of County Board.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Chas. 508. Clarendon, Va.

Representative Howard W. Smith will discuss the possibilities of a central postoffice for Arlington County at a special meeting of the county board, at the courthouse tonight.

Chairman George M. Yeatman last night stated that representatives from the Chamber of Commerce, the Arlington County Civic Federation, the Clarendon Business Men's Association and other civic groups in the county which have already indorsed the movement, will attend the meeting.

The plan of the county board to hear three members of the Arlington County Civic Federation who recently criticized the administration of county affairs has been postponed, Chairman Yeatman announces.

George M. Yeatman, county board chairman, received word yesterday morning that his son Herbert was safe and sound in Daytona Beach, Fla.

Herbert, 19, ran away from home Thursday afternoon. Last night Yeatman stated that he had received further word from his son, saying he was on his way to visit a friend at the Louisiana State University.

Fletcher Kemp, county school superintendent, will leave for Richmond today to confer with Raymond V. Long, State architect, on plans for the proposed junior high school.

Kemp stated that while in Richmond he will see Senator John W. Rust and Delegate William D. Medley to urge the passage of the bill permitting Arlington County to hold a special election for a bond issue.

Kemp explained that the present law provides only for holding an election for bonds to build a schoolhouse, while making no provision for funds to equip it. The bill now pending permits the paying for site, building and equipment.

Charged with violation of the building code, in failing to obtain a permit to erect a garage, John L. Douglas pleaded not guilty and was fined $5 by County Judge B. M. Hedrick. Sentence was suspended.

Mrs. W. B. Frye, vice president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, will be the principal speaker at the meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of Patrick Henry School Friday night. There will be a special Founder's Day program, followed by a playlet by second-grade pupils.

Gain in Licenses.

Warrenton, Va., Feb. 10 (AP).—Sums received for 1936 business and professional licenses in Fauquier County showed an increase of $2,500 over 1935, Commissioner of Revenue R. M. McCarty reported today. The total has reached $11,665.

Manslaughter Charge Is Filed Against Driver

Operator of Oil Truck Indicted in Crash in Which Two Died.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 522.

Two indictments were returned by a grand jury in the corporation court, Judge William P. Woolls presiding, yesterday, against John B. Nicholson, a non-resident, charging him with involuntary manslaughter. Nicholson was the driver of an oil truck which, the jury found, last December 6, struck a parked Arlington County police car, killing Louis Franklin Shaw, a special officer of Arlington County, and William H. Harrison, of Chicago, a prisoner.

Other indictments were Ed Handon, for grand larceny of $5.85 from John Bowden, January 18; James Washington, Robert Washington and Sammy Bowman, for larceny of tires from the Alexandria Iron Works, valued at $120; James Washington and Robert Washington, for larceny of tires from H. M. Struder, December 26, valued at $50; Alfred Johnson and Robert Shepherd, robbery of $11 from Steve Williams, November 22; Charles Dimiceli, burglary from car of Pennsylvania Railroad Co., November 25, removing shoes and perfume; two indictments against Steve Hoffman for entering homes of N. S. Roberts and Charles Mason, December 19, and stealing jewelry; W. E. Bozman, stealing automobile of J. G. McKinney, January 20; Richard O'Neil, two indictments for burglary, charged with stealing stamps from office of Virginia Public Service Co., valued at $4.40 and coins valued at 18 cents, and also entering the place of Hugh Lones. The jury was composed of E. A. Sweeley, foreman; W. B. Fulton, Joseph Hayman, Vernon Dyson and Joseph S. Everly.

The Alexandria Bar Association last night voted against the amendment to the city charter which would make the office of city attorney elective. At present the city attorney is appointed by the city council. The change had been proposed in the House of Delegates by Maurice D. Rosenberg, delegate from this city.

Harry F. Kennedy, chairman for the President's ball in Alexandria, has announced the receipts to date are $525, with expenses of $89, leaving a net balance of $436. Seventy per cent of the proceeds will be used in local infantile paralysis work, Harry F. Kennedy, J. Herbert Taylor and O. A. Reardon having charge of local disbursements. Thirty per cent goes to the Farm Springs Foundation.

Harvey Lunsford, for many years connected with the Columbia Engine Company, has been appointed by Fire Chief Duncan as chief operator, to succeed the late Stuart M. Jones.

The funeral of Dr. Horace D. Ashton, 83, who died Sunday at his home, 21 West Walnut street, will be held today at 11 a. m. from Christ Episcopal Church, conducted by the Rev. Harry Lee Doll, rector of the church. Interment will be in Bethel Cemetery, and will be private. Pallbearers will be C. W. Dettor, J. E. W. Timberman, Edgar Warfield, Jack Franklin, Ashton Powell and Albert Ashton, the last named of Clarendon.

Henry Knox Field Masonic Lodge will meet today at 7:30 p. m. in the Potomac Community Building. The communication will be conducted by John E. Gallagher, senior warden, due to the absence of Worshipful Master George H. Clark. Clark, Past Master R. L. Eddington and L. H. Phillips are in Richmond attending the Grand Lodge sessions representing the Henry Knox Field Lodge.

Police Sergt. George Everly stated yesterday that further aid has been given the destitute family of five brought to the attention of the public last week, and that a house has been located in which to move them from the old blacksmith shop they now occupy. Sergt. Everly also states that there are many other cases he can supply with clothing, and all contributions sent to police headquarters will be utilized.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Feb. 10.—Larry Figgins, aged 60, was hit and killed by a truck this afternoon, one-half mile east of here.

Figgins who was partially deaf, was walking to his home in Harmony Hollow several miles southeast of Front Royal. The truck was operated by a colored man and is reported to be owned by Roy Jordon, of Flint Hill, Rappahannock County.

Commonwealth's Attorney John H. Downing, who visited the scene, said a hearing will be held Thursday to determine responsibility for the accident.

Oil Supply Problem Faces Naval Academy

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 10.—Naval Academy authorities are faced with the problem of keeping the academy power plant supplied with fuel oil with the ice-coated Severn River halting the delivery of oil by barges.

Last week, during a temporary thaw of the ice, oil barges made their way to the power plant. The sudden change in weather has prompted authorities to put in orders for oil from Baltimore, asking delivery by train so as to keep a good supply in case of an emergency.

Fairfax County Dog Owners Pay $5,427.75

Nearly 4,000 Licenses Are Issued; $2,388.92 Claims Made.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 43-F-31.

Dog owners of Fairfax County, Va., gave the county treasury $5,427.75 last year according to the report of Dr. F. W. Huddleson, county treasurer. Claims against this fund, however, were $2,388.92 which left the county and incorporated towns a total of $3,038.83 to divide.

The towns received all license taxes paid by residents of the town less the proportion of expenses.

There were 3,116 licenses issued for male dogs, 532 for female, 35 for 20 dogs kennels and 27 duplicates. Residents of the county paid $3,116 for male dogs, $1,596 for females, $525 for kennels and $6.75 for duplictae tags.

Under Virginia law the State receivers 15 per cent of the license fees which totaled $814.16. Other costs charged against the fund were: Stock killed by dogs, $1,200.56; tags and books, $97.20; advertising, $5.40; county game warden, $10.80, and the balance that must remain in the fund under State law, which is $250.

The incorporated towns to share in the distribution of the balance are: Clifton, $35.83; Fairfax, $78.94; Falls Church, $136.61; Herndon, $135.49, and Vienna, $62.15. The county treasury will receive $2,589.81.

The treasurer has also reported that during January, 1936, a total of $2,005 was collected from the issuance of dog licenses. Persons failing to obtain a dog license prior to February 1, are liable to arrest and prosecution by the game wardens. Under a bill now before the State Assembly a penalty of 50 cents will be imposed by the county treasurer on persons failing to obtain a dog license before February 1, each year. Under the existing law no penalty is imposed by the treasurer.

The Oakton School and Civic League has adopted resolutions endorsing the bills increasing teachers' salaries and providing for teachers' pensions, now pending before the State Legislature. The league also requested Senator John Rust and Delegate John Mackall to work for increased State appropriations for schools.

Maurice Fox was named a committee to ask the County School Board for improved electric lights in the school building. A larger number of outlets per room and more modern fixtures were asked.

William Hite, Henry Hawxhurst and Hubert Gerkin were appointed to direct improvements of school grounds and a roadway. The welfare committee reported 90 cups of hot soup are being served each noon. Organization of a school glee club was announced. This club will participate in the contest sponsored by the county federation of school leagues.

Great Falls Grange, of Forestville, has voted to indorse the bill for adequate teachers' pensions. The grange did not vote on the bill for increased teachers' salaries.

Maynard Kidwell has been appointed editor in chief of the senior class annual of the Franklin Sherman High School at McLean. He will be assisted by Marvin Pierpoint, Richard Dove and Margaret Oliver.

Activities scheduled in Fairfax County, Va., today:

McLean—The Community Library Association meets at the home of Mrs. Stuart Terrell at 2:30 p. m. The executive committee of the Parent-Teacher Association meets in the school at 8 p. m.

Fairfax—The Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce will meet at 8 p. m. in the county courthouse. Mrs. Pearl M. Elder, county superintendent of public welfare, will be the principal speaker, describing welfare problems in the county.

Naval Academy Drain Houses Tame Ducks

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 10. (AP). Mr. and Mrs. Mallard Duck, ratings unknown, have taken up quarters at the United States Naval Academy, without orders.

Officers had no choice in the matter, for the pair selected their own home, and are apparently making out quite well. They are living in a pipe that drains the warm water from the academy swimming pool.

They can be seen paddling around on warm days, or quacking their way across the ice. Sailors from the U. S. S. Reina Mercedes, station ship at the academy, have adopted them, and bring food to the family.

There were two females, but one of them got into some fuel oil. Despite the efforts of the sailors, who caught the bird and washed her, she died.

Baltimore Republican Seeks Congress Seat

Plans Complete For Hyattsville Street Repairs

PWA Grant of $25,000 to Finance Part of Work; Petitions Filed.

Plans for permanent street improvements with the aid of PWA funds were completed last night by the mayor and town council of Hyattsville.

The town has been granted $26,000, or 45 per cent of the amount needed to finance street and sidewalk construction. Abutting property owners will bear the other 55 per cent of the cost, and will have ten years in which to pay the assessment, according to the town statutes. The total cost is expected to amount to approximately $56,000.

Petitions for improvement of 11 streets were submitted several months ago by more than 50 per cent of the abutting propery owners on each thoroughfare.

2 Get Extra 30 Days for 'Lie' In Denying Theft of Chickens

Third Prisoner Given Only 2 Months After Confessing Charge; Organization of County Federation of Churches Near Completion.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2362.

Four colored persons yesterday learned in Montgomery County Police Court that it is poor policy to take the police commissioner's chicken without his leave.

Ellsworth Crutchfield and Richard Williams, who pleaded not guilty on a charge that they took chickens belonging to Police Commissioner Frank H. Karn, were sentenced to serve 90 days in the House of Correstion.

Leon Martin, who pleaded guilty, was sentenced to 60 days, because he "told the truth." Judge Harold C. Smith told the first two that their sentence was 30 days longer because they didn't tell the truth. Mollie Williams, charged with receiving the stolen chickens, also was sentenced to 90 days.

Organization of the Montgomery County Federation of Churches will be completed at a meeting of the new Montgomery County Ministers' Association in Rockville February 24, according to an announcement by the Rev. Edwin . Sheppe, jr., president of the association.

The Montgomery County Liquor Control Board will hold a public hearing Monday, at 1:30 p. m. at the Silver Spring dispensary building on the application of Ernest L. Fraley for a license to sell beer and light wine at 215 Diamond avenue, Gaithersburg.

The card party and luncheon which was to have ben given under the auspices of the Bethesda Garden Club for the benefit of the Newcomb Club-Bethesda Library tomorrow has been canceled due to inclement weather.

Sponsored by the Woman's Guild of Grace Church, Woodside, Md., a luncheon and bridge party will be held today at 12:30 p. m. in Grace Parish Hall. Mrs. W. Carlton Eacho is general chairman of arrangements.

Cissel-Saxon unit, American Legion Auxiliary, will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in Jesup Blair Community House. Plans will be completed for the organization of a junior auxiliary.

State Witness In Wilson Case Is Dunn's Wife

Woman to Testify When Slaying Trial Comes Up, Probably in March.

Identity of the mystery woman who tesified before the Montgomery County grand jury investigation into the "mistaken identity" slaying of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper carrier, was revealed yesterday as the wife of Albert McDermott, alias "Slim" Dunn, tri-State gangster now serving time in Alcatraz Prison for alleged patricipation in the Heurich Brewery hold-up.

Dunn, Edward Sutton, Ernest Myers and William Cleary were indicted for the murder of Wilson. It was learned that Mrs. Dunn will appear as a State witness when the four are brought to trial.

Detective Lieut. Floyd Truscott and Detective Sergt. Earl Hartman, members of the "Wilson Squad" of the Washington Police Department, have gone to Alcatraz to question Dunn and are expected to bring him back to Washington shortly.

Elaborate precautions have been made to safeguard Dunn on the trip here. The route is being kept secret and plans include removing him from the train before it reaches Washington to guard against any attempts to rescue or "silence" the gangster.

Mrs. Dunn was taken to the Montgomery County Courthouse at Rockville, heavily guarded, and spirited away after her testimony. Her identity also was kept secret for fear of gang reprisals. The courthouse was guarded by armed Montgomery County policemen throughout the session of the grand jury and extraordinary measures were taken to keep secret identity of witnesses.

Wilson was shot about dawn October 23, 1934, as he delivered a paper at the home of "Micky" McDonald, gambling character, near Takoma Park, Md., by gangsters who apparently mistook him for McDonald.

Speaking Of Primaries.

Current discussion of primary elections, and political maneuvers connected therewith, should have at least one beneficial effect. It should arouse interest in the plight of the District, which has no primary law whatever. For two years a group of public-spirited citizens, headed by John P. Mullen, has been trying to bring about the enactment of such a measure. But those politicians who are accustomed to picking their own delegates for the national party conventions appear to have the inside track.

Proper resentment greeted recent reports from Georgia to the effect that Gov. Talmadge has threatened to sabotage the Presidential primaries in that State and send his own slate of anti-Roosevelt delegates to the Democratic national convention. Such procedure would constitute a muzzling of voters—a reversion to the discredited tricks of the old-school politicians. Yet that is precisely the technique followed in Washington every election year.

The only influence which the voteless District can exercise in the selection of a President and a Vice President is wielded by the local delegations sent to the national political conventions. So long as these delegates are chosen by a few politicians, local voters are denied even that minor participation in democratic government. This is an intolerable situation, the more so because the complete absence of popular government in Washington relieves the local bosses of any obligation to consider the popular will. No District of Columbia representation at the conventions would be better than delegations selected according to methods now ruling.

In the face of this situation, and with a Presidential election approaching, inaction on the part of Congress can not be excused. The Presidential primary bill introduced by Senator Copeland and Representative Norton calls for the election of delegates to the national conventions on the first Monday in May. Considerable time would be required to set up machinery for balloting. Unless the measure is immediately started on its way to enactment, therefore, the District is likely once more to be misrepresented at both Philadelphia and Cleveland.

Certainly members of Congress, seemingly eager to have the primary laws of the States operate fairly and effectively, can not consistently ignore the modest demand that District residents be given some control over their local party organizations.

The Slug Racket.

During the past year over 4,000,000 slugs were inserted into the instruments of the New York Telephone Co. The loss to the company is estimated at more than $315,000 for 1935 alone. The local subway systems have also suffered heavily from the use of illicit tokens dropped into fare boxes. A well-known automat restaurant chain is another conspicuous victim of the slug racket, having found about 360,000 manufactured substitutes for nickels in its food purveying machines.

After prolonged investigation, detectives have arrested the president and vice president of a company which has manufactured a large percentage of these metal discs. Of course, the manufacturers disavow any illegal intention in selling these so-called "key" checks by the pound to middlemen, who in turn have sold them to numerous retail stores throughout the city.

It is a sordid story from beginning to end but its most depressing aspect is the widespread public participation in the fraud. The existence of poverty and misery along with wealth and display in a city of many million inhabitants helps to explain the low state of public morale which brings into extensive use a kind of counterfeit money. But it does not explain or excuse the complicity of vendors and shopkeepers who profit by their traffic in bogus tokens.

Rackets carried on by small groups can be effectually suppressed by an energetic police force. Petty rackets in which the public at large is able to participate with slight danger of detection are not so easy to control. They constantly crop up in one form or another. The ultimate hope of exterminating them lies in elevating standards of personal conduct through education in the home and schools. That is a slow process under the best of conditions, and miracles are not to be expected in a great cosmopolitan city like New York. For immediate relief from mass pilfering a great deal can be done by unrelenting pursuit of the individuals who earn their living by encouraging such practices.

Mr. Pittman On Neutrality.

Senator Pittman's denunciation of Japan's expansionist policy, delivered on the floor of the Senate yesterday, was of course an entirely personal action. As the opinion of an individual Senator it has less formal significance than would have attached to a much milder pronouncement on this theme from the Department of State. So the attack cannot properly be resented in Japan as an official American criticism.

Yet the high place which Senator Pittman holds in Administration councils, plus his important position as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, give to his words an importance which the Japanese government would be most ill-advised to overlook. The Senator's remarks, moreover, were this time carefully prepared in advance of delivery. Their criticism of Japan's unbridled aggression in China is based on the record and represents the general conclusions of all who follow the Far Eastern scene closely. It is not undesirable, but thoroughly wholesome, to have these matters called forcefully to the attention of the American public.

The most assertive part of Senator Pittman's speech was his resentment of a Japanese propaganda which obviously seeks to lull American opinion while Tokyo steadily unfolds a policy of conquest. But of far greater fundamental importance was his disclosure that impatience with this policy has affected pending neutrality legislation to the extent that it may be expected expressly to reserve and reaffirm the doctrine of the freedom of the seas. Here is a pointed hint the significance of which will not be wasted on the Japanese imperialists. For the Senator says, in effect, that Tokyo cannot afford to count on a hermit-like American neutrality in the event of either a Sino-Japanese or a Russo-Japanese war.

Indeed the implications of Senator Pittman's speech for the development of a realistic neutrality policy are both far-reaching and encouraging. He has brought back into the picture the moral responsibility of the United States for upholding treaties to which we are a party. He has served notice that the Kellogg-Briand pact, violated first by Japan and more recently by Italy, is not for that reason a dead letter in the eyes of the United States Senate.

In short, Senator Pittman has implicitly denounced any neutrality policy which makes it mandatory for the United States to draw no distinctions between an aggressor nation and a country which is a victim of definable aggression. No legislation seeking to prevent such a distinction is now likely to have a favorable report from the Senate committee which Mr. Pittman heads.

For Freedom Of The Press.

The Supreme Court yesterday handed down an important decision invalidating a 2 per cent tax on gross receipts from newspaper advertising, levied under a Louisiana statute of 1934.

As in the AAA case, though this time unanimously, the Court refused to countenance employment of the taxing power to achieve unconstitutional ends. It looked behind the ostensible purpose of the tax to discover why it was enacted and found it "bad because in the light of its history, and of its present setting, it is seen to be a deliberate and calculated device in the guise of a tax to limit the circulation of information to which the public is entitled in virtue of the constitutional guarantees."

The invalidated measure was passed at the instigation of Louisiana's late dictator, Senator Huey Long, to punish newspapers hostile to his political machine. But the importance of the decision extends far beyond the confines of Louisiana. If the law had been permitted to stand, it would have jeopardized the freedom of the press in every State of the Union. If legislatures, State or national, either of their own initiative or at the bidding of some dominant political machine could with impunity muzzle hostile critics by levying punitive taxes upon newspapers, democratic institutions would indeed be endangered.

As Justice Sutherland said, in delivering the opinion of the Court: "A free press stands as one of the great interpreters between the Government and the people. To allow it to be fettered is to fetter ourselves."

Pippa Parachutes.

It has been a long time since anyone took the family album seriously. For years now no one has dragged it out at all except to giggle at ancestral atrocities. Aunt Susy silhouetted against a rubber plant was no doubt a fine figure of a woman in her time, with her wasp waist, fleur-de-lis watch, and bell-like skirt doing duster duty along the main thoroughfare. Cousin Flora, too, must have been a panic as she swung gently to and fro in that hammock, indiscreetly exposing her ankles through the folds of four petticoats.

However, Aunt Susy and Cousin Flora may have the last laugh yet. For the fashions which they glorified are being revived and if they were ludicrous against the background of the Elegant Eighties, they will be a scream in the Turbulent Thirties. Up to now, petticoats in a plane have been counted as excess baggage. But the designers insist that quaintness is their story and it looks as if the public were stuck with it. Two hearts that beat as one in onyx will be just too divine on penthouse party gowns. Once again the ladies will have to learn to bear up bravely under a burden of brooches studded with doves and lovers' knots. And petticoats are not only coming back but are designed to show beneath the dress.

Perhaps the new fashions will prove more practical than they appear at first sight. The revival does seem almost logical at a time when there is so much talk of horse-and-buggy days. But the trouble with designers is that they are not content with one idea. Along with these early American trappings is forecast a parachute skirt "inspired by the parachute-jumping practice in Russia." Pippa will make a sweet picture as she passes this spring—bailing out of a taxicab with her flounces fluttering.

A Paradox Of Unemployment.

Alvin Dodd, executive vice president of the American Management Association, asserts that "industry is facing a serious shortage of skilled workers." And he further predicts that this situation "will grow more acute as business continues on the upgrade."

Without a pause for reflection, conclusions of this sort are hard to credit. Indeed, A. F. of L. officials state that reports of a labor shortage are "without foundation," being due in some cases to discrimination against union members. Yet, in spite of such denials, it is entirely reasonable to suppose that the prolonged depression has created a potential shortage of many kinds of skilled and semi-skilled labor.

Closed factories have forced many skilled workers to seek openings in other than their accustomed trades. Idleness, and unsuitable types of relief work, have made specialized craftsmen unfitted for their former occupations. Lack of employment openings has prevented the recruiting and training of young people to take an apprentice place in the ranks of the skilled. As a result, the number of available skilled workers has been cut down to an extent to which unemployment figures give no indication.

As business activity expands, operating schedules have to be adjusted to the capacity of the skilled key men. If these are not properly trained, or are too few in number, industrial recovery is retarded and jobs for the less skilled are correspondingly cut down. Moreover, shortages in skilled labor may exist in particular industries, such as automobile manufacture, coincidentally with the existence of an excess of this type elsewhere.

We are prone to jump hastily to the conclusion that if the number of available jobs equalled the number of idle men and women, unemployment would disappear. But the current complaints about labor shortages help to demonstrate that the problem is one of infinite complexity. A casual survey of the employment statistics of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, for instance, shows that some industries are now employing a good many more people than they did a decade or so ago, while others are employing half, or less than half as many.

In some cases, these contradictory trends spring from technological changes which bring about the decline of old industries and the emergence of new ones. In other cases they are accounted for chiefly by the unequal effect of the depression upon different occupations. As temporarily depressed industries participate more fully in the general recovery movement, they increase the demand for certain kinds of labor, rather than for any kind of labor.

It is then that the country is made fully aware of the demoralization of employment conditions created by a period of profound depression. And it is to be remembered that crude WPA projects, however desirable from the standpoint of relief, may actually operate to impede the supply of skilled labor for the specialized demand in this field. An efficient public employment service, able to place registered technicians in key positions as they develop, is the only governmental agency competent to eliminate the paradox of specialized labor shortages in a period of grave unemployment.

Beards Vs. Boxoffice.

To beard or not to beard! That is the Hollywood actor's quandary in these times of the revival of historical and swashbuckling romances. For, regardless of how dashing the hirsute adornment might have appeared to the ladies of earlier centuries, it fails utterly to interest the modern girl.

Up to the present, this taboo against whiskered Romeos has been a reaction felt in the box office. But now the feminine stars themselves are coming out flat-footed against playing opposite leading men who mumble "I love you" from behind facial foliage, even in the name of historical authenticity. Regardless of the fact that Mary of Scotland reigned in an era of shaggy courtiers, her Hollywood counterpart refuses to work with an unshaven love interest. Thus does reel royalty order "off with their beards" as unfeelingly as real royalty once commanded "off with their heads."

Perhaps Miss Hepburn is correct in saying that she can't do her best work with a beard bristling in her face. But one wonders what Scotland's Queen would have thought of the young star's complaint that, under such circumstances, the "love scenes would be terrible." Apparently Mary never found it any great handicap. She lived, fortunately, in a simple age of wars, beheadings, and court intrigues, long before camera angles were heard of.

The pen that kills 5,000 Ethiopians or an Italian brigade for the five-star editions is mightier than the sword.—Detroit News.

Truly Extraordinary.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of February 3 a great international jurist (John Bassett Moore) is quoted as saying: The pending neutrality bill "is characterized by a curious blend of homicidal with suicidal mania . . . The homicidal mania glares in the proposal to try to starve other peoples who engage in war; the suicidal mania gleams in the proposal to demoralize and destroy our commerce in order that peoples at war may not be nourished by what we produce."

That is: it is homicidal not to provide more than the normal amount of assistance to peoples who are engaged in killing other people. It is suicidal not to make abnormal profits for some of our own people out of providing such assistance.

What extraordinary things people of importance say.

CHARLES L. CARHART.
Chevy Chase, Md., Feb. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the event of a major European conflict our export trade to Europe is one of the most vexing problems with which we have to deal. Several obvious but yet fundamental conclusions may be drawn concerning this problem. (1) A policy of isolation is impossible because of the interdependence of nations and domestic discontent which would result. (2) A policy of strict neutrality is likewise impossible because international law cannot withstand expedient war policies adopted by the belligerent nations. (Reference is made to the Napoleonic and World Wars.) These conclusions indicate that Dr. Moore's position of urging non-co-operation is contrary to the realistic lessons of American history.

The fairest and most rational approach to the problem is via co-operation with international peace machinery. It is not conclusive that such a policy would keep the United States at peace, but historical analogies indicate that co-operation among nations to prevent war brings the world closer to peace. The very nature of the international economic structure predicates such a policy.

Early Bimillenial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a sign inside the entrance to the Library of Congress calling attention to an exhibition commemorating the bimillenial anniversary of the birth of the poet Horace, December 8, 65 B. C., to December 8, 1935, A. D.

Apparently the period of 2,000 years has been computed by adding together 65 and 1935. That is not the correct way to compute the period of time between a B. C. and an A. D. date, for there was no year "zero" intervening between the years B. C. 1 and A. D. 1. The day before, January 1, A. D. 1, was December 31, B. C. 1, and December 8, A. D. 1, was exactly one year after December 8, B. C. 1.

The period of time between the two dates shown on the sign in the Library of Congress was only 1,999 years, computed as follows: December 8, B. C. 65, to December 8, B. C. 1, was 64 years; December 8, B. C. 1, to December 8, A. D. 1, was 1 year, and December 8, A. D. 1, to December 8, A. D. 1935, was 1,934 years, a total of 1,999 years.

Accordingly, the 2,000th anniversary of the birth of Horace will not occur until December 8, 1936.

Visitor's Reaction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We people from the West, North and South visit Washington expecting to see a wonderful and beautiful city. I can't understand why you are so backward in cleanliness.

You do not have an adequate street cleaning force. Also, the property owners are apparently not required to keep ice off their sidewalks, which is the cause of many a broken limb.

Here it is the 9th of February, snow is falling, and there is already more than they know how to take care of. For several days, it will be piled in the gutters and nothing done about it.

Congressmen's Salaries.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the founding of our Federal Government and the establishment of our national legislative body, the salary of a Congressmen was fixed at $2,500 per annum. This amount was increased later to $5,000, then to $7,500 and again to $10,000 per annum, and so today a member of Congress receives the latter amount as his stipend for services performed in representing his constituency. His pay is fixed by statutory enactments based upon constitutional authority, and it can be increased or decreased only by this same process.

A Congressmen receives no promotion or raise in salary during the tenure of his office. No matter what the duties or service he performs, whether spent on an investigation of prespects for the building of a postoffice at Podunk, or delving into the most intricate and colossal complexities of financial or State problems, where astuteness of mind and the keen intelligence of perception are required, and also many times legal, scientific and technical knowledge of the highest order, his pay never changes.

There is probably no occupation, vocation or profession within the scope of human endeavor, except a Congressman's job, where the compensation of the worker is identically the same the day he terminates his services as it is the day he enters upon his duties. Why should a Congressman draw identically the same rate of pay the day he commences his duties as when he leaves the service, no matter whether he spends a day or a lifetime on the job? There is, of course, no valid or good reason for such a situation, except probably for political expediency or an excuse for a poor workman to draw big pay.

Why not apply to a Congressman the rule of longevity, so frequently used in every other business, whether governmental or private enterprise, and graduate their salaries conditioned upon the time they have served their constituency? Make their annual salary, say $3,000 for the first term, $5,000 for the second, $7,500 for the third, $10,000 for the fourth, $12,000 for the fifth and $15,000 for the sixth and subsequent terms. Congressmen are as human as anyone else and, given a chance and something to shoot at, they will do their best, and so we will secure a better qualified, a more able, capable, efficient and intelligent lawmaking body in the United States Congress. Let some enterprising and up-to-date lawmaker seize upon some such idea and work it out to a practicable and satisfactory conclusion.

The Dry Viewpoint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board does not have to prove that District boozedoggling is a success—they admit it.

Had proof been required, they could have called attention to the number of drunken drivers who lost their permits as told in the same paper with their "success" statement. Or they might have alluded to the 14 traffic fatalities so far this year as compared with 5 during the same period last year, when that was considered bad.

The board's most interesting "success" story is about the vanished bootleggers. Apparently, to the board, they have disappeared—like nasty mud puddles in a successful cloudburst.

Now that the Liquor Control Board has succeeded so well, why not have a weather control board? If sales volume reports can be used to prove the District's sobriety, certainly recent weather reports can be used as successfully to prove that Washington has had summer every day this winter.

Privileged Traffic?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In re your editorial "For a Safer City" appearing in today's Post, why not suggest to the police and your cruising reporter that they check up on the driving of local bus and street car operators.

Sunday night the writer boarded a bus at Connecticut avenue and California street. Between that point and Connecticut avenue and Cathedral avenue the bus driver was guilty of the following violations:

Entering three intersections on amber lights which changed to red before the bus was halfway through.

I know this to be a fact because I was sitting immediately behind the driver with the speedometer in full view at all times.

I have on more than one occasion paced street cars on Pennsylvania avenue, between Fourth street northwest and the Peace Monument and found them to be traveling anywhere from 30 to 35 miles an hour.

Why are not a few of these reckless speeders arrested and punished as are the drivers of passenger cars, trucks and taxis? Am I to understand that the traffic regulations do not apply to equipment owned and operated by the Capital Transit Co.?

Most certainly enforcement cannot be termed "strict," nor can "universal respect for the rules of the road" be achieved until or unless laws are made applicable to all, without exception.

Walk Or Somersault?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You have given a lot of space in your paper to the critics of our old friend Al Smith. Most of these critics seem to think that Al gets all his ideas from the Liberty League. If they had followed him closely in his Mayflower Hotel speech they would have known better. He told how he got some of his ideas from the New York taxicab drivers.

If he could have talked to some of us Washington taxicab drivers he would have gotten some ideas that differ from anything he has gotten from his new friends in the Liberty League. I heard one of them who claims to be a dry Methodist say that he went 800 miles and paid his own railroad fare and took his wife with him to get to vote for Al because of Al's record as Governor of New York. But from the language he used in discussing Al's Mayflower Hotel speech I would judge he has lost faith in Al and at the same time forgotten his church's teaching.

For myself I have not talked to a single Democrat who indorsed the stand taken by Al. Most of the Republicans I have talked to indorse his stand. Now won't Al look funny when he takes that walk over to that crowd he denounced in 1928 as bigots?

I think that the Democrats of Alabama and North Carolina should hold a meeting and pass resolutions apologizing to former Senators Simmons and Heflin.

Takes The Horse Cake.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The literary improvement of the ordinary run of newspaper writing has been so noticeable in a generation or more that to praise any particular writer or writing may fall flat if the writing is not exceptionally praiseworthy. The reportorial article, "Old Dobbin, With Three in a Sleigh," in The Post, February 8, makes it excusable to hand the writer, Samuel Lubell, a sincere midwinter bouquet.

Any old-timer who read it without warming up must have been born and lived all his life far south of the so-called temperate zone.

Centennial Of A Duel.

Post Office, Tuesday.

BEING the challenged party, the guardsman fired first. The poet fell, staining the St. Petersburg snow with his blood. His opponent made a movement as if to advance to his help; the poet, however, shouted: "Stop—I feel strong enough to take my shot!" Firing from where he lay, he hit the guardsman.

But that soldier, the Baron Haeckern-Dantes, was only slightly wounded. Forty-eight hours later, the poet Poushkin's wound proved fatal.

We have told the story before in this column. We tell it again, because today is February 11, because the day the wound finished its work was February 11, according to the modern calendar—January 29, Old Style—and because, that fatal year having been 1837, a committee meets this afternoon in Washington, 99 years after the event, to start plans for commemorating, twelve months hence, the centenary of Poushkin's death.

Not that Washington is alone in this. The commemoration is to be world-wide—and very much "nation-wide."

A Poushkin Fund has been incorporated "under the laws of the State of New York," to give an annual prize to the most promising Russian student outside of Russia. The Russian Student Fund of New York will each year give a Poushkin scholarship—$500—good at any American college. Harvard and Yale professors are organizing commemorations in New England. Committees are forming in Pittsburgh and San Francisco. Columbia University will soon have a permanent Poushkin Museum, with the Boland Collection of Poushkin first editions (complete) for nucleus, while that same university's press is preparing a volume of critical, biographic and bibliographic data.

But Washington?

Here the Russian members of the Poushkin committee are Vladimir Kolensnikoff, of George Washington University; Vladimir Gsovski, of the law division of the Library of Congress; Leonid Strakhovsky, of Georgetown University. With them are associated Deans Henry Grattan Doyle, of George Washington, and Ernest S. Griffith, of the American University; Profs. Charles C. Tansill and Leo S. Stock, of the Catholic University; Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, of Georgetown, and Dr. William Chapin Huntington.

If this Column can help, it will. Poushkin is too little known to America.

He has been facilely called the Slavonic Byron—and, for a part of his 38 years, the Byronic influence, then so strong over Europe, was through German channels, strong upon him. But his work as a whole marks him as far more than any imitator of anybody—least of all, of any non-Russian.

He founded a school and swayed a nation solely through the fact of his being the complete poetic expression of the Russia of his time. He remains one of the greatest, the most essential, literary expressions of that Russia which endured within Russia up to 1918; and he still performs much the same office for the same old Russia as it now lies scattered through all the other countries of the world.

Like Byron, Poushkin went to bed one night unknown, and woke next morning to find himself famous; he was only 20 when his "Ruslan and Ludmila" swept the country. Unlike Byron, he was a nation's voice. He was always, in the last analysis, as Slavic as Gogol found him in 1830:

"In Poushkin," wrote Gogol, "the Russian nature, the Russian soul, the Russian tongue, the Russian character are reflected in such purity, in such refined beauty—as a landscape mirrored on the convex surface of an optical glass."

Byron hated life, or pretended to hate it; Poushkin loved it. Byron was violent; Poushkin was serene. While a perverted romanticism was preparing the intellectual garden of Europe for the blooms which Brasol lumps as "Schopenhauer's metaphysical pessimism, Flaubert's esthetic nihilism, Baudelaire's pathological sensualism, Nietzsche's rebellious anarchism"—at that moment, Poushkin created and maintained an Attic calm. Indeed, his was the elder Hellenism, which, in the meeting of extremes, has contact with the ethic of post-Platonic religion.

The average American's difficulty with Poushkin lies in the fact that this poet has suffered even more than most Russian authors at the hands of translators—and that is saying a good deal. The late Lindsay S. Perkins, of Washington, accomplished one excellent version of one of the poems. Boris Brasol has done some others of equal merit. Yet the complete works are unknown here—largely because the average translator of Russian seems to think that all he needs for equipment is a Russian-English dictionary.

To the Post-Impressionist it appears that the Poushkin Centennial plans will lack one vital factor unless they include a volume giving us the best of this Russian in the best of our own tongue.

Hope Chest of Words.

London, Feb. 7.

AT SIMPSON'S in the Strand, the restaurant where the man with the roast beef complexion comes around to cut your slice of meat off a hunk half the size of an ox, there was a little fellow sitting in one of the booths who was a very hard man to catch up with 20 years ago. That funny little cotton mustache and that glaring mane of white hair identified him as David Lloyd George, who used to amount to quite a large sum in the world.

He is a member of Parliament now, which is not job at all so far as the pay is concerned. But these British statesmen have a shrewd habit of saving up old documents and memoranda during their time in office and converting state secrets and personal experiences into money in after years.

Mr. Lloyd George has been doing a brisk trade in words and phrases ever since the English public paid him off and his private office down near Westminster is crowded with a store of documents and correspondence the like of which will not be found anywhere in the world outside the official archives.

* * * *

WHERE Winston Churchill and the rest of them saved papers relating to one or two departments of the British government during the interesting days of the big war, Lloyd George was filling his hope chest with treasures dealing with all phases of the great military and political rough-and-tumble, and no man can dive into a pile and come up with as much chapter and verse as he can today.

As Prime Minister he got about $25,000 a year, but the income tax took about $7,000 of that, and the remaining $18,000 wasn't all velvet, either, for a man in that job is often called upon to throw a pound of steak and a spot of rum into the visiting firemen from over the seas. But Mr. Lloyd George has been collecting ever since.

He has written several books containing information which no other writer could dig out of the files, and if you move up to him today and ask him for 1,500 words of literature he will look you dead in the eye and ask a dollar a word without a blush, and accept it without blushing, either.

* * * *

MR. CHURCHILL is a better writer when he takes off his coat and tries, but he does a lot of potboiling between his serious efforts and some of the trash for strictly commercial purposes which he puts on paper these days would make any self-respecting cub reporter break down and weep. He can pick up from $750 to $1,500 whenever he puts his name to a piece, so the temptation to write them fast and also loose can be understood.

The last good one he wrote was a full swing at Adolf Hitler, and a turn of political events a little while later turned this one into an error, for he could have moved back into the Cabinet except for that. The English were rolling their eyes at the Nazi government at the moment and in view of Mr. Churchill's unkind sentiments toward Der Fuehrer it was deemed best to skip lightly over his name lest the Germans regard his appointment as a deliberately unfriendly act.

A little later he wrote a sticky, syrupy mess about the late Lord Kitchener in which he fumbled around in his system for some reason to admire the wooden Earl, and finding none went ahead to admire him anyway to the extent of about a thousand words. It was pretty bad copy, but it isn't considered polite in England to challenge the grandeur of anyone who has been elected to a niche in St. Paul's Cathedral, so Churchhill apparently did the best he could in a hurry with a sensitive topic.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE, who was so hard to find that only one journalist was able to interview him during the war, is less elusive now. The way to open him up is to say that you are thinking of writing something about his books. But now that he is easily had it is not important to reach him.

First Lady Defines The 'Leisure Class'

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday entered the debate over the "leisure class." Her definition, given at her press conference, follows:

"The leisure class is one in which individuals have sufficient economic security and sufficient leisure to find opportunity for a variety of satisfactions in life."

Dr. Mary Beard, historian, who was a guest at the press conference, approved, saying:

"The heart of the mattre is struck in the phrase 'varied satisfactions.'"

The debate was started by J. P. Morgan who, while appearing at the Senate munitions hearing, described the leisure class as consisting of those able to hire a maid.

Capt. H. L. Wilson Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Capt. Harry L. Wilson, 76-year-old Indian fighter, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in Fort Myer chapel.

Shrine services will be held in the chapel and Masonic rites at the grave. Burial will be with full military honors.

Capt. Wilson retired from the Army at 70, came to Washington to live and engaged in American Legion activities. He served six consecutive terms as commander of the Lafayette Post, No. 9. He was a descendant of Supreme Court Justice James Wilson, a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The Once Over

Pay-As-You-Park.

The drop-a-nickel-in-the-slot parking idea is spreading. Scores of cities are adopting the park-o-meter, the engineering world's latest contribution to solve the problem of where and how to leave an unoccupied auto.

Posts with meters on them are put along a street, and when a motorist wishes to park his car he drives up to the post, puts a nickel in the slot, and turns a switch which sets a green light for a stated interval. When the time is up the light goes out and a policeman or other city attendant bobs up. The owner is thus obliged to pay for overtime.

The chief value of the park-o-meter is psychological. When you know a meter is clicking away the minutes and running up a parking bill you will not leave a car at the curb longer than necessary.

Wherever the system has been adopted it has worked wonders in speeding the footwork of car owners. The fellow who used to leave his boiler at the curb as long as he thought he could get away with it now knows that what was once just a bad habit can become a costly extravagance.

The system is open to the plugged nickel evil and we await the first appearance of the Meanest Park-o-Meter Crook: the fellow who puts in a counterfeit coin to check a stolen car.

In cities where it is adopted it causes some confusion at first. Many a man tries to mail a letter in the coin box and, of course, there is a nit-wit who mistakes it for a fire alarm box. And the girl who complains to the police-man that she put in three pennies and didn't get any salted peanuts.

It looks as if the Man Who Never Pays Attention to a No Parking Sign has at last been cornered.

Development of the system is expected. Elmer Twitchell, the noted engineer, is already at work on what he calls a Neck-o-Meter.

He plans to put it in rural lanes and thinks it time somebody cashed in on this wayside industry. Elmer's idea is to have Romeo drop a quarter in the slot for an hour's necking.

On moonlight nights he would cut the time to 15 minutes.

Jenny missed me where I stood,
Jumping from the chair she sat in;
Time, you thief, who loves to get Wallops in your back, put that in!
Say I'm heavy-footed, slow—
Say her gentle fist just kissed me—
Say I'm going bad, but add
Jenny missed me!

The Democrats of Alaska have declared for Mr. Roosevelt. The Forgotten Eskimo!

No man is ever too busy to stop to watch an automatic snow-removing machine.

A Southern city is getting a $25,000 de luxe dog pound from WPA. It includes shower baths. Elmer Twitchell, working for his old home town, is out for a Federal appropriation for a Catnip and Ball of Worsted Foundation to make life happier for cats.

It is evidently the idea of some Senators to keep America neutral in the next war even if it is necessary to call out the entire Army and Navy.

Those troubles among the millinery workers didn't break out sooner because they were keeping them under their hats.

Many an automobile accident could be excused on the ground a man didn't know he was loaded.

Court Upholds Press Freedom

6 to 3, with conservatives in the majority. Justice Owen J. Roberts delivered the majority opinion in both cases.

The Louisiana tax on newspaper, magazine and motion picture advertising, exacted while Long dominated Louisiana politics, imposed a "license" levy of 2 per cent on gross receipts of periodicals having a weekly circulation in excess of 20,000.

Sutherland, in June, 1931, was one of four justices who dissented from a majority decision taking a broad view of freedom of the press and holding constitutional a Minnesota law under which the Saturday Press, a Minneapolis weekly, was suppressed.

Chief Justice Hughes delivered the majority opinion at that time, with Justices Holmes, Brandeis, Stone and Roberts voting with him. Opposing the Minnesota State "press gag" law invalidation were Justices Butler, McReynolds, Vandevanter and Sutherland.

Sutherland, in his majority finding yesterday said he did not intend to imply that newspapers should be exempted from any "ordinary forms of taxation for support of the government.

"But this is not an ordinary form of tax," he said, "but one single in kind, with a long history of hostile misuse against the freedom of the press.

"The predominant purpose of the grant of immunity here invoked was to preserve an untrammeled press as a vital source of public information.

"The newspapers, magazines and other journals of the country, it is safe to say, have shed and continue to shed more light on the public and business affairs of the Nation than any other instrumentality of publicity; and since informed public opinion is the most potent of all restraints upon misgovernment, the suppression or abridgement of the publicity afforded by a free press cannot be regarded otherwise than with grave concern."

Sutherland remarked that with the single exception of Louisiana, no State during the 150 years of this Nation's existence ever has attempted to levy such a tax.

If increased to a high degree, as the tax could be if found valid, he said, "it well might result in destroying both advertising and circulation."

"The form in which the tax is imposed is in itself suspicious," the court finding continued. "It is not measured or limited by the volume of advertisements. It is measured alone by the extent of the circulation of the publication in which the advertisements are carried, with the plain purpose of penalizing the publishers and curtailing the circulation of a selected group of newspapers."

Imposed in 1934 when Huey Long's star was near its peak, the tax slapped at newspapers which had opposed the late Senator's policies. Nine publishers of 13 Louisiana newspapers protested and carried their case to the courts.

The justices held that the tax violated the due process of law clause of the fourteenth amendment, extending to the States the restraint clearly stated in the amendment: "Congress shall make no law * * * abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press * * *."

The decision was studded with historical references to British attempts to censor the press. One historian was quoted as saying that "the Revolution really began when, in 1765, the government (Great Britain) sent stamps for newspaper duties to the American colonists."

John Milton's "Appeal for the Liberty of Unlicensed Printing" in 1644 was quoted. "Taxes on knowledge," imposed by Parliament in 1712 at the instance of Queen Anne, levying against all newspapers and advertising, were cited as instances of taxes imposed, not for revenue, but to suppress comments on and criticism of the crown.

Borden Co. Appeal.

It was on an appeal taken by Borden's Farm Products Co., Inc., that the court yesterday rendered its 5-to-4 decision upholding the New York 1 per cent differential in favor of milk dealers not having a "well-advertised trade name."

Justice Roberts, speaking for the majority, held the company "has failed to show that as a result of the statute the independent dealers have gained trade at its expense, or that it has suffered a substantial loss."

A dissenting opinion was filed by Justices McReynolds, Van Devanter and Butler.

In the second New York milk case, brought by Mayflower Farms, Inc., the court set aside a ruling of the New York Supreme Court by holding invalid the provision of the law limiting the right to sell milk at the lower price to dealers not well known who had been in business since April 10, 1933.

Italian Youths to Show Fitness in War Games

Rome, Feb. 10 (AP).—Premier Mussolini today ordered a nation-wide military youth competition for May 30, 31, to demonstrate the effectiveness of Italy's war training.

Youths of pre-military age will demonstrate their fitness in mimic battle by land, sea and air.

Groups of every branch of training will parade, to show the practical results of pre-military training.

Lassitude in Court

FOR 36 days the Supreme Court has labored and brought forth not even a mouse, from the standpoint of the lay spectator. Once again yesterday several hundred of the faithful, deluded by sunshine for the first time since the end of AAA, went up the mountain to sit at the feet of the nine gods hopeful for words of wisdom. And once again they went down, unappeased.

This matter of the Supreme Court versus the faithful has almost reached the stage of the ludicrous. I heard several persons, whose faces are familiar, but whose names I never knew, say yesterday that they are going to turn in their season tickets and snub the nine gentlemen from now on. The theory is that if nobody shows up some Monday the court, out of a perverse sense of humor, may render its decision on the T. V. A. They may rest assured, though, that one or two reporters will be hiding behind the pillars, especially now that Mr. Justice Sutherland has written into the record a decision from which there was no dissent, but which read like one of "Bertie" McCormick's speeches on why his Chicago Tribune is still the World's Greatest Newspaper.

You may be interested to know that while Mr. Sutherland was reaffirming the freedom of the press, with learned references to Queen Anne and others, some of the gentlemen of the press were not exactly hanging onto every word. One large and bulky gentleman from New York had already been droned into sound slumber, from which he emerged but twice: once when Justice Brandeis reached for a glass of water and again when the Chief Justice announced that all other decisions of the court would not be orally announced. Two others were drawing cute figures on their wads of copy paper. And the others looked extremely bored.

I would not mention this if it were not for the lady standing directly behind the slumbering columnist who expressed herself as quite shocked over the apparent lassitude on the part of the purveyors of public information. Inasmuch as nearly everybody's eyes had begun to wander by that moment it may be that others were wondering what was going on in the press box at the time. But I cannot tell you the remark which set them all into laughter at a most unseemly moment, for that would be license and not the freedom of the press. And, anyway, the reporters don't have to take notes, for they get handouts from the gentle Mr. Potter at the end of the session.

* * * *

EARLIER in the season feature writers and even sob sisters mobbed the Monday meetings and those who could not comprehend the learned words and breathless paragraprs of juridical prose were content with descriptions of the assorted whiskers of the justices. Every time one of them scratched his ear there was furious scribbling, with the result that from Roberts to Cardozo, reading from left to right, more words have been spilled in description than Sidney Skolsky makes use of in any three columns from Hollywood. I confess I am not guiltless in this respect myself.

But such sport becomes tiresome after a few weeks of it. What effect it may have had upon the Court, of course, is problematical, but some keen observers have reached the conclusion that the nine gentlemen rather enjoy their unaccustomed limelight. It has even been whispered that they are holding up the T. V. A. decision because of a somewhat sadistic pleasure received from keeping so many people in suspense and getting so many morning journalists out of bed before noon, and on Monday morning, at that.

After awhile not a feature writer or columnist will appear. Mr. Broun will forget to get up and the sob sisters will devote their time to Mrs. Long's wardrobe exclusively. Even the public will drift away to enjoy such pleasing sights as watching Earl Browder, the naughty Communist eat chocolate ice cream in the House restaurant—with a gentleman of the Military Affairs Committee, today's biggest kick on The Hill!

Or they will resort to the House itself, to listen to Mr. Blanton, who is less grammatical but far more rhetorical than the precise and bewhiskered masters of English prose across the street. I can think of no more blatant way of showing one's disappointment in the delay. I am told that today Mr. Blanton will lock horns with Mr. Scott, the Liberal from Imperial Valley, Calif., over the matter of the little red rider. This should be a pleasant, if bloody, affray. There ought to be a big crowd in galleries today, after Monday's dull matinee in the Little Theater at the corner of First and East Capitol streets.

Larger Police Staff Urged for Traffic

An adequate police staff for strict enforcement of Washington traffic regulation was urged yesterday in the report of a special committee of the Advisory Board, Keystone Automobile Club. The committee was appointed to prepare recommendations for relief of Capital traffic congestion.

"A Congress lending service to the slogan 'Make Washington a Model for the Nation,' should give the city a police force of sufficient strength to remove it from the category of a bad example," the report read in part.

The committee advocated immediate steps to increase the Police Department personnel, recommended a roving mechanical inspection crew to clear the streets of unsafe automobiles and urged elimination of all "ticket fixing."

It was further suggested that the Department of Vehicles and Traffic be given a "free hand" in extension of the present traffic light system and that additional one-way streets be created during rush hour periods.

Hoover's Views Bring Answer By Morgenthau

Secretary Cites Bond Record When Told of Criticism of Market Status.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., told by reporters that former President Herbert Hoover yesterday had questioned the stability and permanence of the bond market, recommending, as a Stanford University trustee, that common stocks or other equities be purchased instead to protect the university's endowment, said curtly:

"As Secretary of the Treasury, I am not interested in the stock market.

"The bond market will speak for itself."

Hoover, testifying at a San Jose, Calif., court hearing on the financial policies of Stanford University, said that the trustees were "now confronted with a grave problem in the investments of the university endowment."

Stating that many universities throughout the country were "taking action to protect their endowments by investment of at least part of their funds into equities," he stressed that for 50 years "prudence and wisdom have caused the trustees to invest the endowment, now amounting to some $24,000,000, in seasoned bonds and first mortgages."

"The devaluation of the dollar, the widespread bank credit inflation and the possible menace of currency inflation are the new facts with which the trustees must deal * * * The bank credit inflation is a factor independent of devaluation and has already caused a large drop in interest rates. Many of our bonds are being called and equivalent investments can be secured only at lower rates.

"More than two-thirds of our investments are subject to call or mature in the next five years, and if these interest rates continue, we shall probably lose about one-fourth of our endowment income.

"The question of currency inflation is one of constant discussion in Government and the press, and while not at the moment more than a menace, it is one which cautious trusteeship should be in position to meet * * * Experience in similar occasions (currency inflation) shows that common stocks and real estate and other equities ultimately rise in value somewhat in proportion to the increase of devaluation or inflation. While * * * subject to risk, yet this may be the lesser risk than bonds and mortgages.

"The gravity of the matter is clear when we remember that Stanford has trained over 15,000 youths, a large part of them without means of their own, and that a community of nearly 10,000 people is largely dependent on the institution."

The Secretary, not answering Hoover directly, said:

"The record speaks for itself. Of course, yields are lower. My job is to borrow money at as reasonably low rates as I can get. We've refunded $8,000,000,000 of war loans at a savings to the Government of $100,000,000. When I first came in here, I had to pay 2¼ per cent interest for one year. Now I can get money at .9 per cent for nine months.

"It's Mr. Hoover's privilege to put that money where he wishes.

"But our record is something to be proud of. For instance, the last figures show, I think, that the current rate on the whole of our public debt is .255 per cent. (This rate is the lowest since the war.) I believe I'm doing what the President wants me to do."

Some political observers were inclined to think that Hoover merely had seized the opportunity presented by his trusteeship to use the situation as a springboard for criticism, while others held that it was the beginning of a direct attack on Government financial operations.

Resettlement Aims to Build 'Campus' Homes Near Cities

Hitch to Plans for 'Ideal Suburb' Came When No One Could Be Found to Erect Factories Called for in Program, Declares Investigator.

could be found who was willing to start factories in the "ideal" communities.

In the Tugwell-towns, the head of the family would take a street car or bus to his employment each day. In his spare time he would cultivate a garden provided for the purpose. Surrounding each community would be a "green belt," an area of farm land on which would be raised field crops, dairy cattle, livestock, on some kind of co-operative basis, yet to be arranged. On the "campus" would be a school house and community center, recreation fields, stores and all the facilities for a small town. The houses would have modern conveniences, be substantially constructed and have a maximum of light.

All this would be provided families with incomes of from $1,200 to $1,500, rental, including not only the house, but the garden, the school and all the other facilities would be from $6 to $7 per room per month. Eventually these elaborate communities would pass out of the hands of the Federal Government into the hands of some kind of private group, the nature of which is still not quite clear, and eventually the cost would be liquidated. All this would be at a rental of $25 or $30 a month per family.

Four Communities Under Way.

In four instances these dream communities already are coming more or less into being. The ope at present furthest along is that being constructed for Washington "industrial" workers at Berwyn, Md. For the purpose of this development, the Government is considered an industry, and the new town is to be occupied by Government workers. Popularly, it is known as "Tugwelltown." Officially, the name will be Green Belt, for the green fields and cow pastures that will surround the community.

The other three are at Cincinnati, Bound Brook, N. J., and Milwaukee. The development at Bound Brook has run into difficulties and at present its progress has been enjoined by court order. One of the difficulties involved is the matter of taxes. The Federal Government does not—in fact, is forbidden to—pay local taxes. Residents of the suburban houses will not be called upon to support the governments of the States and counties in which they live. This idea, naturally, is not altogether pleasing to the States and the counties.

Obstacles in Way of Utopia.

Resettlement officials, however, say this difficulty eventually will be overcome when the communities are turned over to private organizations for operation and the title will pass out of the hands of the Government—presumably into the hands of co-operative organizations. Of course, the taxes thus brought about will add to the difficulty of making the properties self-liquidating.

For all this suburban development, the Resettlement Administration has an allotment of $31,000,000. It originally planned to go into the type of housing on a much larger scale, but sufficient money is not at present available, and there are indications that enthusiasm within the organization is waning. There are so many obstacles in the road to Utopia.

Berwyn, 1,000 families; cost, $5,500,000.
Bound Rock, 750 families; cost, $6,500,000.
Cincinnati, 1,500 families; cost, $10,000,000.
Milwaukee, 750 families; cost, $9,000,000.

These figures, as are most of those connected with these particular projects, are merely estimates.

Waiving of Interest Foreseen.

The towns are being constructed with WPA labor by the Government itself. No contracts are being awarded. On the Maryland project, when weather permits, are employed 1,100 men. The number is expected to reach 2,500 to 3,000. It is estimated that with relief labor, paid monthly wages rain or shine, and for the most part not highly skilled, the costs will be somewhat higher than if the houses were built on contract.

Resettlement officials have expressed the hope that these model communities will serve as examples for private builders and that eventually, financed with private capital, they will spring up over the country. There is no clear explanation of how they could be made profitable with their high costs and low rents. Even the most enthusiastic advocates of the plan say that the Government probably will waive interest charges on the money invested and will expect that only the capital investment eventually will be returned.

Tugwell Suggests Subsidy.

In a speech at Cincinnati, February 3, in discussing suburban housing, Tugwell said:

"Let me frankly admit that there may be some element of subsidy if we are to maintain building and maintenance standards and keep rents down."

"The Administration," he said, "has not done so much in the housing field that it cannot say honestly to industry that it has been and is waiting patiently for the appearance of houses which can be built for the workers and farmers in this country at a cost within their means.

"If private industry persists in its refusal to exploit the possibilities which are clearly there, the pressure of public opinion may force the Government to enter this field on a very wide scale."

$50,000 Price of Road

mean that the United States will have to buy back property it gave away.

"On the other hand, if Congress decides to locate an airport elsewhere and we are forced to sell our property to other interests, as we will certainly have to do, the airport tract will depreciate in value because of the closing of the road and Arlington County will be unnecessarily inconvenienced."

As Solomon predicted that the directors will not reach a decision before late today, it appeared likely that neither house will be able to act upon the new resolution before tomorrow.

Without committing the National Airport Corporation's directors, Solomon at the Congressional hearing last Friday suggested that $40,000 might be a fair price for the four acres that comprise the roadway adjacent to the airport.

His estimate was based upon the fact that the airport owners, he said, now value the whole property at about $10,000 an acre.

Members of the Senate and House sub-committees said that the road right-of-way, because of its strategic position between the Washington and Hoover fields, should be worth an additional $2,500 an acre.

They also intimated that the National Airport Corporation might be held to the $10,000 an acre estimate should the Federal Government ever want to buy the property either for an airport or for park development.

McSwain yesterday introduced a resolution asking for a special rule to call up the resolution to close Military road. Referred to the House Rules Committee, the resolution restricts general debate to one hour, equally divided between the majority and minority, and provides for the reading of the resolution for amendment under the five-minute rule.

While the Department of Commerce has announced it will order the airport closed to public air transportation immediately after the traffic guards are removed next Saturday, McSwain expressed the opinion that the order might be delayed in case the joint resolution is not enacted into law by the end of the week.

Solomon said he had no intention of delaying his move to withdraw the traffic guards, but he pointed out that the signal lights will not be touched.

The four air lines using the airport meanwhile were going forward with their previously announced plans of transferring operations to Baltimore if a Department of Commerce closing order is issued. American Airlines officials said they would move in any event unless Military road is closed.

Meanwhile, the scheduled conference between Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, and Representative Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, on the bill to set up a commission to select a permanent site for a United States-District airport was postponed until today.

The conference has been called in the hope that some compromise plan may be agreed upon to break the deadlock which tied up the House and Senate bills last session.

Florida Ship Canal Among Five Projects Deleted; Fight Is Assured.

By the Associated Press.

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday broke with the Administration's works program on river and harbor and flood control projects by refusing appropriations for five major projects involving $29,000,000.

The projects to which the committee turned a deaf ear in recommendations of nonmilitary activities of the War Department and the expenditures requested for each for the 1937 fiscal year were:

Passamaquoddy tidal power project in Maine, $9,000,000.

The Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal, Florida, $12,000,000.

Sardis Reservoir, Mississippi, $2,500,000.

Conchas Dam, New Mexico, $3,500,000.

Bluestone Reservoir, West Virginia, $2,000,000.

The committee's report recommended refusal of appropriations "to unauthorized river and harbor and flood control projects, commenced with emergency relief funds," it added:

"Upon the promise that it is the evident intention of the Administration to finance all river and harbor projects in the future out of direct appropriations, the Committee on Appropriations has taken the stand that if it is to resume appropriative jurisdiction for such class of work, the appropriations must be confined to projects which have run the usual gauntlet of scrutiny by the Corps of Engineers, the legislative committee having jurisdiction of such matter and the legislative bodies themselves.

"It is understood that the Sardis and the Bluestone reservoir projects have been favorably recommended to Congress by the War Department but have not been authorized, but none of the other three projects have been favorably acted upon by the Corps of Engineers."

The Appropriations Committee recommended a total appropriation for non-military activities of $189,359,985, a reduction of $29,313,819 in the budget recommendations.

The committee report said a total of $14,700,000 in emergency funds had been alloted as of January 13, 1936, for the five projects which were turned down. Including this amount, the committee said it would cost a total of $218,874,000 to complete the projects.

Senator Fletcher, of Florida, said he would seek to amend the bill, when it reaches to Senate, to include the Florida Canal and other items "asked by the President," but erased by the House committee.

"I am confident the canal work will go on without a break," Fletcher said.

Fletcher said the canal project "not only has run the gauntlet of the Corps of Engineers, but PWA engineers and the President's Board of Review, as well."

Minister Injured In Church Blaze

South Boston, Va., Feb. 10 (AP).—A minister and a fireman today were recovering from injuries received yesterday, when fire destroyed the First Baptist Church here, at an estimated loss of $50,000.

The Rev. Frank C. Riley, pastor, was burned about the face and hands, when forced to leap through flames to escape from the burning building. His condition today was said to be painful, but not critical.

Oscar Walton, a fireman, fractured one ankle while fighting the blaze. He was under treatment in a local hospital today.

The fire, which started in the Sunday school department of the church building destroyed the Sunday school annex and razed the church. The parsonage next door was undamaged.

Mrs. Nigh Funeral To Be Held Today

Funeral services will be held today for Mrs. Elizabeth Warren Nigh, 55, of 2800 Brentwood road northeast, an employe of the Veterans' Administration, who died at her home Sunday, from the Mount Rainier Christian Church at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Nigh, a life-long resident of this city, began her employment in the supply division of the Veterans' Bureau in 1919. She had long been identified with the Mount Rainier Christian Church, in which she was an active member of the women's department and the Loyal Berean Class.

Surviving are two sons, Frank and Warren; a grandson, Warren Breewood Nigh, all of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Louis D. Bliss, of Takoma Park, Md., wife of the president of the Bliss Electrical School in Takoma Park.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt Are Hosts to 1,200 at Congressional Reception at White House

Flowers Bedeck Rooms Of Executive Mansion

Cabinet Members, Senators and Representatives and Their Wives, Relatives and Friends Are Among the Guests at Social Function.

By Francesca McKenney.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained last night at the Congressional reception in the Executive Mansion for more than 1,200 guests, including members of the Senate and the House of Representatives with their wives and other members of their family.

Bright flowers were placed in vases on the mantels of the green room and red room. In the state dining room a huge mass of ferns banked the mantel, while on the long table, which extended the length of the room, where light refreshments were served, were large silver vases of deep pink carnations.

The military and naval aids who preceded the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were in full dress uniform and gold braid. Mrs. Roosevelt wore a gown of pink satin, made on closely fitted lines, with a train and diamond ornaments.

Those in Line.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull headed the members of the Cabinet, who followed the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Hull wore a gown of hunter's green taffeta with a train formed of ruffles of the same material. The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., were absent from the line because of an injury Mrs. Morgenthau suffered in a fall on the ice several days ago. The Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern also were missing from the line, as were the Postmaster General and Mrs. Farley.

The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, who were absent at the last reception because of illness, were in the procession, the latter wearing a gown of pale yellow chiffon embroidered with pale lavender flowers. Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, who was escorted by Capt. Ostrander, wore a gown of pink satin fashioned on long lines with a short train, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who was escorted by Lieut. Haynswothy, wore a gown of pansy colored satin with a flowing scarf lined with pale pink satin. Among those absent were Secretary Harold L. Ickes, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper and the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins.

Mrs. Harry Baxter and Miss Betsy Dern, daughters of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dern, were glimpsed in the red room chatting with members of the Cabinet. Mrs. Baxter wore a gown of black crepe trimmed with bands of diamente around the high neckline and a long flowing scarf of the same material. Miss Dern wore a gown of deep rose chiffon trimmed with a jeweled buckle at the waist line. Mr. Douglass Hall joined his mother, Mrs. Swanson, in the red room.

Other Guests.

Chatting with friends in the State dining room were Senator and Mrs. Joseph Robinson. Mrs. Robinson wore a gown of gold lame with bronze accessories. Also glimpsed in the dining room were Senator Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania, with his sisters, Miss Ida Guffey, in silver and lavender lame, and Miss Pauletta Guffey, in a French gown of gold satin.

Senator and Mrs. Vic Donahey were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Marian Donahey. Senator and Mrs. William H. Dieterich also were present, the latter gowned in deep rose velvet with a train. Mrs. Royal Copeland attended with her husband, the Senator from New York. She was dressed in a gown of peach satin with a train.

Senator and Mrs. Adams were present, with their young daughter, Miss Elizabeth Adams. Mrs. Adams wore green and silver metal cloth, and her daughter was gowned in white chiffon.

Others present from senatorial ranks were Senator and Mrs. Fred H. Brown, Senator William Bulow, with Mrs. Bulow, who wore a spring print trimmed in green; Senator and Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, the latter wearing chrystelle velvet in a powder blue shade trimmed with silver; Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Senator and Mrs. Edward R. Burke, the latter in white crepe; Senator Tom Connally and Senator and Mrs. William McAdoo.

Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis had with them their house guests, the Misses Bertha and Elena de Hellebranth. The Misses Hellebranth are young Hungarian artists who are making a visit to Washington from their home in Ventnor, N. J.

Idaho Group Attends.

Others who were seen in the state dining room were Mrs. William E. Borah, who was accompanied by her dinner guests, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Anderson, Miss Henrietta Young and Mr. James Young, all of Boise, Idaho. Mrs. Borah wore a gown of pink chiffon made on flowing lines with the hemline forming a brief train and a shoulder corsage of pink gardenias. Senator and Mrs. Carl A. Hatch were there, the latter wearing a gown of heavy brocade in the new copper shade, shirred to the hip line with a full skirt forming a short train. With this she wore gold accessories.

Also seen were Senator and Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, the latter wearing a gown of purple satin with a train and cowl neckline, and their guest, Miss Katherine Greer; Senator and Mrs. William H. King, the latter wearing a gown of brown net, the skirt fashioned with ruffles. Senator King was surrounded many times during the course of the evening by members of resident society who wished to express their opinion that Washington should not be made dry, and to argue that any such act should not be considered unless a vote be taken in the Capital.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler is out of town, but Mrs. Wheeler attended the reception, wearing a black velvet gown. She was accompanied by her daughters, Miss Frances Wheeler and Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, who wore a white crepe gown and a white ribbon in her hair. The latter will be married Saturday to Mr. Edwin Colman, who was also present.

Senator Townsend Brings Guests.

Senator John G. Townsend, jr., was accompanied by his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Tubbs, of Selbyville, Del., who are spending a week as his guests at the Shoreham. Senator Robert R. Reynolds was accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Mamie S. Reynolds, and his sister, Miss Frances Reynolds, of Asheville, N. C., who are spending a few days at the Mayflower. Mrs. Reynolds will return to North Carolina the end of the week and Miss Reynolds will leave for New York Sunday to spend a month there.

The lions of the evening were Sinclair Lewis and his wife, Dorothy Thompson, who are in Washington "seeping up" a little political atmosphere. Miss Thompson wore a trailing gown of white chiffon with a long scarf of green floating out behind and forming a slight train in the back.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Resident

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt have issued invitations for the Army and Navy reception on February 18, at the White House. This will be the last state function of the season.

The Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito were the guests in whose honor Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary entertained at dinner last evening in the Chinese room of the Mayflower. The guests numbered 34.

The Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, left Washington yesterday by plane for San Diego, Calif., to attend the reopening of the California Pacific International Exposition tomorrow.

The Ambassador will represent his President, Senor Don Lazaro Cardenas, who was invited, but was unable to attend. The Ambassador was accompanied to the West Coast by the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, Senor Dr. Don Rafael Fuentes.

The Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips entertained at dinner last evening in honor of the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, and the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos.

Mrs. George Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, was the ranking guest at the luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Wallace H. White, jr., wife of Senator White, at her home in Tracy place.

Frau Karl von Lewinski, of Germany, has arrived in Washington for a brief visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel O. Clark, jr., of New York City, are stopping at the Wardman Park Hotel during their visit in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ash To Attend Mardi Gras.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ash left Washington yesterday for New Orleans, La., where they will be the guests of Mrs. Franz Hindermann and Mr. Crawford H. Ellis, for Mardi Gras. Mr. and Mrs. Ash will return to Washington March 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Strickland Gillilan were hosts at dinner in the ballroom at the Shoreham last evening.

The guests were Senator and Mrs. Marcus A. Coolidge, Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Senator and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Caldwell.

Mrs. George Barnett will entertain at luncheon at her home today.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Ward entertained at dinner in the ballroom at the Shoreham last evening for their house guests, Dr. Paul Hollender and his daughter, Miss Sybille Hollender, of Leipzig, Germany. Dr. Hollender and his daughter are sailing for their home in a few days.

Mrs. Edward W. Pou, wife of the late Representative Pou, has returned to Washington from Henderson, N. C., where she visited her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Fuller Parham. She will take an apartment at the Wardman Park.

Mrs. Ollie M. James has returned from Garfield Hospital to her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street and is convalescing from a recent illness. Mrs. Ruby James Gordon, sister of the late Senator James, is with Mrs. James and will be her guest for the winter.

Col. Charles H. March Called to Minneapolis.

Col. Charles H. March, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, has left for Minneapolis to join Mrs. Marsh at the home of the latter's mother, who is very ill. Col. March returned to the Capital last week from Minneapolis, after attending the funeral of Mr. Wells there.

Mrs. George Oakley Totten, jr., has left for Palm Beach, where she will give an exhibition of her porcelain figures at the Breakers Hotel. While in Palm Beach Mrs. Totten will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Dobyne on their yacht, Coconot.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Newmyer have left for Pass Christian, La., where they will spend several weeks at Inn-by-the-Sea.

Among those who have recently joined the large group of Washingtonians who are at the Hollywood Beach Hotel, in Hollywood, Fla., are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Guggenheim, Miss Elizabeth Ann Kaufman and Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Goldheim.

Maj. and Mrs. E. P. Wilkerson have arrived from Lexington, Ky., and are at the Carlton for a short stay.

Scharf-Green Marriage Held At Church Here

Reception Follows Ceremony; Bermuda Wedding Trip Planned.

The marriage of Miss Mildred Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Day Green, and Mr. George L. Sheriff Scharf, son of Mrs. George Scharf, took place last evening at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. William F. Locke officiated, assisted by Dr. W. Angie Smith.

Mr. Claude Robeson played the wedding march and Mr. Ross Farrar sang "I Love Thee" (Grieg) and "Because."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown with long sleeves and a heart-shaped neck. Her tulle veil, caught with orange blossoms, was held in place by a pearl tiara. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Kenneth Shenstone, matron of honor, wore a gown of royal blue chiffon, with a train of small ruffles and a cowl neck-line. Her bouquet was of sweet peas and forget-me-nots. Miss Dorothy Green, sister of the bride, wore a similar gown. The bridesmaids were Miss Helena Cook, Miss Virginia Keyser, Mrs. Milton C. White and Miss Mary Frances Hicks, of Miami, Fla. They wore sky-blue frocks and carried bouquets.

Mr. John Scharf, brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers included Mr. Robert E. Lamond, Mr. Wayne Birdsell, Mr. Louis F. Peak, Mr. James E. Jones, jr., Mr. William M. Wilson, jr., and Mrs. Robert Garret, of New York.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed. The bride's mother wore a gown of petal-pink chantilly lace, with bands of mink on the sleeves and a corsage of orchids. The groom's mother wore black chiffon velvet and gardenias.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside on Bradley boulevard.

Prof. Leon Dostert Honor Guest Tonight

Dr. and Mrs. DeWitt C. Croissant will be hosts this evening at the Arts Club when Prof. Leon Dostert, head of the department of Romance Languages at Georgetown University, will be the guest of honor.

Prof. Dostert will address the club on the subject of "Andre Gide," the fifth in his series of lectures on modern French authors.

Mrs. Roper to Honor Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Roosevelt will be the guest in whose honor Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, will entertain at luncheon today.

The First Lady will leave Washington tomorrow for Cornell University to attend the farm and home meetings there. She will not return to the Capital until next Tuesday. Wednesday of next week Mrs. Roosevelt will entetain at two teas at the White House, and the next day, February 13, she will hold a press conference at 11 o'clock. That afternoon she will be the guest of honor at a reception at the Congressional Club.

Step into Spring at Elizabeth Arden's!

Elizabeth Arden's Salon is a conservatory of beauty that keeps you always in the springtime of youth. Wind and weather cannot roughen your skin if you are a regular visitor at Elizabeth Arden's.

Let the Salon give you a complete going over. Let Elizabeth Arden's assistants, whose training makes them rank as specialists, tell you what you need and apply it with deft pats in the intricate pattern Miss Arden mapped out to mold your face without stretching the skin. Let them lift and strap and coax drooping contours back into rhythmic curves. Let them work over your neck with Gland Cream until crepiness disappears. Let them absorb the puffs and stroke away the taut lines about your eyes. Let them cleanse and refine your pores. And then let them make you up with inspired little touches that will dramatize your coloring and idealize your features!

And at home, remember to Cleanse without drying with Ardena Cleansing Cream ($1 to $6), and Skin Tonic (85c to $15) which work together as one.

Combat dryness with Velva Cream ($1 to $6) or Orange Skin Cream ($1 to $8).

Society Spends the Morning In Court—Supreme, Not Police

by Sallie Swift

What with the society women, newspapermen and a sprinkling of Senators in the Supreme Court chamber yesterday morning, it looked as if Daisy Harriman's supper party had made a night of it and came over from her house in a body. As the justices appeared dramatically from the red velvet hangings the court crier, Mr. Thomas E. Waggaman, announced in one breath, as he always does:

"The honorable the chief justice and the associate justice. God save the United States," but as no body interrupted with laughter, he concluded, "and this honorable court."

It was obvious from the set of Ray Clapper's jaw that he was thinking God would have to choose between the two and that Clapper was making no silent prayer for intercession for the nine old men. Where, by the way, do our prima donnas of the press get this "nine old men" stuff. Mr. Justice Stone is at least as young as Heywood Broun, and Mr. Justice Roberts is not Clapper's senior by very much. To be sure, the columnists are younger than the justices in many ways, but not in years.

An Exclusive Audience.

If all men are equal before the Supreme Court, this morning's audience would not admit it. That is why the Supreme Court is making the society page. The Supreme Court session on Monday morning, when decisions are handed down, is more exclusive than a White House dinner. It has become the rage with the social intelligentsia to be in at the death.

Therefore, it is altogether natural to find Virginia's hunting set represented. Like many another Virginian, Mrs. Charles C. Harrison comes from Philadelphia. She had motored up from The Plains to accompany her friend, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, who, as the wife of a justice, was entitled to sit in the exclusive honor pews at the right side of the hall. Both women looked very distinguished in their black furs.

The brilliant foreign correspondent, Dorothy Thompson, wife of Sinclair Lewis, who is spending a month in Washington to become acclimated to the native political atmosphere, was accompanied by her friend, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot. One of the most decorative members of the audience was the blonde and pretty Mrs. Charles Cropley, and Mabel Walker Willebrandt looked professional in a simple black dress relieved by white trimmings at the neck. Mrs. Ernest L. Draper, wife of the new Assistant Secretary of Commerce, who has recently come to town, indicated by her presence that she has already developed a taste for Washington's latest indoor sport.

Mrs. Bacon Interested.

Mrs. Charles B. Henderson, wife of the member of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was also in the reserved section with Mrs. Stanley F. Reed. It was not surprising to find Mrs. Robert Bacon following the court's decisions with interest, as Virginia is very active and very effective these days in the development of Republican strategy in New York. Mrs. William Phillips, who had come with her husband, the Undersecretary of State, is another Washington woman who follows matters of public interest as a real student. Mrs. Henry P. Fletcher, wife of the chairman of the Republican national committee, was showing the sights of Washington to her friend, Mrs. James A. Burden, from New York.

Unfortunately, the TVA decision was not handed down, and though the show is never poor in the Supreme Court, it failed to come up to expectations. To make matters worse there were 613 people crowded into a room that has seats for less than half that number, and is air-conditioned for only 320.

WAS IT MURDER?

By James Hilton

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell, young writer, temporary secretary to Robert Roseveare, headmaster at Oakington School, is interested in the mysterious deaths of the Marshall brothers, pupils at the school, and later of Max Lambourne, one of the masters. Revell and Guthrie, Scotland Yard detective, suspect Ellington, cousin of the boys and heir to their fortune, until Lambourne's death. Rosamund, Ellington's wife, tells the two men that Lambourne, who was very fond of her, had confessed that he had murdered the boys to throw suspicion on her husband, whom he hated. They think Lambourne killed himself to escape a murder conviction. The caution her to say nothing of the confession, and the world believes Lambourne died from an accidental overdose of beronal. He left his small estate to Mrs. Ellington. Two boys tell Revell that Roseveare visited Lambourne's room about midnight the night of his death. Revell finally plucks up courage to kiss Rosamund.

CHAPTER XXVI.

REVELL HAD A SWIFT vision of Rosamund and himself sharing some art-and-crafty studio at Chelsea, himself writing highbrow novels and Rosamond painting futurist pictures or making terra-cotta statuettes or casting horoscopes or keeping a hat shop or employing her time on some such task that possessed the conventional amount of unconventionality. His own four or five pounds a week plus, say, half as much from her, would easily permit them to sustain an idyllic existence on love, art, gin, and tinned sardines. Delightful prospect! Was he game for it? He believed he was, and with rising enthusiasm in his voice rapidly sketched out to her the bare outlines of such a future. She was silent for a while, and then said, "No, Colin, I don't know that I'd want to go away with you. You wouldn't treat me as I'd want to be treated. You don't really trust me, do you?"

"Trust you? Why, of course I do!"

"Then why didn't you tell me the truth about why you came here? No, my dear Colin, you're a clever boy and you're having a clever game of some kind, though I'm not quite certain what it is. And I shouldn't wonder if you've only been making love to me with some hidden purpose."

"Rosamund, that's not true!" He was sincerely indignant that she should think him capable of such a thing. "Of course I trust you. It never had anything to do with that. It was merely—oh, Rosamund, didn't you say yourself how dreadful the past year has been? Well, I knew that, and I wanted to save you from being dragged into any more of it."

Dodges the Question.

"More of it?" Her voice was incredulous. "But surely—surely it's all over now? Tell me the whole truth, Colin, however terrible it is."

But that, of course, was just what he could not do; he could not tell her how he respected her husband. So he told her merely that in his opinion the murderer had not been Lambourne.

"Not Mr. Lambourne?" she echoed. "But Colin, he confessed to me!"

"I know he did, but it wasn't true."

She was bewildered for a long time. He could not be too explicit with her lest he made it clear who in his opinion, had committed the murders.

"But, Colin, if Mr. Lambourne didn't do it, then who did?"

"Yes, of course. And that's just what I don't know for certain, though I've got suspicions."

"Won't you tell me?"

"It wouldn't be fair. They may be quite unfounded. Far better not talk about it till the suspicions become certainties."

"But supposing they never do?"

"They probably will. Criminals always give themselves away if you watch them long enough."

"Do you really think that?"

"I'm sure of it."

"Mr. Guthrie believed that Mr. Lambourne had done it?"

"Oh yes. As he was so often careful to tell me, it was facts he was bothered about, not theories. The fact that Lambourne had confessed to you was enough for him. Perhaps it ought to have been enough for me, too, but—well, it wasn't."

"So your're doing this altogether on your own?"

"Altogether." He felt a strong pride rising in him.

"You think you'll get the murderer, then, in the end?"

"Yes, I do. I've certain evidence already, and I hope to get more very soon."

Thrilled by Kiss.

She shuddered. "It all sounds so terribly ruthless. Oh, let's hurry—I seem to see people hiding behind every tree."

He left her at the door of her house and climbed to his own room in a state of strange excitment. He had kissed her and she was the first married woman he had ever kissed.

But the incident was not repeated. Indeed, there came no suitable opportunity. When first they met again after the night of the concert, she warned him that they must be more discreet. "Because I have an idea Tom guesses how I feel toward you," she explained, and the confession helped to soften the restrictions it foreshadowed.

She smiled. "I wasn't thinking of your reputation. It's a matter of your personal safety. Oh, I know you'll think that's absurd and melodramatic, but it isn't. You don't know Tom as I do."

"But surely you don't mean to say that I should be in actual physical danger from him?"

"You might be," she answered. "It's a frightful thing to have to confess about one's husband, but it's true. He'd do nearly anything in a fit of jealousy. And I think—already—he's a little jealous of you. That's why we must be careful."

So they saw far less of each other during that final fortnight of the Term.

End of Term came; Oakington dispersed to its homes; the School itself took on that air of dreary desolation that always hangs about deserted buildings.

Revell's position at the school, now that term was over, was becoming somewhat anomalous, but Roseveare eased it considerably by suggesting that he should stay on a few days if it convenienced him at all. Revell accepted the offer with relief, and in his own room that night addressed himself to a last, frenzied attempt at solving the Oakington problem.

And then, suddenly, he thought of something that should have struck him long before. It was a chilly evening for the time of the year, and he had donned a dressing gown for warmth. That reminded him of the dressing gown that Willbraham Marshall had worn on the night of the murder. Thus, with amazing swiftness, the sequence of argument developed. The boy, Revell assumed, had been shot whilst standing on the edge of the bath. He would, therefore, since the bath was empty, have been wearing his dressing gown. Almost certainly it would have been stained with blood; ergo, the murderer, if he wished to leave an impression of an accidental dive, would have had to remove the soiled dressing gown and leave another, unsoiled, on the side of the bath. Doubtless the former had been destroyed, but the latter, included presumably amongst the boy's other possessions, might well yield valuable clews. The dressing gown ought, somehow or other, to implicate Ellington. He did not even at first know where the dressing gown was; but a seemingly casual chat with Brownley, the house butler, drew the information that it had been taken charge of by Detective Guthrie.

Revell was slightly chagrined by that, for Guthrie was perhaps the last person he wished to drag back into the affair. Yet there was nothing else for it; the clew of the dressing gown must not be overlooked. So Revell after much cogitation there and then composed the following:

My Dear Guthrie:

I am still interesting myself somewhat in various aspects of recent unhappy events here. A point has occurred to me in connection with the dressing gown left in the swimming-bath on the night of the tragedy. I believe you took charge of it, and if it is still in your possession, would it be permissible for me to see it at some time and place to suit your convenience, but preferably as soon as possible.

Yours faithfully, Colin Revell.

Arms or Back Also Require Beauty Care

Neck Should Receive Attention, as Well, if One Would Be Attractive.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

MANY WOMEN confine all their beauty efforts to the face and forget that the neck, arms and back are important, too. They fail to remember that a charming countenance goes just so far—no farther, that many a man has been intrigued with entrancing eyes, cupid-bow lips and a velvety complexion only to be brutally disillusioned by rough, parchment-like skin of arms and back.

One cosmetician whose theories of charm are wide in scope emphatically reminds us that only by attending to all details can we hope to be really lovely. So important does she hold care of the skin—not merely complexion—that for many years she had her chemists at work on a body rub that would prove both exhilarating and remedial to dry skins. The result is truly a gem. It is a liquid with an oil base, with a delicate haunting fragrance. You apply it (and a little goes a long way) to your arms, shoulders and neck after your bath, and it softens the skin, gives it a satiny smoothness and makes you feel as sleek as a siren.

During this cold weather, when your skin is inclined to be chapped and scaly, you'll find it a twofold blessing. To women who are prone to have dry skins the year round it is a godsend.

Non-Slip Slippers.

SPONGE grippers are the newest things in bath slippers. They are positively delightful! For men or women, large feet or small. They're flimsy looking affairs but they're surprisingly staunch. Once on they fit like paper on the wall, won't slip off, stretch, nor shrink.

They are highly recommended for showers, bath houses and locker rooms, and are said to be perfect beach slippers.

They cost 59 cents a pair.

To Dispel Odors.

IF you don't want your friends to know you've been boiling cabbage, peeling onions, polishing the floor, cleaning upholstery; if you want to hide the odor of scorching cloth, stale cigarettes, or whisky, you won't need Aladdin's geni to help you. A certain concentrated perfume will do the job instead. You put one drop of it on a light bulb and as it evaporates it gives out a mild fragrance that annihilates the unwanted odors.

It comes to you in a bottle provided with a stopper cap that enables you to use it with the greatest of ease. The cost, 50 cents a bottle, and one bottle will last for ages. A choice of four fragrances is offered.

Children Find Helping Needy Gives Pleasure

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"SHALL I encourage my child to give to charity or to missions? If so, how shall I do it?"

Some parents arbitrarily require the child to contribute part of his allowance to church or mission boxes, others leave it to the school to make collections for special charities. In either case does the child as a rule learn much. In fact, he is apt to feel irritation at being forced to give to people of whom he knows little and cares less.

The only practical means of teaching charity to children is to let them make their own decisions as to when and how to give. The youngster who hears from his mother of a family on the next block who have not enough blankets or food understands at once what his mother means.

But the vague statement that his 5 cents a week goes to the poor or that the school is raising $100 for a mission in some remote spot leaves him untouched.

Spring Blouses Made Of Marquisette Team Well With New Suits

NEW YORK, Jan. 20—(AP)—Some of the blouses that will be worn with the new spring suits are made of the most transparent marquisette, daintily pleated, with frills at the wrists.

The garment district says: "This will be the greatest suit season in years." One firm has made no spring coats except the ones to be worn with a dress as an ensemble.

At another house (Germaine Monteil) the whole spring line is tailored, and almost everything is dark blue or gray.

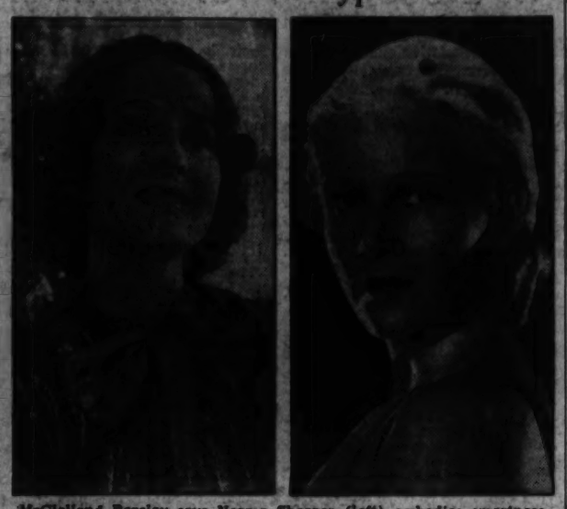
Ten Sets of Twins Attain High Marks

TEN sets of twins enrolled at Temple University are attaining unusually high marks in the classroom, according to a report from the Associated Press. A recent survey shows that the girl twins are more studious than the boys.

Dr. Thaddeus L. Bolton, head of the department of phychology at Temple, said that it was an unusual situation. "I have known twins to be very bright, and then again I have known them to be dull to the point of dumbness," he said. "But so far as I know, there is no explanation for the situation at Temple. It seems to me merely a matter of luck or coincidence."

Artist Cites These for Types of Charm



McClelland Barclay says Norma Shearer (left) embodies smartness and intelligence and Ann Harding (right), womanliness and understanding.

'Other Woman' Held No Menace To Wives Who Possess Charm

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"WIVES WHO KEEP themselves smartly groomed and who have the precious gift of charm are not the ones who have to worry about the other woman," says Antoinette Donnelly in her recent book, "Charm Never Fails."

In her years of seeing and interviewing women with reputations as beauties, Miss Donnelly has learned a good deal about that elusive and endearing "quality which makes the young adorable, the middle-aged fascinating and the old people lovable."

Claudette Colbert told the author: "Naturalness is the chief quality of charm." Jane Cowl believes tact is even more important. "It covers so many things," she said. "Not only the right thing to say and do—but listening with absorption to what someone is telling you—is tact." Lotte Lehmann thinks a good disposition, "expressed in the joy of living," is essential.

Most women are even more interested in what men consider the chief qualities of charm. Miss Donnelly was told by Giovanni Martinelli, star of the Metropolitan Opera Company, that charm lies in beauty of expression, in a good sense of humor and in giving the impression that one enjoys life."

From Leslie Howard, popular actor of stage and screen, the author heard that the ideal woman "is gentle, unaffected, liberal-minded and non-predatory."

Dean Cornwell, widely-known painter and illustrator, defines charm as "sex force under intellectual control."

When the author asked McClelland Barclay, noted artist, which screen women he thought were the most charming, he named Norma Shearer "because of her smartness and the intelligence portrayed by her looks and manner" and Ann Harding "for her womanliness, sweetness and understanding."

The late Florenz Ziegfeld, famous beauty connoisseur, told Miss Donnelly this: "Charm is illustrated in the way a woman walks, in the way she talks, in the quality of her speaking voice, in grace of gesture and mannerism, in ease and poise of manner and in the exquisite state of personal care and grooming."

Having thus told the reader what a number of noted persons consider the qualities of charm, Miss Donnelly proceeds to show how every woman can develop personal magnetism—can, in other words, achieve that elusive and potent thing that ranks above beauty and wit and brings "success in love, in business, in everyday affairs to that man or woman, boy or girl, who cultivates it."

She emphasizes the importance of good health and careful grooming, telling in detail how both of these can be achieved.

She suggests that every woman who would be charming should:

1. Cultivate an interest in others.
2. Go out of her way every day to make one person feel the world is a fine place in which to live.
3. Be a good listener.
4. Be tactful.
5. Observe the rules of etiquette.
6. Remember names of all persons she meets.
7. Write bread-and-butter notes promptly.
8. Cultivate a humorous outlook on life.

She advises women against: Telling indelicate stories, talking about their operations; calling attention to certain of their features in unflattering terms; arguing about subjects that are relatively unimportant; mannerisms; talking too much; being either a modest violet or a show-off; snobbishness.

She also stresses the importance of voice, posture and carriage, pointing out that physical grace has a great bearing on charm.

But of all the qualities that she mentions and analyzes, Miss Donnelly lays greatest emphasis on "wit of the pleasant sort—not the biting, sharp, bitter, sardonic, satiric wit," and tolerance, which she mentions as "one of the greatest secrets of social success."

New Methods Make Potatoes More Inviting

IN PLANNING any sort of a menu the inevitable refrain "* * * and of course potatoes" bobs up in the housewife's mind. In winter particularly, the potato is always counted upon to give substance to the meal.

For the very reason that potatoes appear so often on the menu the ways of serving them should be varied. With very little trouble the homely potato can be made interesting and even decorative. It need not alway come to the table in the fried, baked or boiled form.

If you don't want to serve a heavy meal at night, make stuffed potatoes with meat the main dish. Here is the recipe:

Stuffed Potatoes With Meat.

Pare six good sized potatoes, cut them into halves and scoop out the centers, leaving a wall a half-inch in thickness. Throw the potatoes into boiling water, boil for 10 minutes and drain. Stand them in a baking pan. Have ready cold cooked meat finely chopped and nicely seasoned. Fill the potatoes with the meat, dust the tops with bread crumbs, put in the center a piece of butter the size of a hickory nut, and bake in a moderately quick oven for a half-hour. Serve as a supper or luncheon dish.

Here is a new way to use left-over mashed potatoes:

Place the potatoes in a pan and sprinkle grated cheese generously over them. Dot with two or three pieces of butter and season with salt and pepper. Put into medium oven until the cheese has melted and the potatoes are heated through.

In today's menus the stuffed potatoes are featured in the evening meal.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

EVER SINCE they got married they've had their hands full—first with getting the new house all furnished and fixed, then with having a baby. So all in all they collected a big list of people they owed a party to. Now they are going to pay everybody off with one big splash and have a Valentine party—the very prettiest Valentine party they can think up. But the problem is—their living room and dining room are decorated in blue, beige and rust. So naturally a red and white Valentine motif would rather spoil the effect—just when they want their house to look its best. What would we suggest, they ask. And what is the simplest way to have a party for a lot of people?

Why not a pink and white Valentine party? That would be just as appropriate and would be lovely with blue and rust. Have pink candles, little pink iced heart-shaped cakes, pink and white ice cream, pink and white flowers and pink and white candies. The simplest way to entertain a lot of people—especially without a maid and in a smallish house—is to have a tea where the refreshments are easy to prepare and where people come and go.

Care Needed In Treatment By Diathermy

Old-Fashioned Water Heat Better Than Machines in Infections.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MANY of us will recall that heat held a prominent place among grandmother's remedies. For stomach ache we were compelled to drink hot water and hug a heated dinner plate to the stomach. Heated soapstones, bricks, flatiron, and jars filled with hot water were packed around us when we had a chill, or placed along the spine when it ached.

The trail blazed by our grandmothers has broadened as now applied to modern medicine. We have more elaborate equipment, but the principle is the same.

Within recent years engineers have provided numerous electrical devices involving the use of high-frequency currents, all designed to supply heat to various parts of the body. This plan of heating goes under the high-sounding name diathermy, a word meaning to heat through.

Although the high-frequency current is excellent in many disease conditions, it is not a cure-all. It will not stop the progress of pneumonia; it will not cure arthritis; it will not mend broken bones; neither will it kill bacteria in the tissues despite the generous claims made by certain enthusiasts.

In infections, diathermy cannot replace hot moist dressings or the direct application of hot water itself. We must not become bewildered or hypnotized by shiny, chromium-plated apparatus of any sort, the smell of ozone in the air, or the feeling of heat or tingling from an electrical source. We must recall that intelligence on the part of the physician is of far greater importance than any machine, regardless of its cost.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: May I say a few words from the housewife's point of view on this universally vexing problem of domestic service? Your column is the most interesting of its kind I have ever seen and the fairness and sound judgment displayed in your replies deserve great commendation.

I have been a middle-class housewife in moderate circumstances for over 20 years, and I have employed domestics in widely separated sections of the country, from California to New York. There are just myself and my husband in the family, and my own activities do not permit me to do my own housework. In each community where I have resided I have always paid the prevailing rate of wages for that particular locality and observed the accepted schedule of "time off," with considerable latitude as to extra concessions when occasion permitted. In other words, I have never overworked nor underpaid my help.

* * * *

My experience and observations during this period boil down to this: No other type of employer in the world would tolerate for one moment the lack of adequate training and ability, the careless and destructive wastefulness, the downright ignorance of the average servant that the housewife is expected to tolerate. The amount of illiteracy is appalling, and even those who can read and write after a fashion find simple fractions completely outside their comprehension for the most part.

If they do not respect themselves and their work, how can they expect anyone else to? No woman is going to permit a bad-tempered, sullen maid who is continually nursing some imaginary grievance or fancied slight to disrupt the peace and harmony of her home.

* * * *

Any homemaker worthy of the name takes pride in the neatness, orderliness, and beauty of her menage, be it ever so humble. Yet she risks destruction of valuable china and glassware and the ruin of expensive electrical equipment in the hands of indifferent, incompetent servants. References mean absolutely nothing any more, as women frankly admit they give recommendations to unsatisfactory maids to get rid of them. These same maids expect and demand the scale of wages that the really efficient can command, which is manifestly unfair to all parties concerned.

PARTICULAR HOUSEWIFE.

DEAR HOUSEWIFE: Thank you for your interesting letter and agreeable comment on the column. The domestic servant problem has been discussed here from so many angles during the past six weeks I had supposed there was little left to say. Yet in giving us the middleclass housewife's appraisal of the servant class as she knows it, you have approached the subject from a new direction. And for my part, out of my own experience as a homemaker, I believe there is considerable truth in what you say.

* * * *

If one expects to have the best servants, one must secure those highly trained and of superior intelligence and pay them accordingly; or, as an alternative, take into one's household green help, so-called, and patiently train such help in the service required. If, during the training period, one establishes the right social relationship with one's domestic employe—of kindly consideration on the employer's part; of loyal devotion on the servant's part—one may, possibly, find one's self with an excellent domestic employe whose salary demands are not prohibitive.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt Entertain at Reception for Members of Congress

came in for a great deal of attention as she made the rounds under the wing of Senator Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas. Miss Long looks somewhat like her famous father, Mrs. Long, who took her oath of office today, did not attend, although an invitation was sent to her yesterday afternoon from the White House.

Niece With Mrs. Norton.

Others there were Representative Mary T. Norton, who was accompanied by her niece, Miss Mary McDonaugh, the former wearing a gown of black tulle and black lace. Miss Donaugh wore a printed crepe frock. The Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. John Russell were there, the latter in a gown of silvery grey satin with the draped neckline held in place by two jeweled clips. With this she wore three strands of pearls.

Representative and Mrs. Robert Green were present, the latter wearing a gown of white crepe made on long lines; also Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, the latter wearing a printed frock with a black background and black accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Hurja recently returned from a trip around the world, after a brief visit in the Philippines, where they went to attend the inaugural of the first President of the Philippine Commonwealth. Also seen were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henderson, the latter wearing a gown of black velvet made on simple lines; Mrs. James E. Helm, who wore an attractive gown of gray lace, with a corsage of varied colored flowers; and Mrs. Malvina Thompson Scheider, secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt, who wore a red velvet robe de style, caught with jeweled clasps.

Also glimpsed were Representative and Mrs. Paul Brown, of Georgia; the delegate from Hawaii, Mr. Samuel King, with his daughter, Miss Charlotte King, who wore a gown of silver lame, made entirely of tiny accordion pleats; and Representative Bertrand Snell, with his daughter, Miss Sara Louise Snell.

Among other members of the House of Representatives present were Representative and Mrs. Edward W. Curley, the latter wearing a bouffant frock of brown crepe and a corsage of pink roses; Representative and Mrs. Fred L. Crawford, the latter wearing a gown of white lace; Representative Edward W. Creal and Representative and Mrs. William M. Colmer.

Representative and Mrs. Charles J. Colden were hosts to a party of friends at the reception. Mrs. Colden was gowned in white crepe and her daughter, Miss Abbie Bel Colden, wore a white satin crepe made on Grecian lines and trimmed with blue beads at the neck and on the belt. Her cousin, Miss Crystal Hall, who accompanied them, wore a frock of chartreuse crepe, with a gold belt and gold clips at the shoulder.

Others glimpsed were Representative John J. Delaney, Representative Samuel Dickstein, Representative and Mrs. Wilburn Cartwright, the latter wearing a blouse of gold lace, made in cape effect, over a black crepe skirt; Representative John M. Costello, accompanied by his secretary, Mr. Emmett McCabe, and Representative Crosser, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Barbara Crosser, and his son, Mr. Robert Crosser, jr. Miss Crosser wore a frock of French blue crepe, with gold flowers and gold slippers.

Miss Cavicchia Present.

Representative and Mrs. Andrew J. May had as guests at the reception Mrs. Porter Mayo, of Kentucky, and Mrs. David C. Herndon. Representative Peter A. Cavicchia was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Priscilla Cavicchia, who wore a gown of tangerine chiffon, made on Grecian lines.

Chatting with friends in the dining room were Representative and Mrs. Francis D. Culkin, Representative and Mrs. E. E. Cox, the latter wearing a white crepe gown trimmed in rhinestones; Representative and Mrs. Ben Cravens, the latter wearing a gown of white lame; Representative Eugene B. Crowe; Representative and Mrs. Harold D. Cooley, Representative and Mrs. Ralph E. Church, the latter in black net with chenille; Representative and Mrs. Frank Crowther, the latter wearing light blue and gold lame with garnet clips at the shoulder; Representative and Mrs. D. Worth Clark, the latter in a frock of chalk-white crepe, embroidered with circles outlined in rhinestones; Representative and Mrs. Braswell Deen, the latter in a frock of black velvet, with a black net collar trimmed with sequins; Representative and Mrs. John J. Dempsey, the latter wearing a gown of white satin, with two clips at the shoulder, and Representative Bryant T. Castellow, who was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Gertrude Castellow, who wore a frock of pink satin, trimmed with mink at the neck, and made with a train.

Representative Virginia E. Jenckes, who was guest of honor at a dinner given last night by Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, of New York and Chicago, at the Mayflower, entertained a large party at the reception. In the company were Mrs. Morris, Miss Virginia Ray Jenckes, Miss Carol Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henderson, Miss Marie Isabel de Arostegui, Mr. William Huff and Mr. George Davis, Mrs. Ellis Johnston, of Greenville, S. C., and Miss Mary Johnston, of Lebanon, Ky., also were guests of Mrs. Jenckes at the reception. Mrs. Jenckes wore a blue gown with a demi train, while her daughter was gowned in white seersucker taffeta, with fuchsia flowers. Miss Jenckes' gown was designed on old-fashioned lines, with a full skirt and a jacket having leg-o-mutton sleeves and a frilled collar.

Representative Isabella Greenway wore springlike flowered taffeta. Representative Edith Nourse Rogers was another of the feminine Representatives attending. Representative Caroline O'Day, wearing a black-and-white gown, was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Ella O'Day.

Representative and Mrs. Frank J. G. Dorsey were glimpsed coming from the state dining room. Mrs. Dorsey wore a simply made floor-length gown of white crepe. Miss Reba Doughton, accompanied by her parents, Representative and Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, the latter wearing a plum-colored gown with a train.

Representative Wall Doxey, who was accompanied by Mrs. Doxey, gowned in black net and wearing vivid red roses, and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Goode were seen leaving the dining room with a group of friends.

Representative and Mrs. D. J. Driscoll were among the guests. Mrs. Driscoll was dressed in black and wore pearls.

John Y. Brown Is Guest.

Mrs. Thomas O'Malley, who accompanied Representative O'Malley, was gowned in a costume of gray chiffon and coral accessories. Former Representative John Y. Brown, of Kentucky, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley. Representative and Mrs. Roy E. Ayers were there, the latter wearing a black lace gown.

Depresentative and Mrs. William B. Bankhead did not attend because of the illness of Mrs. Bankhead.

In a group at one end of the dining room were Representative and Mrs. Graham A. Barden, the latter wearing a gown of blue aquamarine, with pink roses; Mrs. Stephen Gambrill, Representative and Mrs. John J. Delaney, Representative and Mrs. Joseph B. Shannon, Representative and Mrs. John J. McGrath, and Representative and Mrs. John M. O'Connell.

Representative and Mrs. Joe L. Smith were accompanied by their sons, Mr. Joseph L. Smith, jr., and M. Hulett Smith, and by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Griffith, and Miss Mary Alice Tieche, of Beckley, W. Va., who are their guests at the Mayflower. Mrs. Stephen M. Young, who attended the reception with Representative Young and Miss Marjorie Young, wore a blue gown.

Glimpsed near the entrance to the dining room were Representative and Mrs. W. D. McFarland, Representative and Mrs. William J. Sears, in Senator and Mrs. Deitrich's party, and Representative and Mrs. J. Leroy Adair, the latter wearing a lavender-blue moire gown trimmed in cerise.

Mrs. Orville Sardeson, of Chicago, was present as the guest of Representative and Mrs. August H. Anderson. Mrs. Anderson wore a gown of figured taffeta, with a short train.

Accompanying Representative and Mrs. Harold D. Cooley were Mrs. Cooley's mother, Mrs. J. T. Strickland, of Nashville, N. C., Miss Adele Downey and Mrs. Elizabeth Vaughn. Mrs. Cooley wore a white chiffon gown studded with rhinestones and fashioned on Grecian lines. Mrs. Strickland wore blue lace, while Miss Downey was gowned in black velvet and Mrs. Vaughn in gold metal cloth.

Representative and Mrs. Harry L. Haines had as guests their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Haines, and son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Adams.

Representative Knute Hill was accompanied by Mrs. Lottie Lampton, Mrs. Hill's sister. Mrs. Hill was unable to attend because of illness.

Daughter in Party.

Miss Jean Goodwin, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Philip A. Goodwin, accompanied her parents. Representative and Mrs. William M. Berlin were in the state dining room. Mrs. Berlin was gowned in white. Mrs. Schuyler Otis Bland, who accompanied Representative Bland to the reception, wore a black satin gown and gardenias.

Representative and Mrs. William J. Driver had as their guests their niece, Miss Louise Hale, and Miss Virginia Blackwood. Mrs. Driver wore a white costume, with a corsage of white flowers.

Miss Shirley Blackney, wearing tangerine lace with a train and a corsage of gardenias, accompanied her father, Representative William W. Blackney. Mrs. Blackney is spending some time in Michigan.

Chatting with friends at the entrance to the red room were Representative and Mrs. Warren J. Duffey, the latter wearing a gown of rust velvet with gold accessories.

Representative and Mrs. Thomas L. Blanton, the latter in white satin, were accompanied by their son and daughter, Mr. Joseph Blanton and Miss Anne Blanton.

Representative Aubert C. Dunn and Representative Matthew A. Dunn attended the reception alone, their wives being out of town.

Mrs. C. G. Binderup, wearing a gray velvet gown with yellow flowers, accompanied Representative Binderup. Representative and Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, the latter wearing a gown of blue and silver lame, were hosts of Mr. and Mrs. Cochran M. Imhoff, of Missouri.

Representative and Mrs. George A. Johnson were unable to attend the reception because of Mrs. Johnson's departure for Parkersburg, W. Va., last night.

Searses Bring Guest.

Also attending were Representative and Mrs. William J. Sears, the latter gowned in a satin print with a predominating shade of violet blue, trimmed with rhinestones. Their house guest, Miss Virginia Evans, Representative and Mrs. William N. Rogers, Representative and Mrs. Harry L. Engelbright and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Engelbright, of Toronto; Representative and Mrs. Charles I. Faddis, the latter gowned in pink; Representative and Mrs. Phil Ferguson, Representative and Mrs. Edward C. Eicher, and Representative and Mrs. R. Ewing Thomason, the latter gowned in silver lame, fashioned with a high neck and cowl back, and their guest, Miss Charlene Watkins, of El Paso, Tex.

Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., did not attend the reception because of the recent death of the former's father.

Representative and Mrs. James I. Farley, the latter gowned in black velvet fashioned with a short train, had as their guests, their daughters, Mrs. J. D. Spurrier, who wore a gold lace gown, and Miss Maxine Farley, wearing a frock of peach moire with tallsman roses.

Mrs. Joseph A. Herbert, jr., daughter of the late Senator Gronna, was present wearing a gown of blue lace, made with a train, and with a corsage of orchids. She was accompanied by her young son, Mr. Joseph Gronna Herbert, and her niece, Miss Alice Cowing, who wore a frock of blue taffeta.

Carolinians to Dance.

The North Carolina Society will hold a Valentine party on Saturday evening in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Dancing will continue from 9 to 12:30.

On the Air Today

"PARTIES AT PICKFAIR" begin tonight at WJSV at 10—something new and different in radio programs, so the advance publicity says. For the first time a series of programs will originate from the home of a Hollywood screen celebrity—Mary Pickford, to be exact.

The idea is that listeners the country over will have the privilege of attending the first lady of Hollywood's parties each Tuesday night. (However, they will be staged a little earlier than usual, the hour in California being 7 p. m.)

They will be made to feel at home, will hear the informal chatter. For the first show tonight, Edward Everett Horton is billed for top mention. Also to participate is Countess De Frasso.

The Pickford home has been wired for microphones in such a way that guests will be as unaware as possible of the broadcasting—and, hence, theoretically free of inhibitions. Al Lyons and his orchestra will contribute a sizable number of current popular tunes.

Miss Pickford will preside as hostess. The theme song to be used is "Moonlight in Hilo."

Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes
Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.
When the passing of water is scanty, with smarting and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.
If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 3 pounds a day. Insist on Doan's Pills.

Going to town with Luckies
A LIGHT SMOKE
of rich, ripe-bodied tobacco

Over a period of years, certain basic advances have been made in the selection and treatment of cigarette tobaccos for Lucky Strike Cigarettes.

They include preliminary analyses of the tobacco selected; use of center leaves; the higher heat treatment of tobacco ("Toasting"); consideration of acid-alkaline balance, with consequent definite improvement in flavor; and controlled uniformity in the finished product.

All these combine to produce a superior cigarette—a modern cigarette, a cigarette made of rich, ripe-bodied tobaccos—A Light Smoke.

Luckies are less acid

Parents Call City Schools Unfit to Use

Somber Picture Painted; Five-Year Building Needs Stressed.

Overcrowded classrooms, children taught in basements and corridors, antiquated structures lacking proper heating, ventilating and sanitary facilities; inadequate playgrounds, a dearth of auditoriums and gymnasiums, fire and traffic hazards—that was the picture of Washington schools painted last night at the semiannual meeting of parent organizations with the Board of Education at the Franklin Administration Building.

The darker aspects of District schools were stressed at the meeting called to receive suggestions for the proposed five-year school building program to be drawn up for inclusion in the 1938 budget.

Statements and letters read by some 200 representatives of Parent-Teacher associations, citizens and civic groups, left a somber picture of the inadequacy of present school buildings to take care of Washington's 90-odd thousanr school children and of the imperative need for launching a comprehensive building program if an additional 10,000 to 15,000 children are to be accomodated by 1492.

Relief Often Petitioned.

Spokesmen for these various groups have presented the school needs of their respective communities and petitioned the board of education for relief. Requests for new buildings to make possible the elimination of "basement" classes, as with the Lenox Vocational School; improvement of heating facilities, as at the Ketcham and John Eaton schools; the completion of overtaxed high schools, such as Theodore Roosevelt and Taft, or a rapidly growing subsurban community, such as the Hillcrest-Summit Park area desiring the erection of new elementary schools within walking distance.

In opening the meeting, Mrs. Henry G. Doyle, president of the board stressed the need of a "long-range view" in the school system, and emphasized the purpose of the new five-year school building program was "to secure the most efficient and economic use of our school system by having school buildings ready for our children when they are ready for the schools."

Superintendent of School Ballou then analyzed briefly the pending school budget, distributing mimeographed statements of the original budget prepared by the board of education, the reduced estimates of the Commissioners and the still further reduced estimates of the Budget Bureau.

Among the building projects eliminated from the board's original budget were eight-room additions to ingsman, eKtcham, Monroe Cook, Syphax and Giddings schools; the replacement of the Lenox Vocational School; improvement of Armstrong High School; plans and specifications for the construction of senior high schools in the vicinity of Takoma Park, Sixteenth and Rhode IsIland avenue, and Twenty-fourth and Benning road, both northeast, and the eviction of two eight-romo schools on Bunker Hill site and Bladensburg road.

Need for Items Stressed.

Without exception, the need of these items eliminated by the Commissioners and Budget Bureau was stressed by the parents' spokesmen and suggested for re-submittance in the new school building program.

The gloom of the meeting was lightened slightly by two definite promises of relief. One, announced by Mrs. Doyle, told of a new proposal to resurface playgrounds that is being sponsored by the co-ordinator of recreation activities. The second, by Dr. Ballou, forecast the use of combination junior and senior high schools in suburban communities where there are an insufficient number of school children to warrant two separate schools, but a large enough school population for a single school.

"I stand fundamentally for the proposition that we ought to develop our schools nearer to the homes of the children," Dr Ballou declared. "There is no plan that could be developed so successfully as the combination junior and senior high schools."

Among the numerous suggestoins for the new building program were the following:

Vital Needs Lisied.

Construction of an addition to the Powell School, now being used as a demonstration school for Wilson Teachers College.

Addition of four rooms and a playground to Buchanan School, where an excess of 100 pupils are enrolled, with two classes being conducted in the basement and 120 first-grade and kindergarten children on part-time.

Appropriation of $125,000 for the addition of seven rooms and corridor to Roosevelt High School, which has a seating capacity of 1,500 and an enrollment of 1,875.

Relief of conditions at the Emory School where 700 children are crowded into 17 classrooms, with no auditorium and a single toilet being used by 350 boys.

Completion of the Taft Junior High School, which now has an excess enrollment of 166 children.

Erection of a new senior high school at Sixteenth street and Rhode Island avenue to relieve congested conditions at McKinley Technical High.

An eight-room addition to the Birney School.

A ten-room addition to the Kingsman School, and improved playground and sanitary facilities for Kingsman, Edmonds and Maury Schools.

Erection of a new elementary school in the Trinidad district to relieve Wheatley School.

A new eight-room school building with auditorium and playground to be erected near Branch and Alabama avenues to relieve crowding at Stanton School and to provide Hillcrest community with a school which can be reached by children without crossing busy Naylor road.

Erection of a new elementary school to replace the Wallach, Cranch and Tyler Schools, among the oldest in the city.

Construction of an addition to the Paul Junior High.

An eight-room addition to the Banneker School, where there are six part-time classes and no playground or gymnasium, the children being crowded into a cramped basement on rainy days.

Irwin, 6 Others Placed on Trial In Gaming Case

Letts Orders Lock-Up of Jurors Following Choice of Panel.

Morris E. (Dutch) Irwin, and six men who allegedly conspired with him in the operation of a gaming establishment in the 1100 block of Fourteenth street northwest, in which more than 40 men were found when police raided it last October, went on trial in the District Supreme Court yesterday amid unusual precautionary measures.

Hardly had a jury of six white and six colored men been chosen, than Justice F. Dickinson Letts announced he would issue orders that the jury be kept locked up for the duration of the trial, which is expected to last for at least three days. The jurors were taken to luncheon with a guard of deputy marshals, and last night they were quartered in a hotel at Government expense.

Wilbur S. Carroll, Leonard F. Hill, Frank E. Crandall, Morris A. Mahone and James McIntyre were arrested in the raid. Irwin, police said, was not found in the place, but was arrested on one of the lower floors of the building on a warrant.

Defense Attorneys Harry T. Whelan and Charles E. Ford, and Assistant United States Attorneys Roger Robb and Samuel F. Beach, frequently clashed during the selection of a jury. Each side had definite ideas about the make-up of the jury and members were frequently stricken from the list before they had a chance to become comfortably seated.

Police said they found much gambling paraphernalia when they quietly surrounded the place and smashed in its doors several months ago. The evidence, placed in the courtroom, resulted in the doors being locked when court adjourned.

'Battle of Session' Promised In Clash Over Anti-Red 'Rider'

'Challenger' Sisson to Meet 'Texas Tornado' in Ten Minute Rounds Before Representatives Today; Anti-Communism to be Topic.

The "Battle of the Session" is promised on the floor of the House shortly afternoon today when Challenger Sisson (Democrat), of New York, will encounter Tom Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, champion of the anti-red District "rider."

Both members gave their colleagues notice of the impending clash yesterday by asking unanimous consent to address the House for ten minutes on the anti-communism proviso of the District appropriations act.

As each of the two possesses a powerful voice, House members with ringside chairs will have no advantage over listeners in the last row of the gallery.

Sisson explained his purpose in taking the floor will be to answer Blanton's recent personal attack. He will then reiterate his views on the anti-communism proviso.

Blanton merely asked time to reply to Sisson.

Several members whom Blanton, the Texas tornado, has labeled "wild company," will be at the ringside to get in a few thrusts of oratory, or at least a hiss or two.

Marcantonio Talks At Scottsboro Rally

Representative Vito Marcantonio (Democrat), of New York, and former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, were the principal speakers last night at a mass meeting held in the auditorium of the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church, under auspices of the provisional Scottsboro committee, which seeks to raise funds for liberation of the Scottsboro boys in the famous Alabama case.

State rights, as they affect judicial systems, were discussed by Representative Marcantonio, especially with reference to their consideration in cases such as that at Scottsboro, and the Angelo Herndon case at Atlanta. He indicated his intention to introduce a bill in Congress to investigate the vigilante system in America, calculated to expose preparation of vigalantes to strike a blow for establishment of American fascism.

Senator Brookhart presented a picture of judicial procedures in Moscow, as compared with those in Alabama and Washington, to demonstrate why it is not possible here to give the Scottsboro boys a trial that all people would regard as fair and impartial.

Dr. Ralph Bunche, of Howard University, indicated measures of retaliation in the South by colored groups to demonstrate sentiment of younger groups of both races regarding the Scottsboro case. Other speakers included Thurman L. Dodson, president of the Washington Bar Association; George B. Murphy, Nannie H. Burroughs, and Mrs. Virginia Richardson McGuire, who presided.

Archives Duties Explained by Hull

Functions of the National Archives establishment were clarified yesterday at a meeting of the National Archives Council, presided over by Secretary of State Hull.

Acting upon recommendations of Dr. R. D. W. Connor, archivist of the United States, the council adopted a resolution authorizing the acquisition of documents and records falling within any of the following classes:

Those in possession of a Government agency which has no use for them; archives in such physical condition they cannot be handled without damage; those for which adequate storage cannot be provided; records of defunct agencies.

"We should approach our duty in a manner that will save us from allowing this vastly important work to become a matter of routine," Secretary Hull told members of the council.

Secretary Dern, Secretary Ickes and Postmaster General Farley were other Cabinet members who attended the council session. Proxies represented Secretaries Morgenthau, Swanson, Wallace, Roper and Perkins, and Attorney General Cummings. Others present were Dr. Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress; Dr. Charles Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and Representative Kent Keller, chairman of the House Committee on the Library.

Delegate Seat Open.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Keyser, W. Va., Feb. 10.—The seat in the House of Delegates from Mineral County, left vacant by the resignation of George F. Parrish, will be filled by appointment by Gov. Kump. Parrish's resignation followed his appointment as registrar of motor vehicles with the State Road Commission. He turned back a $500 check sent him as salary as a member of the House. Parrish came here from Christiansburg, Va., some few years ago as an athletic coach.

Police Strike At Gambling; Raid Nets 3

Reputed Wire Headquarters Serving 40 Offices Smashed.

Brown Calls Estimate of $1,500,000 Numbers 'Take' Too High.

The police vice squad yesterday struck a blow which was said to have partially paralyzed the city's bookmaking activities when they raided a wire headquarters which allegedly furnished racing information to 40 or 50 "branch offices" where bets were taken.

Three men were arrested, charged with setting up a gaming table and later released on bond. They described themselves as James Joyce, 60, of the 4,000 block of Garrison street northwest; Joseph Essex, 38, of the 1500 block of Gales street northeast, and Thomas Brennen, 41, of Riverdale, Md.

Lieut. Little said he regarded the men arrested as merely employes of the establishment. He said that the operator is known to police and is a man who has been the "big shot" of Washington gaming circles for the last 20 years.

Smashed Their Way In.

The policemen were accompanied in their raid by two United States deputy marshals. The party crept up the stairs of the building to the fourth floor and smashed their way into a three-room apartment. There they found the three men, 14 telephone transmitters and an elaborate set-up of switches which linked the establishment with outside wires to the branch offices, police said.

The estimate made earlier in the day by J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, that the "numbers game" takes more than $1,500,000 annually from the pockets of Washington men and women, was challenged yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Superintendent of Police.

At Hoover's office it was learned that the estimate, made in an interview with the Associated Press, was based on a "bird dog" survey of local racketeering. "Bird dog," it was explained, meant a "quick look" and by no means an exhaustive study.

Records of arrests on "numbers" charges, Maj. Brown said, indicated that Hoover's figure was considerably in excess of the probable intake by local racketeers. The inability of city police to check the "game" he traced principally to the fact that convictions on the writing on numbers were difficult to obtain in the courts under the present laws.

Bill Passed by Senate.

A bill already approved by the Senate and now pending in the House of Representatives, Maj. Brown pointed out, would alter this situation by prohibiting the "numbers" game and would give local police power to cope with the situation.

Brown revealed that some time ago he had requested the assistance of two undertower men from the Bureau of Investigation to check the spread of the "numbers" game, but that his request had been rejected by Hoover on the grounds that the Federal Government lacked jurisdiction.

The possibility that U. S. agents may join with local officials in stamping out the racket was indicated in a statement in Hoover's interview that many of the "numbers" activities are reported ot be centered in a group controlling the notorious gambling house in the Bladensburg road, just over the District line.

500 Attend Reception Honoring Isaac Gans

Alvin Hall, director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing (left) greets Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gans at the testimonial for Gans last night.

Retired Merchant and Civic Leader Praised by Speakers for Many Years of Public Service; Presented With Testimonial Scroll.

Many years of public service by Isaac Gans, retired merchant and civic leader, were rewarded last night when 500 persons attended a testimonial reception in his honor.

The Mayflower Hotel ballroom was thronged with Mr. Gans' friends, including scores of prominent persons, as he was hailed as "a true citizen" and "a friend of man" by many speakers.

One could hear the proverbial pin drop as the dimunitive Mr. Gans, in a somewhat faltering voice, responded ti what one speaker called "these preliminary absequies."

"I really believe," Mr. Gans said, "that somewhere above my parents are looking down and saying, 'Son, you have not lived in vain.'"

Recalls Mother's Teachings.

Tears welled in the eyes of many in the audience as the philanthropist and member of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board told how he had tried to live up to the admonitoins of his mother to "be kind, be good, be generous and do to other people what you would have them do to you."

Bishop James E. Freeman lauded the civic leader as the type of man who should be emulated by everyone.

"When the sunset comes, Mr. Gans," he said, "may you know you have left behind a reputation and a record wihch will be your just reward."

Audience Cheers Tribute.

"On behalf of the Catholics of the city," he added, "I would like to say we can't pay Mr. Gans what we owe him. We can only express our gratitude. He has supported every worthy cause here in the past 50 years."

Before singing several numbers with Fred East and Bernard Fitzgerald, George O'Connor told how the honor guest once volunteered to provide financial ai to his wife when he was ill.

"That's the kind of bird Ike Gans is," O'Connor shouted as the audiance cheered.

Dr. Abram Simon commended Mr. Gans as a "gentleman by instinct" and said it would be impossible to "count the hearts which beat in sympathy with him."

Representative Tom Blanton (Democrat), Texas, declared no one "could help being a friend of Isaac Gans" and told how the philanthropist made him feel as though he "owned the city" when he visited Washington before his election to Congress.

Judge Robert E. Mattingly was applauded when he mentioned Mr. Blanton in his eulogy of Mr. Gans.

House Passes Bill to Revise Job-Security

Non-Profit Colleges and Religious Schools Are Exempted From Tax.

King Offers Measure in Senate for Codifying District Laws.

The House yesterday passed without debate or explanation by the author or chairman of the House District committee the Ellenbogen bill to amend the District social security act to exempt religious institutions and schools and non-profit colleges and universities from the pay roll tax and unemployment insurance.

While some opposition to the measure had been rumored after the House District Committee met in special session to consider the proposals of a group headed by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, the objections did not materialize.

Chairman King of the Senate District Committee, introduced three District bills in the Senate, one of which would carry through his long-talked-of proposal to codify the District laws.

Codification Proposed.

This measure authorizes the codification under the joint direction of the Senate and House District Committees and carries an authorization of $20,000.

The joint committees are empowered to employ two attorneys, one at an annual salary of $5,000 and the other at $3,000, together with clerks, stenographers, and other aids, to overhaul and modernize Washington statutes, some of which apply to horse and buggy traffic and conditions.

Besides restating and codifying District laws, the joint committees are authorized to include such new legislation as may be desirable or necessary.

The new code would be prepared in sections and presented to Congress piecemeal for enactment. The bill states that preferable consideration shall be given criminal statutes.

Traffic Penalty Bill.

Senator King also introduced the bill requested by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and approved by the District Commissioners to increase the penalties for reckless driving.

A fine of $500 or six months' imprisonment, or both, is fixed as the penalty for first offense conviction of reckless driving by the bill, while the penalty for second and subsequent offenses is $1,000 fine, or one year imprisonment, or both.

The present law imposes a fine of $100, or 30 days in jail.

Merger of the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light Companies is provided in the third bill introduced by Senator King. It had been offered previously in the House.

Senator King also filed a favorable report on behalf of his committee on the uniform sales bill.

Local Doctor Elected By U. S. Heart Group

Dr. Wallace Mason Yater, professor of medicine at Georgetown University and chairman of the scientific committee of the Washington Heart Association, has just been elected a director of the American Heart Association, it was announced yesterday. The American Heart Association and its regional affiliated associations, such as the Washington Heart Association, have as objects the prevention, treatment and study of heart disease.

The Washington Heart Association, to which belong all physicians of the District of Columbia interested in heart disease and many prominent laymen, has been in existence for several years. It derives its support from the Community Chest.

'Equal Justice Under Law' Fails to Apply to Traffic Violators, Favored Few Escaping Penalty Through Rank or Influence

(Editor's note: In an effort to determine the answer to Washington's present traffic problem, with its mounting toll of accidents, The Post has assigned a reporter to learn the reason behind violations of traffic regulations. A reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, has been cruising in a police car. To vary his activities, he conducted a lone "observation" tour yesterday. This is the thirtieth in a series of stories.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

"Equal Justice Under Law."

Gleaming under a brilliant sun, this motto, inscribed on white marble atop the new United States Supreme Court Building entrance, caught our eye yesterday.

It seemed to strike a chord—or should we sa discord—of resentment. (Purely ersonal.) It was while returning from another lone "observation" tour in search of the "reason why" behind traffic law violations that this inscription attracted our attention.

And it brought to mind—vividly—a few incidents of the day. It brought to mind that dignified Government official who flaunted Washington's safety rules—and got away with it. And it brought to mind that pair of wanton speed demons who likewise laughed and got away with it.

One "got away with it" because of his high position and the others because there didn't happen to be a law enforcement officer at hand.

But there was still another who appeared in Traffic Court accused of negligent driving. Through an able attorney, long-winded testimony and friendly witnesses, he got away with speeding at 42 miles an hour by creating a "reasonable doubt" in the judge's mind.

Day in and day out, there are law-breaking motorists who take their punishment — whether they like it or not. Some take it willingly, some sheepishly and some begrudgingly. But for the most part, they take it. But what about the "favored" few?

Our incident involving the high official was witnessed at First street and Michigan avenue northwest. The law says that a member of Congress while enroute to, or from or while attending sessions of the House or Senate is not subject to arrest.

It swung into First street, turning right from Michigan avenue. Not once did the driver slacken his speed. He "took" the corner in a wide swing. Had there been traffic along First street, the result would have been a serious accident.

As the driver made the turn, the rear of his car careened dizzily. He straightened out and continued at a rapid pace. The turn didn't feaze him.

The next incident was along Georgia avenue northwest. Two cars were racing abreast at breakneck speed. One machine (it bore an emblem of the District Government) attempted to pass the other. Both speeded up. The race was on. Rear bumpers of the cars locked together.

Streets were slushly and slippery. A false move and one machine would have swerved into the oncoming lane of traffic. Injury and possible death might have resulted.

But nothing happened—they got away with it. No policeman was around.

In Traffic Court, a young man was arraigned for speeding. The policeman testified that he paced him at 42 miles an hour on Bladensburg road northeast.

The young man produced a receipt showing (he said) that his car was in a filling station for repairs just before the policeman stopped him. The statoin, it developed, was located several blocks beyond the point where he was arrested. The policeman said he never reached that point and the reecipt was obtained several days after the speeding incident.

"That car was never out of my sight," said the policeman.

"It is a plain case of mistaken identity," said the young man's lawyer.

And then two witnesses, friends of the accused driver, took the witness stand. They said their companion "couldn't have been speeding." Then they admitted they were sitting on the rear seat and couldn't see the speedometer.

It was their word against the policeman. And they won. The case was dismissed. Yet the policeman risked his neck to catch the speeder.

Now listen to the words of a taxi driver:

"All this fining and taking permits isn't going to stop reckless driving. Now me—I've had eight 'tickets' this winter and all I got to dois to go down where I got high-up friends and tell them to 'fix me up.' I ain't paid a fine this year and I have eight cabs and they ain't paid a fine either.

"At one time it was so you could 'fix it up' with the cop. But now you got to take it to the 'higher-ups.' But I ain't kickin'—I got plenty of friends."

"Equal Justice Under Law?" Seems to be a good motto—why make it a mockery?

Four Sterling Films Are Chosen "Best of Month" by National Preview Groups

Three Already Viewed Locally; One Here Soon

No Musical Is Nominated; Film Pleases Skeptics; About the Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

That helpful little brochure from the Will H. Hays office, dated February 1 and labeled "Selected Motion Pictures," with an expository subhead to the effect that they represent the "Evaluations of current films by West and East Coast preview committees and the preview board on musical films," nominates four outstanding motion picture productions as the "Best of the Month."

All are nonmusical film plays, three of which have already been viewed in the Capitol, with the fourth coming along for the week beginning Friday at the Earle Theater.

I suspect that the order of their naming has no significance, since all are "best," but it may have. At any rate, the choices of the national preview groups, in the order in which the pamphlet names them, are "Captain Blood," "Ceiling Zero," "Magnificent Obsession" and "Petrified Forests."

This selection gives the Warner Brothers-First National studios considerably the best of it, with three out of the four, Universal winning the distinction of the other inclusion with the Irene Dunn vehicle that played so notable an engagement on the screen at RKO-Keith's.

Flynn Moved Up.

Errol Flynn did particularly well for himself in "Captain Blood," the first major, stellar opportunity he has had, and so did Olivia de Havilland, the youthful actress who first came to prominence in the Hollywood Bowl production of Max Reinhardt's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and then repeated that success in the screen version of Shakespeare's gossamer fantasy, under the supervision of the same master director.

"Ceiling Zero," by reason of its too great revelation of detail and the consequent destruction of the element of suspense, I thought inferior to the stage play by Commander Frank Wead, but it still was an excellent picture—especially for those who never had seen the play. "Petrified Forest" we shall have something to say about a little later on in these casual remarks.

Incidentally, the preview groups like "Anything Goes" best of the musicals. Even so, that many people might be wrong!

Speaking of screen wingers, as somebody seems to have been, "A Tale of Two Cities," the admirable filmization of the Charles Dickens novel of the French Revolution, starring Ronald Colman, in January won the overwhelming approval of the Nation's leading civic, religious, educational and newspaper figures in the National Screen Council's vote for the best picture released during the month. Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, under the direction of Frank Conway, "A Tale of Two Cities" is the second of this company Dickens adaptations to achieve distinction. The first was "David Copperfield," in which the young Master Freddie Bartholomew soared to such juvenile heights that no one of his years so far has been able to parallel his performance.

Two Notables Give in!

The traditional conception of the playwright who tears his hair on witnessing the film interpretation of his brain-child received a severe debunking recently from no less a loyal apostle of stage dramaturgy than Robert E. Sherwood.

Mr. Sherwood was heartily seconded in his tribute to Hollywood by Producer Gilbert Miller, who recently put on "Victoria Regina" here with Helen Hayes, heretofore inclined to an admitted skepticism of movie melodrama.

The Messers. Sherwood and Miller issued their startling and completely unexpected verdict after witnessing a private showing of the film version of "The Petrified Forest," starring Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, due to be shown to the public at the Earle Theater on Friday.

Mr. Sherwood, as nearly everyone knows, penned the stage version of the play, which was a Broadway success, and Mr. Miller produced it. Yesterday they proceeded, not without some trepidation, to the Warner Bros. executive offices on West Forty-fourth street, in New York, for their first look at what the movies had done to their play.

Author Is Ecstatic.

Mr. Sherwood—all 6 feet 4 of him—was just a little incoherent when the lights went up.

"I never dreamed they would follow the play so closely," he exclaimed. "Why, you know some of those long speeches that the hero gets off * * * well, I surely thought they would cut those in the scenario. Of course, I sort of hoped they wouldn't because, after all, I took a lot of time and pains over those lines.

"Then, there is the cast," he continues. "It's marvelous. I don't like to hurt anyone's feelings, but really I think the cast is a trifle better in the movie than the play."

Mr. Miller, at this point, seized his playwright by the arm and cried, "I say, this gives me an idea. Do you know that bit of business in the last act when the hero gets shot? Did you notice that the movie changes it a trifle? What do you say to changing the play when we open it in London?"

Sherwood pondered briefly and suddenly nodded in emphatic agreement. It seems that in the play the hero simply asks the gangster to kill him, but in the movie version he throws himself in front of a door and thereby forces the gunman to open fire.

"I had a tough time over that scene, rewrote it a dozen times," Sherwood admitted. "It's more dramatic this way. I wish I had thought of the trick myself."

A Nervous Playwright.

Mr. Sherwood, frankly admitted that he had been more nervous only once before in his life—when his first play, "The Road to Rome," opened in Washington in 1927. He's becoming more and more of a movie convert, he says, and will be off to England shortly to do a picture with his friend, Rene Clair, famous French director. This is not odd, since he formerly was "movie" editor of Life.

Mr. Clair, whose "A Nous la Liberte" was recently at the Belasco, also attended yesterday's preview. Here is what he had to say: "The quality of Sherwood's dialogue is splendid, simple and direct. I liked the picture very much. It is splendidly made, has strong situations and beautiful photography.

Mr. Miller, after he had collected himself and conferred briefly with Mr. Sherwood, said:

"This is the most entertaining picture I have ever seen. In fact, I might say it is the first time I have seen the movies equal the stage in adequately presenting a drama. I, myself, have been more or less skeptical about Hollywood productions in the past, chiefly because there are certain things which won't pass the movie censors. But the censors don't seem to have hurt this play a bit and I think that is very encouraging."

Credit for directing the movie which seems to have proved a revelation to its author and producer goes to Archie Mayo.

It will be welcome news to her many admirers in the Capital that Ann Corio, the most gorgeous feminine decoration of Col. James Jeremiah Lake's burlesque presentations, will return to the Gayety Theater on Sunday for a repeat engagement in her own production of "The Girls in Blue." Miss Corio is burlesque's reigning and undisputed prize beauty—and an extremely deft and expert performer.

Open in New Comedy at National

The slightly inquisitive gentleman on the left, of course, is that first figure of the American theater, Mr. George M. Cohan; on the right, Charles D. Brown, who assists him in creating many of the amusing scenes of the play which opened a week's engagement in the National Theater last night. The title, as you may have heard, is "Dear Old Darling" and into it Mr. Cohan is said to have written a good deal of himself. That should make it all the better. A considerable number of beautiful young women add to the glamour of the occasion.

Mask and Bauble

"IN THE FOOL'S BAUBLE." The Mask and Bauble Club presents the drama in three acts and eight scenes by the Rev. John D. McCarthy, S. J., adapted for the present production by William E. Shea, who also directed. Stage settings by William H. Prendergast, John W. Nurre, and John B. Madigan. Music and lyrics by Van Barr. In Gaston Hall, Georgetown University, February 10, 11 and 12. Reviewed Monday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Cavalierian blades flashed in Georgetown last evening as the Mask and Bauble Club turned back the pages of time to the fifteenth century and enacted "In the Fool's Bauble," by the Rev. John D. McCarthy, S. J., who died only a few months ago.

Off to a start somewhat fraught with self-consciousness, the drama picked up in momentum as the story was recounted of hom Prime Minister Armand d'Angoulord strive valiantly and ultimately successfully to save King Rene and Provence from the traitorous machinations of his cousin, Tartarin de Moripont and Louis XI of France, abetted the while by the efforts of the court jester.

Especially good was the interpretation of the fool by Frank W. Miller, jr., who may be remembered for his limning of The Stranger in the Club's productoin of George M. Cohan's "The Tavern." Playing not only the jester's part, but also that of Louis XI of France, and giving the jester's imitation of Louis, Mr. Miller gave full vetn to that talent so manifest in the earlier drama.

The other members of the cast, particulary Thomas F. Quinn and Eugene F. Dunne, as the exemplars of both sides o fthe intrigue, were well assigned for their respective roles.

Seven fine settings were devised by members of the company. The inclusion of songs by composer-Lyricist Van Barr, while slowing the actoin somewhat, nevertheless added a lyrical zest to a creditable performance.

Meeting Planned Here By Mizrachi Women

The nineteenth annual convention of the Women's Mizrachi Organization will be held in Washington this week-end in conjunction with the silver jubilee convention of the American Mizrachi Organization.

Most of the delegates will arrive Friday and will attend special religious services in all the local orthodox synagoges dedicated to the Mizrachi accomplishments in the homeland of the Jews. The organization is the religious branch of the World Zionist Movement, and numbers among its members the outstanding Jewish religious leaders. The women's sessions will open officially Saturday night at the Jewish Community Center and will continue all day Sunday.

There is no author-actor-producer on the American stage with so infallible a sense of "theater" as George M. Cohan.

This has been demonstrated in every play he ever has written and was given further evidence in the National Theater last night upon the first Washington presentation of his new melodramatic comedy of "Dear Old Darling."

The play is not important, beyond the fact that it affords two hours and a half of superlative entertainment, but it has speed—as all Cohan plays have, even if it happens to be mental speed, rather than physical, and this has both—witty dialogue, an exceptionally well-balanced cast and a material investiture that is entitled to take rank with the best of the season.

Mr. Cohan seems of late to be going in for unaccustomed ideas in the formulation of his plays. "Pigeons and People" was a bizarre conception, executed with rare finesse, and "Dear Old Darling" departs from the transparent revelations of most comedy-melodramas that can be guessed almost from the rise of the first curtain. Suspense here is sustained almost up to the fall of the final.

An Elderly Playboy.

The story is of an elderly retired business man who becomes involved with a pursuant young woman of 18 during a tour of Europe. His intentions and actions are wholly innocent, but by the adroit manipulations of a band of conspirators, whose real identities do not become clear until the very end of the play, he is placed in a very tough spot.

Private detectives, the official police department and numerous other agencies are involved in the solution of a cumulative dramatic development, and a very comic one, that has pace, literacy and excellent acting all on its side.

The author-star has been especially judicious in the selection of his supporting players. Ruth Shepley, Theresa Maxwell Conover, Walter Gilbert, Forrest Orr, Marian Shockley, Charles D. Brown and Edna Holland all are names that bear weight in the discriminating estimation of Washington audiences. All of them live up to the best traditions of their profession in this thoroughly diverting play.

Star Is Versatile.

Mr. Cohan's impersonation of Calvin Miller, the ostensible victim of a clever and shrewdly conived conspiracy, is a fine example of versatile effort behind the footlights. Facial expression, gesture, tricks of voice and action all contribute to a typical Cohan performance that takes rank with the most facile this first gentleman of theater ever has brought to the miming of a comedy role. His portrayal was responsible for a majority of the frequent and spontaneous laughs that greeted the salient points of his sprightly narrative.

Foremost in his support, perhaps, are Charles D. Brown, as the stanch friend, and Walter Gilbert as Capt. Cramer, of headquarters. Mr. Gilbert, it will be recalled, was with Mr. Cohan in "Pigeons and People" and here does an even more effective piece of work.

Placing these gentlemen first seems a bit unchivalrous in view of the splendid feminine performances that add so much to the development of the drama.

It seems hardly necessary, however, to remark that such sterling artistes as Ruth Shepley, Marian Shockley, Theresa Maxwell Conover and Edna Holland acquit themselves among the foremost of those whose work does most to make "Dear Old Darling" so handsome an evening in the theater.

None Is a "Dud."

Others in the cast who likewise add to the play's distinctive quality include Reynolds Denniston, as a practically ubiquitous butler; Joseph Sweeney, as L. B. Stuart, the private "fly cop;" Joseph R. Garry, as the pugnacious "flatfoot;" Forrest Orr, as John Mayo, and Ben Lackland, as a belligerent young swindler, whose interest in Mr. Miller's "girl" is less real than it seems at first.

The two settings that adorn the five scenes of the two acts are complete and colorful. They are changed with surprising alacrity.

It is fortunate for the hinterland that Mr. Cohan is so fond of "the road" and the slightly altered conditions of his life-long "trouping." Boston, Washington and other of the so-called "key cities" are seeing a play that Broadway probably would go overboard for, if it could get a glimpse of it.

In some of his climacteric jumping and prancing about, Mr. Cohan gives evidences that if he wanted to, and there were any reason for it, he still could put on a very mean dance.

Last evening's enthusiastic audience accorded the star and his play five curtain calls that could have been run up to twice that number if the house lights had not been switched on. These Mr. Cohan graciously shared, with the exception of one, with the associate artists who add so materially to the obvious success of his latest piece of authorship.

Anti-Freeze Alcohol Sales Are Held Legal

The sale of anti-freeze compounds which contain alcohol is not in violation of the pharmacy law, Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman ruled yesterday.

The legality of these sales was questioned by the Police Department. Public convenience demands that the compounds be sold at garages instead of drug stores, Prettyman said, and added that the method of the sale is not in violation of the law.

Youth Movements Theme of Speaker

Youth must have an opportunity both to think and work, if the United States is to continue to progress in the next generation, according to Owen Lovejoy, of the American Youth Commission. Lovejoy spoke before the Council of Social Agencies at its February meeting at the Y. W. C. A. yesterday. He was introduced by Sanford Bates, president of the council.

Taking as his topic "The Progress of the Youth Movements in America," the speaker said that other depressions had resulted in the building of new school houses and raising of teachers' salaries in a general effort to provide better educational facilities for the youth of the country.

At this time, he said, when our youth needs encouragement of every kind, the tendency is the other way. There are very few new school houses being built and a number of school teachers have been dismissed as a means of cutting the budget, the remaining teachers, he said being overburdend because of the large classes that they must handle.

The speaker defined this situation as one of the outstanding problems confronting those who are developing the country. He cited instances of transient boys and girls who might have been kept in school had the facilities been available. He also called attention to the curtailment of the health program, which he said was affecting youth.

Gypsy 'Peer' Given Larceny Sentence

Tene Bimbo, member of a reigning family of gypsies, must serve a term in the Lorton reformatory, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday in affirming his conviction on a charge of grand larceny.

Bimbo, whose trial in the District Supreme Court proved a mecca for hundreds of his picturesquely attired cohorts, was found guilty of having moved his hand quicker than a teller in the Woodridge-Langdon Saxings & Commercial Bank could move his eye. The gypsy was accused of costing the bank $130 by asking change for eight $50 bills, then requesting change for some of the smaller bills.

The bank charged he extracted 13 of the $10 bills before shoving them back to the teller to get smaller bills. The incident occurred in June, 1933.

Furr, Leading All Way in Thriller, Stops Halaiko in 9th Round

New Yorker Is Dropped Twice

Surprise Left Sends Him Down Second Time; Bout Stopped.

Year's Largest Crowd Watches Keen Battle at Turner Arena.

DISTRICT Welterweight Champion Phil Furr fought as he never fought before last night to score a ninth-round technical knockout over Steve Halaiko, of New York, in a sensational feature before the largest crowd of the year at Turner's Arena.

Furr had piled up a lead that could have been wiped out only by a knockout when his crashing fists finally swept Halaiki to the floor twice and had the game lilttle former Olympic star as wobbly as a sailor on shore leave, forcing Referee Denny Hughes to run up a merciful "cease firing" signal after two minutes of the next to the last round scheduled.

Three Hard Rights.

The District champion raked Steve's head with three hard rights early in the fatal ninth, forcing the game little New Yorker into a neutral corner, where he bobbed and weaved out of danger. Phil stalked Steve to the center of the ring with his always dangerous right cocked for action. Instead of the right, Furr shot out a terrific left hook to the chin, which dropped Halaiko flat on his back while the referee tolled an ominous eight count.

Fudd tore into Halaiko furiiusly as he rose rather wobbly, wriving the capamle little veteran to the ropes, where he dropped him for no count with a right. Halaiko rose even more rubbery legged, and Furr bore relentlessly in, pelting Steve mercilessly with lefts and rights as he rocked back and forth. Halaiko was a pitiful but admirable sight as he weaved drunkenly back and forth, refusing to drop before the terric onslaught. Hughes finally saved the day by halting the one-sided action.

In Distress Three Times.

Three times before the finish Furr had Halaiko in distress, but each time he failed to follow up with a finishing flurry. As early as the second round Halaiko was on the way out, although still right-side up, but Furr failed to follow. In the fourth Halaiko was dropped flat on his back by a hard right to the chin, but he scrambled to his feet without taking a count—and Furr refeused to stalk him. Once again, in the seventh, thee eventual winner had Steve groggy, but once again he failed to apply the finishing ouches.

Furr failed to follow up apparently wide open leads for a knockout in the early rounds, which is easily explained, and reflects great credit on his natural rinkmanship.

"I began to tire very early because of making weight," explained Furr, who was forced to whittle himself down to 144½ pounds to protect a $200 forfeit. "I realized that if I attempted to rush Halaiko into a knockout even when I had him softened up for it, I might fail—and I might shoot my bolt, leaving me nothing to go the rest of the distance on.

Shot Bolt in Ninth.

"In the ninth, I realized that I could shoot my bolt, and still have enough reserve to go one more round—so I let him have it."

Furr was far ahead on points when the end came. He had acquired his lead by virtue of an educated and newly developed left hook which was almost a perfect antidote for Halaiko's left job—and by baeting a tattoo on Steve's midsection at close quarters. Halaiko showed to greatest advantage when the boys remained far apart and Furr poised too long for action, allowing Steve to flich his face with lefts and rights that drew blood from his tender nose in the early rounds.

Cary Fright took a close decision from Stanford Carrier in a six-round semi-final. In a six-round preliminary, Al Parks tooka unanimous decision from Jose Obergoni and Tommy Hoover did the same to Lou Young.

G. U. and N.Y.U. Urged to End Relations

Editor Charges Safety of Violets Was Periled in Game Here.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Lee Kanner, fiery editor of a New York University undergraduate newspaper, today launched a vehement editorial campaign demanding immediate severence of athletic relations between N. Y. U. and Georgetown because of alleged anti-Jewish sentiment in Washington, D. C.

On the front page of the Washington Square College Bulletin—one of N. Y. U.'s four student publications—Kanner charged that the "safety and health" of N. Y. U. basketball players were endangered Friday night when Georgetown beat the Violet quintet at Washington, 34-32.

First in 20 Games.

It was N. Y. U.'s first defeat in 20 games, but Kanner emphasizes in his editorial that if the Violets had won Friday night, "there undoubtedly would have been staged the greatest race riot in the history of American athletics." Nine of the ten men on the Violet squad were Jewish, and Kanner claims they were cursed and berated by the capacity crowd "which had become absolutely insane in the last half."

The editorial insists that no attempt is being made to alibi the loss of the game to Georgetown because, on the following night, Saturday, the Violets were beaten by Temple at Philadelphia.

Cites 1935 Game.

"But we are writing this as a protest against sending down another team to the worst New York Jew-hating town we have ever encountered," it continues. "When last year's quintet played the same Georgetown team in Washington" somewhat similar events occurred.

Although officials of N. Y. U. were unanimous in stating that Kanner's editorial did not reflect the sentiment of the student body of approximately 35,000 and that there was no danger of a breach between the two schools, Kanner insisted otherwise.

The 21-year-old editor told the United Press that his paper would poll N. Y. U. students immediately and prove by their vote that they favored severing relations with Georgetown; also, that a meeting of the student council would be called to consider the situation, and that the council undoubtedly would bring proper pressure upon the university officials. "Today's editorial is just the opening shot of our campaign," he said.

Albert B. Nixon, graduate manager of athletics at N. Y. U., who witnessed the Washington game, said the editorial apparently was "just one o fthose things." He emphasized that it had no significance. That relations with Georgetown was stil las friendly as ever and that university officials were not even giving the affair any consideration.

During his career, which began in 1874 and ended in 1890, he played with the St. Louis Red Stockings and the old St. Louis Browns, Indianapolis, Buffalo, Detroit, Toledo, Milwaukee, Kansas City and Peoria. He appeared at every position, but chiefly shortstop and centerfield.

Jockey Spears Dies in Spill; Three Hurt

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 10.—H. Spears, an apprentice rider from Cleveland, Ohio, was killed and three other jockeys, including F. Polk, one of the leading jockeys of the country, were badly shaken up during the fifth race at the Fair Grounds track today when their mounts went down in a heap on the stretch turn.

Spears, who brought in his first winner during the present meeting, was rushed to Touro Infirmary, but died before he could be taken to the operating room.

The accident occurred when Portam, with Jockey J. Donahue up, stumbled on the turn into the home stretch and fell. Close on Portam's heels were Enola, with Spears up; Insomnia, with Jockey C. Parke up, and Smooth, with Polk up. All went down together.

Polk was taken to the emergency hospital at the track, where physicians said his condition was not serious. Donahue and Parke were able to leave the track without assistance. However, both were badly shaken up.

New Orleans, Feb. 10 (AP).—Jockey H. Spears, Cleveland apprentice, rated by track officials as one of the most promising of the younger riders, had Die Hard for his mount in the third race at the Fair Grounds here today.

O'Brien, Schonfeld Lead in One-Sided G. W. Triumph.

AMASSING an 18-0 lead in the first 15 minutes of play while its game but woefully outclassed opponent struggled valiantly to check the avalanche of points, George Washington ran roughshod over Randolph-Macon last night, winning, 42-15, in the H street gym.

The Colonials led, 22-7, at halftime.

Tommy O'Brien and "Mouse" Schonfeld led the attack, although Hal Kiesel, as usual, was key man in his team's offense.

Only three Yellow Jackets scored field goals, McFall, who led his team's scoring with 7 points, and Barr and Oliver.

This Morning . . .

Without Shirley Povich.

By Walter Haight.

FROM the West Coast comes the news that Time Supply is likely to be the favorite when the field marches postward for the $110,000 Santa Anita Handicap a week from Saturday. The 5-year-old left in his wake a string of candidates for the George Washington's Birthday classic, including Discovery, and smashed the track record for a mile and a furlong to boot last Saturday.

HAIGHT.

Nearby Virginians would have every reason to cheer along with the boys who write the race stories if Time Supply should run to victory in the big race. Seldom has a horse had a Horatio Alger career to match that of the rollicking son of Timemaker. He was foaled on the E. B. McLean estate near Leesburg by the mare Surplice. When the McLean stock was disposed of at auction, Time Supply was a wee colt hiding behind his mother's flank. When the time arrived for Surplice to go into the ring, the gangly-legged colt trotted in beside her. No one paid any particular attention to the youngster which was "thrown in" when the mare was sold.

Mrs. F. A. Carreaud bought him after he developed into a sizable colt and sent him to Florida to race as a 2-year-old. He injured his leg in shipment and then developed a fever and his racing career was thought to be ended before it began. However, skillful attention pulled him through, and, when sent to the races the following fall, Time Supply bounded right out of the maiden class. He has been known as a "solid horse" since.

Time Supply ran a splendid race in the Santa Anita Handicap last year and better racing luck would have found him closer at the finish. He was a sort of sentimental favorite of mine, and the only bet I made in the 42 races I saw in California was on Time Supply's nose.

If Joseph E. Widener, the man who controls the strings at Hialeah Park, has his way, every track in the country will have a turf, or grass course. Widener revived the turf racing, the first in this country since the days of old Sheepshead Bay. There is no doubt that racing on the green adds much color to the sport and Hialeah patrons are enthusiastic over the contests. The Hialeah turf course runs between the main dirt track and the infield lake. No fences are used, the horses running next to a hedge at the turns and between beacons on the straightaways. About five races a week are run on the turf oval.

In Europe, races on the grass are the rule and not the exception. However, the meetings on the other side seldom last more than two, three or four days and the grass can stand the pounding of the hoofs. Then again, in Europe, only half of the width of the track is used for the ordinary run of races, the part toward the inside being saved for a stake, handicap or derby.

Turf courses in this country could not be used for every race. In 45 days of a Hialeah meeting or even 13 days of a Bowie meeting, the grass would be worn out. However, two races a day would be feasible over the turf.

Widener believes that the development of our best grade of horses as turf runners would lead to many international races. The question of the nature of the course has served to end negotiations for several important match races in recent years.

When Edward F. Seagram's Sablin won the feature race at Hialeah the other Saturday, a rabid race fan came through with this remark: "I knew they would put over that horse today. Seagram is a millionaire. His dough is supporting racing and the owners, trainers and jockeys were just putting on a show for him." The Canadian sportsman had arrived in Miami only a few hours before the race. It did appear that the race was run in his honor and that it was fitting that his horse should win. In fact, the appearance of the owner of a stable has often brought victory to one of his horses. Any owner's trainer and jockey would want to show to best advantage before the eyes of the boss. Knowing that the owner would be at the track on a certain day would be cause enough for a trainer to "point" a horse for one particular race. Few horses keep their best form from week to week and it is only natural that the trainer bring a certain horse "up" to his top effort on the day the boss arrives.

Those who believe that other interests in the race were putting on a show for Seagram will have to explain this: Mrs. Payne Whitney, the dowager queen of racing and owner of the pretentious Greentree Stable, has sat in the clubhouse day after day watching her horses run. And until Jamboree triumphed last week she had not seen her colors borne to victory.

Heurich Pros to Play Masked Marvel Five

Apparently determined to rival the color of the rassling game, the Heurich Brewers have slated another "freak" basketball program for Sunday afternoon in the Twenty-sixth and Water street gym.

Thwarted last week when they attempted to bring a circus tall man here with the House of David quintet, the Heurichs next Sunday have scheduled the Masked Marvels of Philadelphia. The masked marvel idea was born in the mat industry years ago. Lately and locally it has spread to billiards. Now it has invadde the ranks of pro basketball.

Offered Reds Job, Lea Is Denied Plea

By the Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 10.—Gov. Ehringhaus today refused a request that clemency be extended Luke Lea, former United States Senator from Tennessee, so that he might accept a position with the Cincinnati Baseball Club and go on the team's spring training trip to Puerto Rico.

Lea is serving six to ten years in State's prison for violation of State banking laws in connection with the failure of the Central Bank & Trust Co. at Asheville several years ago.

Gov. Ehringhaus said he did not recall the exact nature of the job Lea was to hold, but that Broughton presented a letter from Larry McPhail, general manager of the Reds, who served under Lea in France during the war, saying there was a place for him on the training trip.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 10.—The University of West Virginia, long a power in Eastern basketball circles, stepped out with a vengeance tonight, smothering an invading University of Maryland quintet, 51 to 26.

Some 800 spectators saw the contest, played in the Allegany High School gym.

With Colebank pacing the scoring with a night's total of 23 points, the Mountaineers were away to a good start, running up a score of 22 to 8 in the first half.

Gocke Gets 11 Points.

Marshall Five Bows to C. U., 39 to 31

Special Dispatch to The Post.

UNION CITY, N. Y., Feb. 10.—The touring Catholic University basketball team got off on the right foot in its Northern invasion, defeating tonight the crack John Marshall College five, 39 to 31, here tonight. It was th second defeat of Marshall in 11 games.

The Washington team originally was scheduled to have played Long Island University in Brooklyn tonight and Marshall tomorrow night, but a last minute change of dates was necessitated since Marshall is unable to play Tuesday. Long Island, Eastern leader in games won, will be met tomorrow.

The invaders had no trouble in pentrating the Marshall defense, which was greatly weakened by the loss of Maurice Dubilier, its great star who has left school. At least every Catholic player scored from the floor except Pagano, who contributed five fouls.

I. B. E. W. Leads Federal Bowlers

Despite tasting defeat in two games in its match with Investigation for the supremacy of the Federal League last night at Arcadia, L.B. E. W. retained first place by a slim one-half game advantage over their victors. Inopportune scoring was the cause of the pace-setters defeat, losing despite a 647 game and 1758 set high for the night.

Investigation climbed to second place by reason of a greater total pinfall over National Capital Parks, the latter being set down twice by G. P. O. Navy Yard pulled up to within one game of the fourth place Highway Department team by stopping them twice; Veterans Administration, with Ruche, a 105 average bowler, rolling his first time in the league, shooting a season record set of 423, upset G. P. O. (Union Printers) two games and the last place I. C. C. team won the odd game from Public Schools.

Finland Wins Ski Relay in Close Duel

Brundage Enters Row Over Lifting of Ban Against Britons.

By the United Press.

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, Feb. 10.—Finland's blue-clad skjers raced to the most stirring victory of the fourth winter Olympic games today as a fresh controversy, this time between the United States and Great Britain, arose. It was over eligibility of two former Canadian hockey stars, now competing unde rthe Union Jack.

While the rugged men of the North were winning the 40-kilometer (24.84 miles) ski running relay title from Norway in a bitter stretch duel, Avery Brundage, president of the American Amateur Athletic Union and head of the United States Olympic committee, disagreed with action by the International Ice Hockey Federation which lifted a suspension placed on Alex Archer and James Foster.

May Press Issue.

Brundage, aroused because the International group unanimously voted to restore the former Winnipeg players to good standing, indicated he might go over the heads of the British Ice Hockey Federation and place the question squarely before that country's Olympic authorities.

Foster and Archer, who formerly played with Winnipeg, were suspended last week by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association on the ground that they violated a Canadian rule by transferring to England without receiving permission.

The ban later was upheld by the International Group, provoking a bitter squabble on the eve of the start of ice hockey competition. It was only after Britain threatened to withdraw from the games that Canada agreed to lift the suspension.

The English, aided by Foster and Archer, defeated Japan and Sweden, to move into the semi-final round of eight teams.

Today, E. A. Gilroy, president of the Canadian group, said that as far as Canada is concerned, the suspension has been lifted only for the duration of the games.

Despite Brundage's objection, it is certain that Foster and Archer will continue to play for Great Britain.

Overshadowing the eligibility squabble was the smashing finish of the 40-kilometer ski race which saw the English team score its first victory of the games.

Separated by 15 Yards.

Only 15 yards separated Kalle Jalkanen, of Finland, from Norway's anchor man, Bjarne Iversen, as he sped across the finish line to climax a race which saw the lead constantly changing hands.

Jalkanen, covering his 10-kilometer (6.21 miles) leg of the course in 39 minutes 14 seconds, the fastest time turned in by any of the 64 skiers who represented 16 nations. The Finnish team, composed of Jalkanen, Sulo Nurmela, Klaes Karppines and Matti Lahde, finished the course in a total elapsed time of 2:41.33. Norway was second, 6 seconds behind the winners.

Third place went to Sweden, while Italy finished fourth ahead of Czechoslovakia and Germany. The United States finished eleventh.

The American team had an elapsed time of 3:06.26. Birger Torrissen, Norfolk, Conn., was the first American off and he covered the course in 40 minutes 25 seconds to make the first change over in eleventh place. The next man, Warren H. Chivers, of Dartmouth College, went around in 44:24, bringing his team to ninth position.

Victory enabled Finland to move into third place in the unofficial point standings, Germany, with victories in the men's and women's combined ski events, increased its first place total to 37 with a point for sixth place in today's event. Norway is second.

The draw for the semifinals of the ice hockey placed the United States in a comparatively easy group. In the U. S. division are Czechoslovakia, Austria and Sweden. The other group includes Canada, Great Britain, Germany and Hungary.

Risko Retains Title.

Trick Problems Drive Pass-Seekers Crazy

By Bill McCormick.

WOE betide the unsuspecting stranger who stops to loiter in Joe Turner's ticket office these days. The boys have started a new pastime, known as "Goofy-Goofy-Gander" or "Quick, Watson, the Strait-jacket," with which they are bedeviling every innocent victim who wanders into the local athletic promoter's office.

All of the boys are vehemently disclaiming all responsibility for starting the fiendish bushiness, but the finger of suspicion has been pointed at George (Goo-Goo) King and Zeke (the Zany) Zeely, with Richard (the Ribald) Bauer and Willie (the Waddler) Mack not entirely cleared of all complicity.

The routine goes something like this. Old Joe Blimppuss wanders into the office to mooch a ducat for a rassling match or boxing-fighting contest on account of he once saw Turner perform on the mat at the old Strand Theayter in 1901 and figures that makes him a blood relative. Blimppuss is quickly seized by one of the conspirators, usually King or Zeely, and pinned into a corner. He is transfixed by a magnetic eye and question No. 1 is popped at him.

"Lissen," will come question No. 1, which is just a teaser, anyway. "Lissen. Suppose I have $1.15, all in change—and not including a silver dollar. I have that $1.15 in change, yet I cannot change any coin or bill. In what coins is may $1.15?

Old Joe Blimppuss hems and haws for a few seconds and finally comes up with the right answer which he was expected to do all the time, and he is hooked.

"We're going hunting," comes question No. 2, which is a bit more difficult than question No. 1. "We have our dogs with us." We have two dogs in front of two dogs, two dogs behind two dogs and two dogs in the middle. How many dogs have we?"

Old Joe may have to resort to pencil and paper to solve this one and the furrows of perplexity in his brow will please the Messrs. Zeely and King no end.

Question No. 3 has to do with a freight train and tunnel.

"A train 1 nile long is going through a mile-long tunel at the rate of 1 mile a minute," it goes. "How long will 't take the train to go through?"

By this time old Blimppuss probably is fit to be tied, but the relentless prosecutors have only begun.

Question No. 4 is a breather. "If eggs are 12 cents a dozen, how many can you buy for $1?" Blimppuss probably gets this one and figures the worst is over. He is wrong.

The fifth question has to do with water in cans and is a forerunner of more difficult problems.

"You are given a 4-gallon can and a 3-gallon can and with them you must measure out exactly 5 gallons," Blimpuss is instructed. "How do you do it?"

Blimpy practicaly has nervous prostration over that one and finally solves it by borrowign two cuspidors and working it out that way.

"How many stones did it take to finish the Washington Monument?" he is asked as soon as he has recovered. That's a trick question and Blimpy isn't feeling very tricky by now.

Georgetown Plays West Va. Tonight; Maryland Faces W. & L.

Fine Records Are Boasted By Visitors

Hoyas to Seek Revenge for Two '35 Defeats by Mountaineers.

PRECEDED by verbose blasts of publicity designed to unnerve their respective opponents and attract a few extra customers to the box-office two teams rated well up in the Southern and Eastern Conferences invade Washington tonight to test the mettle of local favorites.

Georgetown, still pinching its collective self to determine whether its victory over New York University was a dream, meets West Virginia at Tech High School at 8:30 o'clock. A half hour earlier Maryland arrays itself against the cagey Generals of Washington and Lee at College Park. If the fans are looking for action they can't go wrong in either instance.

In 12 games played thus far, West Virginia, which is tied with Temple for second place in the Eastern Conference, has scored 471 points, with Jack Cooke, a big red-head, leading the individual performers with 125. Abie Colebank is close behind with 120. Both are well known to the Hoyas, inasmuch as they had important roles in two victories over Georgetown last season.

The Mountaineers hold decisions over Temple and Carnegie Tech in addition to a post of smaller and less important opponents. The team is virtually intact from last season as only Joe Stydahar was lost by graduation. Andy Mestrovic, Johnny Phares and Gocke were selected on the second all-conference team last winter.

But if Georgetowns task is a difficult one, Maryland's is even more so, for the Terrapins are up against what appears to be the best quintet in this year's Southern Conference race.

Washington and Lee satisfactorily demonstrated its powerful ability by upsetting Maryland, 30-27, earlier in the season when Coach Burt Shipley's men were hitting a faster pace than they were traveling at now.

Western Swamps Blair Five, 24-9

A third-quarter spurt that netted 12 consecutive points carried Western High to a decisive 24-to-9 victory over Montgomery Blair yesterday at Silver Spring. The hosts were guilty of their poorest play of the season in absorbing their worst defeat.

The last quarter saw the reserves of both club in action, with the Westerners slightly superior. Shorb scored over half the losers' points, trailing only Burns in the scoring.

Post Tourney Group Meets Tonight

WITH the deadline for registrations and entries set for Friday night at midnight, and the tournament scheduled to open next Tuesday night, the District A. A. U. basketball committee which is working with The Washington Post in the championship games at Heurich's gym will meet tonight at 7:15 at the Central Y. M. C. A. to smooth out whatever rough spots might appear on the surfoce.

Chairman Winfree Johnson will preside. Others who will attend are Bernie Phillips, Barney Welsh, Bill Russell, Joseph Aronoff, John Janowski, Charlie Reynolds, Harry English, Bert Olmsted, A. Earl Weeks, Joe Bertolin, Morris Fox and Dave Herman.

That interest in the A. A. U. games is increasing at a swift pace is evidenced by the fact that yesterday no less than 15 teams called at The Post for entry blanks and details concerning the tournament.

A surprise entry in the unlimited class is a team composed of former college stars from Illinois, who style themselves Kent Keller's Kolts. They're named after the Congressman from Illinois The Congressman's secretary, Harry W. Deck, formerly of Carbondale, Ill., Teachers College, is captain of the team. Others are John C. Austin, Paul Swafford, Clarence Dodge, Harold Brown, John Moore, Eva Fox and Dick Cooper. The boys were stars in college. The Congressman will be present to see them play at Heurich.

Miss Maude Parker, who has been chairman of the girls games for many years, yesterday stated that she expected a record-breaking entry, what with all the Community Center League teams competing.

Entries and registrations should be filed with the chairmen at the Boys' Club of Washington, 230 C street northwest. All teams in the 100-pound, 115-pound, 145-pound, men's and girls' unlimited within a 15-mile radius of Washington are eligible.

Eastern Faces Test Today In Central

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Eastern	6	0	1.000
Roosevelt	3	3	.500
Western	3	4	.428
Tech	2	4	.333
Central	1	4	.200

By John R. Vosburgh.

EASTERN HIGH'S great 21-game interhigh winning streak gets the acid test today when serious Central, cellarite of the series, launches a desperate attempt at Roosevelt High's gym to halt the charging champs. Eastern had a tough time stopping Central earlier in the season, 35 to 30.

At the same hour, 3:45 p. m., Roosevelt and Tech will be continuing the second-place scramble at the Tech gymnasium, a defeat for either team all but eliminating it from a chance to tie Western for the runner-up honors.

A defeat for Tech would definitely kill the Maroons' chances of finishing in the No. 2 berth, but Roosevelt, providing it beats Eastern, can still lose to Tech and tie Western.

Coach Charlie Guyon, of Eastern, admits that the Lincoln Parkers' unprecedented string of victories cannot continue indefinitely, but so far as the champs are concerned, Central won't be the team to end it. Coach Jack Roy's Centralites, on the other hand, figure they should have beaten the champs the first time out and will make up for lost time today.

In view of the nature of Eastern's unbroken sweep through three seasons without a defeat, beating one team after another under the tense circumstances known only to interhigh series play, it is a question how much further this streak can go. Every time the team takes the floor it is on the spot. In fact, the tenseness of keeping the record unbroken probably acts as an added burden.

It will be Eastern's next-to-the-last appearance in series play. The usual array of Buddy Shaner at center, Chick Hollidge and Bill Buckholtz, forwards, and Dope Dean and Reds Scheible, guards, will take the floor.

For Central, Capts. Bill Thompson gets the call at center, with Don Fones and Dewey Poole, forwards, and Billy Vermillion and Sam Fox, guards. With the burly Fox back in action, the team looms even more dangerously than when it pressed the Northeastern net-swishers to the limit to pull out a victory over Central had led, 18-16, in the last half.

Tech, following its upset of Western a week ago, is scarcely a favorite to stop Roosevelt, in view of limit to pull out a victory after Central. Roosevelt had little trouble with the Maroon in their first meeting, winning, 30 to 18, but the margin of victory for either team should be no more than two or three points today.

Cleaners Still in Race.

The Shamrock Cleaners will meet Luckett's Pharmacy to decide the championship of the Central Community Center League, Section A, minor division, tomorrow night at Langley Junior High at 7:15 o'clock. Luckett's have not clinched the title, as reported.

Six Nominated For Tryout With Nats

By John R. Vosburgh.

SIX talented young baseball stars of Washington sandlots were nominated yesterday by their leagues for consideration by The Post in selecting the player to be given a free tryout with the Nationals.

The Northern Virginia League and Maryland County League, the two suburban circuits operating under The Post Sandlot Baseball Association, came forth in hearty support of their nominees with the Washington Church League likewise breaking into print today. The nominations of the other leagues will be announced from day to day with the selection to be named Sunday morning.

The Northern Virginia League, actually two circuits of eight teams each, and considered one of the fastest leagues in the section, made its selections of Ralph Cooper, of the Arlington A. C., and Bob Buckley, of Fairfax Station through its experienced president, James C Buchanan.

Nichols, Ahearn Named.

President Vic Gauzza of the Maryland County League nominated Dick Nichols, of the championship Silver Spring Giants, and Davis Ahearn, of North Washington. Forrest Burgess, president of the Washington Church League, voiced the opinion of managers of his circuit by naming Bill Albert and Grover (Blackie) Adair, of the Mount Vernon championship outfit.

Cooper and Buckley represent the pick of the youth of the powerful Virginia loop. Both have been highly encouraged by none other than Clark Griffith, president of the Nationals. Nick Altrock, coach of the Nats and Joe Judge, former Washington first baseman, journeyed to Virginia last season and watched the left-handed Buckley hurl against the championship Purcellville club.

Buckley, a graduate of Fairfax High School, where he failed to lose a game, beat every team in the Red Section of the Virginia League, including the championship Purcellville team. He lost one game by one run to the champs. The young southpaw was recruited for action in the Fairfax Station's desperate drive for the pennant, fulfilling highest expectations in spectacular fashion.

Nichols, the Silver Spring Giant 22-year-old pitcher nominated by the Montgomery County League, is a bight right-hander, a graduate of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High and the principal reason the Giants won the league championship. Ahearn, the other Maryland choice, is a year younger, a right-handed centerfielder, a consistent hitter and a vastly improved ball player even over the high quality talent he showed playing for Roosevelt High three years ago.

Albert, outstanding player of the Church League, is a former George Washington player, 22 years of age, who hit .385 in his league and also played for the Acacia championship team of the National Capital League.

Adair, 25 years old, a massive right-handed pitcher for Murphy's Five and Ten team in the National City loop, as well as for Mount Vernon on the Church circuit, chalked up one of the best sandlot records of the year during the past season for the Church League champions.

Cadman, Composer, Hits Olympics; Quits

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Charles Wakefield Cadman, the composer, in an open letter "to the press" from his home in San Diego, Calif., today withdrew from any connection with America's participation in the music program of the 1936 Olympic games in Germany.

Cadman voiced his "personal conviction" that it is not "to America's advantage to participate in the Olmypic games in Nazi Germany" because of the "attitude of Herr Hitler in regard to the persecution of racial and religious groups, and the suppression of civil liberties."

Curtis Was Slated To Be Racing's Czar

CHARLES CURTIS.

By Walter Haight.

HAD Charles Curtis, former Vice President, lived until April 1 he would have been appointed "czar of racing" in the United States, Robert I. Miller, his law associate and friend, said last night. Curtis virtually had accepted the offer of a group that included Joseph E. Widener and Col. Edward R. Bradley as well as members of Maryland, Kentucky, Illinois, Texas and California turf bodies. The former Vice President was to fill a post similar to those of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis in baseball and Will Hays in movies. He was to be the final "court of appeals" in all cases involving the turf and it was believed that under his guidance uniform racing rules would have been adopted throughout the country.

Curtis, whose funeral is to be held today in Topeka, Kans., was well qualified for the position. Thirty years in the Senate and a Vice Presidency had failed to dull the enthusiasm of the part Indian for racing. He acquired his love of the horse as he learne dto walk, became a jockey before he was 15 and had been a keen student of thoroughbreds down through the years. During his long residence here, he missed few opportunities to see a horse race.

He was as proud of his knowledge of horses and of racing as he was of his Indian ancestry and his Vice Presidency. Some of the lure of the race track to the man probably was born of the fact that here was one place where he could "be himself." Around the Maryland plants he was such a fixture that he was seldom even pointed out in the clubhouse crowd. Here he could move about freely, bet if he wanted to bet and cheer for this horse or that as he saw fit.

Even as Vice President of the United States, Curtis was a race fan. He would have an answer for the age-old turf question, "Who do you like?" and he numbered many owners, trainers, jockeys and track employes among his friends. Asked to name his favorite "big" men. "Washington Jake," the harmless handy man about the track, invariably replied, "Vice President Curtis and Admiral Cary T. Grayson."

"Mr. Curtis not only knew horses but he was an expert handicapper," Miller said last night. "It's a good thing for you newspaper fellows that he was in racing for entertainment only. He certainly would have taken over somebody's job. He knew all there was to know about the past performances and also used keen observation of races to determine the best horses. He picked many a winner."

Curtis was only a "light" better, his intimates will tell you. Miller, who accompanied the former Vice President to the track for 20 years, says he can remember only one instance where Curtis invested more than his usual $2, $5 or $10.

Bet $100 and Won.

"He wagered $100 on Valencia at Havre de Grace a few years back and won his bet. However, the bet was a sentimental one. I owned Duchess Lace, the dam of Valencia, and Mr. Curtis had taken an especial liking to the filly," Miller said. "He went to the races rain or shine, snow or blow, but other sport shad little appeal to him. I purchased a box for a big league game one morning, but that afternoon we were at the track."

The former Vice President had a winning day on his last visit to a Maryland track. He bet on the daily double with Mrs. Miller and the twin bet brought a $226.70 mutuel. The horses were Curtis' handicap choices.

He liked to recall his saddle days in the West. He was a jockey on Indian ponies which ran short distances over straight courses. The racing was in conjunction with small fairs and young Curtis received $5 for each winning mount.

Also Led Horses.

In addition to riding, the jockeys were in charge of the transportation of the ponies from town to town, and Curtis often told of leading the animals many miles in the morning and then riding them in races in the afternoon. The late Sam Hildreth, who became trainer for the Sinclair Stable and had Zev among his charges was a jockey on the same circuit and the two swapped stories whenever they met.

Curtis always tried to keep away from the spotlight of racing, but on several occasions he has presented the trophies to winners of the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness.

In turfdom he will be remembered as "race fan," and not "czar of racing"—he would have preferred it that way.

G. W. High Gets Tournament Bid

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 10.—George Washington High School basketball team received an invitation today to participate in the South Atlantic Tourney, to be held in Richmond, Va., the first week in March, under the auspices of the University of Richmond.

Hoyas to Open Spring Grid Practice

51 Men Due to Report at Coaches' First Call Next Week.

BLESSED with the largest if not the best football squad in the school's recent history and waxing more enthusiastic than a rookie high school cheer leader, Jack Hagerty, Georgetown's head football coach, last night announced that spring football practice at the Hilltop would begin a week from tomorrow, good weather or bad.

The weather, of course, is a serious menace to the youthful Hoya mentor's well-laid plans. Neither the varsity nor freshmen practice fields drains well, and as a consequence of the snow both will ooze with kneedeep mire a week hence, but the call for candidates will be sounded, nevertheless, and practice will start in Ryan gym, continuing there until the fields are available.

Football practice must not interfere with basketball, as it did last year, thus Hagerty and his lieutenants, George Murtagh and "Mush" Dubofsky, must work fast to mold the character of the 1936 eleven. Work will be suspended the last week in March.

Fifty-one men, more football players than any three previous teams combined boasted, are scheduled to report for fundamental work. Twenty-eight are veterans and 23 freshmen—promising freshmen, too.

Hagerty's problem is to unearth two outstanding tackles to plug these palpably waek positions, and to find a punter capable of replacing Joe Meglen. There is a dearth of both tackles and consistently good punters at the Hilltop, but the team can get along well enough with a mediocre kicker or two, while it is absolutely essential to obtain two good tackles.

Last season's entire first string line will be back intact, but it is conjectural if it will be sent to battle without a thorough renovation. Noonan and Snyder, ends; Cummings and Stralka, tackles; Frank and Shuker, guards; and Hardy, center, are the returning lettermen. Of these only Hardy and Noonan seem fairly certain of retaining their positions, and even they will receive plenty of competition by upcoming freshmen and reserves from last year.

In reserve are Barabas, Bodine, Cavadine, Williams, ends; Conway, Petroskey and Vaccaro, tackles; Fleck, Leslie, Tehaan and Stadler, guards; and Fuardo, center. The '35 freshman squad will send up Harke, Nee, Lemoine, and Flemings, ends; Brady, Churinkus, Marley, Gamage and Robertson, tackles; Franks, who will be used at either end or tackle; Hill, Pearl and Papadias, guards; and Riofski, center.

Shoreham Lassies Bow to Penn Hall

Penn Hall, one of the best balanced feminine swimming teams to show here, defeated the Shoreham girls at the Venetian pool of the Shoreham Hotel last night, 37-18.

The Chambersburg, Pa., lassies swept every first place with the exception of the diving event in which Leonore Taube, of Shoreham, grabbed top honors.

Results:

50-yard free style—Won by Phoebe Hirschon (Penn Hall); second, Ann Bono (Shoreham); third, Annabelle Whaler (Shoreham). Time, 0:32 1-5.

100-yard free style—Won by Bernice Lapp (Penn Hall); second, Rita Augusterfer (Shoreham); third, Ann Bono (Shoreham). Time, 1:1 3-5.

50-yard back stroke—Won by Bernice Lapp (Penn Hall); second, Leonore Taube (Shoreham); third, Betty Evart (Shoreham). Time, 0:36 3-5.

50-yard breast stroke—Won by Mary Louise Miller (Penn Hall); second, Jane Pfeiffer (Penn Hall); third, Jean Rawls (Shoreham). Time, 0:41 2-5.

Diving—Won by Leonore Taube (Shoreham); second, Mary Miller (Penn Hall); third, Ruth O'Neill (Penn Hall).

150-yard medley relay—Won by Penn Hall (Mary Miller, Dorcas Schulter and Phoebe Hirschon). Time, 1:52 1-5.

200-yard relay—Won by Penn Hall (Dorcas Schulter, Kay Johnson, Phoebe Hirschon and Bernice Lapp). Time, 2:4 4-5.

Ripley Addresses Olmsted Banquet

With Elmer Ripley, former Georgetown and Yale basketball coach, explaining the plays and various maneuvers, members of the Olmsted Grill basketball team were entertained last night by their sponsors, Bert Olmsted, at a banquet at the grill.

Ripley exhibited slow motion pictures of the Original New York Celtics going through plays and demonstrating the finer points of court play, simultaneously answering the players' queries.

Charley Brickley, Harvard football immortal, addressed the group briefly, stressing the necessity for moderate living to achieve success in sports.

Trick Problems Drive 'Em Crazy

it goes. "He jumps up 3 feet and falls back two feet every time he leaps. How many jumps does it take him to get out of the well?"

Blimpy starts jumping all over the linoleum to solve this one and is about to leave when another teaser is tossed at him. The numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 9 are written down on a piece of paper and old Joe is told to select one of them. He does and is given a number to multiply by 12,345,679. The result will be all the figures he has chosen. For instance, if Joe has selected the figure 5, the result of his multiplicatoin will be all 5s. How do the inquisitors determine the number to multiply?

"I have 100 tickets, priced at 50 cents, $3 and $10," Blimpy is informed. I must sell them for exactly $100. How many of each priced ticket do I sell?"

Just before Joe Blimppuss is removed to the psychopathic ward, he is given the most unkindest cut of all.

"I meet you on the street," he is informed. "We both have a basket of eggs. If I give you two eggs, you have twice as many eggs as I do. On the other hand, if you give me two eggs, we both have an equal number. How many eggs did we each have? Broken eggs and omelets are not involved in this problem."

I gave up, and that goes distinctly against the grain of the Scotch in me.

(Do you give up? Answers to the above brain-twisters will be given on the sports pages of tomorrow morning's Post. Or, if you can't wait that long, call George King, in Turner's ticket office, and ask him. It will serve him right for starting the business.)

S. A. K. Wins Another

The Sigma Alpha Kappa basketball team won its third victory in four days last night, defeating Co. F., of Hyattsville, 20 to 13. Miller, Beak and Sklar starred for the winners.

Rushaway Triumphs at Hialeah

Victory Gives Don Meade Double

Lancewood Is Second; Seven Events Draw Only 49 Horses.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH Park, Fla., Feb. 10.—Five Florida derby candidates were on display in the one mile of the figth race here today. Rushaway, a gelded son of Haste in the scarlet, white and black of J. E. Widener, president of the Miami Jockey Club, proved thoroughly at home in the heavy going and won by two lengths. Don Meade, completing a double, was looking back through the final sixteenth as he brought his mount home in 1:42. brought his mount home in 1:42.5.

Lancewood, representing Willard Wilson, of Nashville, Tenn., just lasted to save the place by a head from the wide running Sunanair, which carried the silks of Joseph Pepp. Galmica and Ceiling rounded out the small field. Rushaway, a smart performer on Chicago tracks as a juvenile, showed distinct improvement over his one previous start here, when he was beaten off in an allowance affair. The Widener color bearer had plenty of support today, however, closing favorite at $5.80 for $2.

Track Is Muddy.

Recent rains left the track deep in mud, a rare condition at this point. Scratches were much in evidence, with the result that the seven races had only 49 horses engaged, or an average of seven to a race. Heavy skies continued, but a good sized crowd viewed the program.

Rushaway broke third and sprinted to the front shortly afterward. Meade took a hold on the gelding and the combination never was menaced. Lancewood showed more early foot than usual but would have lost the place to Sunanair in another jump or so. Galmica ran a much better race than the chart shows. He broke well but slipped and stumbled, losing considerable ground before he could find his stride. The Shandon Farm gelding was beaten less than three lengths for the lion's share of the purse.

Chart of Hialeah Park Races

Monday, February 10, 1936.

WEATHER, CLOUDY. TRACK, MUDDY.

FIRST RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 2:20. Off at 2:23½. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Winner, George Herbert Boatwick's b. g. (7), by Pompey—Elvina. Trained by John P. Smith. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:14 1-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
POMPEIUS	(Meade)	113	7	1	2h	2h	1h	1h	$7.05
KINGS PLEASURE	(Litzenberger)	113	1	3	1nk	1h	2h	2½	1.50
BROAD MEADOWS	(Longden)	120	5	4	5h	5h	5½	3½	11.15

OFFICE BOY	(S.Renick)	105	2	7	7	7	7	7	26.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POMPEIUS, $16.10, $6.50, $3.70; KINGS PLEASURE, $3.60, $2.50; BROADMEADOWS, $3.90.

POMPEIUS, sulled by the footing and a strong factor while following in close attendance of KINGS PLEASURE, took command when reaching the homestretch, then drew out at will after being straightened away. KINGS PLEASURE was steadied in front while setting the pace, but was not good enough to withstand the winner when shaken up. BROAD MEADOWS improved his position on the outside, closed gamely and made up ground slowly at the close.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Went to post at 2:52. Off at 2:55½. Start good (chute). Won driving; place, same. Winner, Robert L. Gerry's ch. f. (2) by High Strung—Pathetic. Trained by George M. Odom. Value to winner, $600; second, $123; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:34 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	Stretch	Finish	Straight
PATHOS	(Malley)	108	1	1	1nk	1½	$3.80
LITTLE UPSET	(Meade)	107	9	2	2½	2h	10.30

WISE BUN	(Landolt)	112	3	8	9h	9h	51.35
UBALD G.	(S.Renick)	106	4	10	10	10	34.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PATHOS, $9.60, $5.50, $3.70; LITTLE UPSET, $9.00, $4.30; ODDESA GIRL, $3.10.

PATHOS, ridden hard while holding a forward position, took command after the opening sixteenth, rallied strongly to punishment and outstayed LITTLE UPSET under a severe drive. Latter followed in the thick of contention from the beginning, displayed good ability in the footing and was going strongest at the close. ODDESA GIRL served to the inside after the opening furlong, responded to punishment and finished stoutly.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 3:24. Off at 3:26. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, Mrs. E. Haughton and Mrs. Floyd West's br. g. (5), by Pharamond II—Past Time. Trained by Edward Haughton. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHARATIME, $37.40, $14.80, $8.20; JUDGE LEER, $6.00, $4.00; INDIANTOWN, $2.40.

PHARATIME, steadied along within striking distance of the leaders and going in his best form, rallied stoutly after reaching the homestretch and, coming strongly nearing the close, was up in the last 20 yards. JUDGE LEER, away slowly, obtained racing room on the inside when catching his field, moved into the leaders midway of the homestretch and finished with excellent courage. INDIANTOWN, on the outside of the leaders while racing forwardly, came with good energy under punishment in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Rhodes Empire Builder. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:59½. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Winner, Thomas F. Swords' b. g. (4), by Torchlite—Victory. Trained by G. Mayberry. Value to winner, $775, second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13 2-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
VOTE BOY	(Phillips)	107½	3	3	1nk	1½	1h	1½	$1.85

SAILOR BEWARE	(Wagner)	103	5	2	2½	2h	5	5	4.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VOTE BOY, $5.70, $3.10, $2.40; BROWN TWIG, $5.80, $2.80; DANCING DOLL, $2.40.

VOTE BOY, partial to the footing, assumed command shortly after the start, went along smoothly to the end. SAILOR BEWARE came out off the rail when straightened into the home stretch and was under light pressure to withstand BROWN TWIG. Latter secured racing room on the inside when moving into contention, responded to a hard drive and closed in game fashion. DANCING DOLL, unruly and placed on the outside for the start, began fast and raced forwardly all the way.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Florida East Coast Purse For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 4:28. Off at 4:30½. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, Joseph E. Widener's blk. g. (3), by Haste—Roseway. Trained by Dan Z. Stewart. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:42 2-5.

CEILING	(Seabo)	107	2	1	2h	2h	2h	3½	5	3.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUSHAWAY, $5.80, $4.00, $3.10; LANCEWOOD, $6.70, $3.50; SUNANAIR, $3.20.

RUSHAWAY sprinted into an easy lead, met strong efforts from CEILING at the final turn, drew clear midway of the homestretch, but had to be shaken up nearing the end to stall off LANCEWOOD. Latter rated forwardly, swung to the outside when reaching the homestretch and closed with good energy during the closing drive. SUNANAIR, outrun for the furlongs, finished with a rush in the last quarter only.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:02. Off at 5:04½. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Winner, E. A. McMann's b. g. (5), by Durbar II—Mary Maud. Trained by H. L. Cornwell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:42 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENARES, $11.20, $6.70, $4.50; BUILDING TRADES, $11.70, $5.20; INSULATED, $3.90.

BENARES displaced BUILDING TRADES when straightened into the back stretch, was steadied behind the front until challenged, then rallied on strongly after forcing BUILDING TRADES out all during the stretch drive. BUILDING TRADES, in front when the winner after being overtaken, rallied strongly when reaching the home stretch, but was forced out by the winner all during the stretch drive. INSULATED, as usual, showed early speed in his stride, went through on the inside leaving the back stretch, moved into contention at the final turn, then lost all chance by coming extremely wide into the final turn, then lost all chance by coming extremely wide into the home stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:36. Off at 5:36½. Start good from gate. Won handily; place, driving. Winner, Mrs. E. B. Carpenter's ch. m. (6), by Transmute—Fair Rosamond. Trained by E. B. Carpenter. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:56 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRANSPOSE, $5.30, $3.50, $2.90; BOMBASTIC, $3.70, $2.80; INDIANA FLYER, $3.60.

TRANSPOSE, reserved back of the leaders for the first six furlongs, moved to the front at the final bend when coming through on the inside of the leaders, drew clear and held BOMBASTIC safe. Latter, slow to get into full stride, improved her position steadily in the last half mile and was going strongly at the close. INDIANA FLYER had a lot taken out of him racing with ENTREE, but held on well.

Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 10.

Dear Al:

Mack Garner, the veteran jockey, has appointed himself a committee of one to collect funds for an old pal who is said to be in want. Garner received word from Baltimore that Cliff Robinson, a former jockey and a popular boy around Maryland, has suffered a broken leg which had to be amputated. Apprentice Jockey Russell Kastner will do his future riding for the Maemere Stable, trained by George Phillips. It is reported that Phillips paid $3,000 to M. Fernandez for Kastner's contract. Phillips has had his eye on the boy, whose apprentice allowance expires in September, for some time. Kastner's brilliant ride on Coequel in last Saturday's feature made up Phillips' mind. Henry McDaniel, one of the veteran trainers, will take over the horses of the Starmount Stable. It was this establishment that claimed Gold Foam at Saratoga last summer and then sent the horse out to win the rich Travers Stakes. McDaniel is recognized as one of the best trainers of 2-year-olds in the country. The track here resembled Bowie today. BILL.

First race—Portden will find a track to his liking tomorrow and a victory at generous odds would not surprise me. Johnny Gilbert will do the saddle work and I see no reason for mistakes. Night Serge and Wedding Ring are fit horses and will not be far out of it.

Second race—Peggy Porter, bred for the going and recommended by a smashing race, may take this purse. She has worked well since her last appearance in colors. Sophia Tucker and Lucky Ducky seem to have edges on the others.

Third race—Speed won over a somewhat similar track earlier in the meeting. Meets better company here, but that early speed may prove too much for this group. Stubbs and Gallant Gay are in excellent condition and will be ready to battle it out if the top one falters.

Fourth race—Quel Jeu gets the call in this evenly-matched field. Shares top weight with Bright Haven and the race is likely to be between this pair. Visgroth, with Meade in the saddle, probably will make a money appearance.

Fifth race—Hogans Fox is in rare form now and it will take a lot of running to beat him at this route. Col. Greene is running his way into top shape and may be closest at the end. Wacoche for the show.

Sixth race—Stumptown may be first or last on the figures. I have reason to believe that this fellow will do a powerful lot of running tomorrow. If you want price and a take-a-chance proposition, get aboard. Aura and Sweet Susan for the place and show.

Seventh race—Supreme Court and Top High should battle it out in this field. Both are heavily weighted but in fine form. Last Romance to take care of the others.

2 Contests Today For County Fives

Two schools of Prince Georges County take to the floors today to meet District opposition. Hyattsville High entertains the victory-flushed St. John's quintet on its home floor, while Mount Rainier plays host to St. Anthony's High.

Coach William Yarnall has on hand his full strength to throw against St. John's in an effort to break the Johnnies' winning streak. In a previous engagement Hyattsville lost by the margin of 12 points.

Business Dip Forecast for Rest of Month

Trade Survey Indicates Further Moderate Recession.

New York, Feb. 10.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. of New York, says today:

"Preliminary estimates of industrial production in February indicate that activity during the month will show a further moderate decline. The Standard Statistics Co. index of industrial production (corrected for seasonal variation, 1926 equals 100), which is based on activity in 28 major industries, is estimated at 78.6 for the month. This compares with the estimate for January of 81.0; 82.0 in December, the peak of the recovery to date, and 73.5 in February, 1935.

"Several major lines, particularly automobiles and steel, are not expected to increase operations this month, contrary to the normal seasonal trend. Automobile output is likely to be moderately below the January rate, but will probably be close to the 354,000 cars assembled in February, 1935. Steel activity is estimated at about 50 per cent of capacity, or approximately the same as for the preceding month and February of last year.

Luxury Trade Features Rise In Retail Sales

Furs, Luggage, Pianos and Furniture Show Large Gains.

Minneapolis, Feb. 10.—A feature of the retail business picture today is the steadily mounting public interest in things for the home, according to the year-end "prosperity goods" survey of mass buying made by Northwestern National Life Insurance Co., of Minneapolis.

The report, which covers sales volume in seven barometric lines of merchandise for 236 department stores from coast to coast, showed home furniture sales for 1935 to be 14.6 per cent ahead of 1934. Electric household appliances closed the year with sales totals 13 per cent over 1934 in the 236 stores studied, while pianos and other musical instruments came to the front in a burst of December buying, which was 18.8 per cent better than December of 1934.

Luggage sales for 1935 were 16 per cent ahead of the previous year; the November and December gains of 25.4 per cent and 19.5 per cent, respectively, over the corresponding months of 1934 reflected the increase in winter travel, particularly in ocean cruise patronage, which is the largest in many years.

December sales of sporting goods were 12.8 per cent over December, 1934, pushing the year's volume 11.1 per cent over 1934. Department store sales of jewelry were up 10.2 per cent for December and finished the year 5.9 per cent ahead of 1934.

Unusually large Christmas gift purchases of home furniture and electric appliances helped this year's sales picture materially, the report observes.

Stocks Move Forward With Fresh Vigor With Advance of Steels; Bonds Firm.

New York, Feb. 10.—For once the stock market did not appear to be depressed over disappointment on TVA. For some reason it gave less anticipatory attention to the coming decision. Its only gesture was a period of slack trading around noon. After that prices felt the brakes relaxed and the morning forward movement in the steel shares hit it up at a much faster pace. New high record prices for one to three years were set by a large number of representative industrial stocks, with Steel in the lead. Turnover of around 2,500,000 shares was only about the average for last week. Bonds were firm. May wheat continued to slide, closing 1⅛ cents lower at 97⅛ cents a bushel.

Trading in public utility shares in anticipation of a Supreme Court decision on the TVA case was far from as lively as it has been for the past several Mondays. Probably the reason was the weariness which has followed so many weeks of disappointment. The usual opening blocks of several thousand shares in the low-priced utilities on the Stock Exchange and the Curb were absent. Early trading interest rather was concentrated upon the steel shares.

Predicted increase of 2 points this week in the operating rate of the steel industry and the expected rise in United States Steel's January shipments, which turned out to have been 59,899 tons, helped the steels. Mainly the rising favor of that section of the market comes from increased railroad buying of equipment, heavy farm implement and miscellaneous business, expansion of the building industry projects for the spring, and more activity in prospect from the utilities.

Shares of the two large milk sellers—Borden's and National Dairy Products (Sheffield's)—were sensitive to the Supreme court's decision on the New York State milk control law. The first interpretation appeared unfavorable to Borden and Dairy Products, but second thoughts brought a good rally. Public utility shares did little after noon, just as in the morning they had acted as though they had given up hope of a TVA decision today. Railroad stocks generally were firm.

Shuttling of gold across the Atlantic is one of many influences to which the stock market at present is especially sensitive. In spite of the fact that gold now is moving to Europe, some of it to France, the question of devaluation for the franc continues to be put. For some time it has been the talk among banks here that during the government of a temporary ministry—between Laval and the coming elections in France—devaluation would take place. By that method no first-class French politician or statesman would have to bear the odium of such action. France may again surprise the wiseacres by proving to have more stamina for deflation and more repugnance for another dose of devaluation, carrying with it the fear of an inflationary bust, then they supposed.

British opinion, nevertheless, is strongly on the side of early devaluation. In a special article on the franc the Economist puts the matter this way:

"The course of political and financial events in France in the last few weeks has been as swift, obscure and impressive as a torrent in spate. But as week has succeeded week one probability has steadily grown into a certainty. The devaluation of the French franc is coming perceptibly nearer, and is now a matter of weeks or, at most, of months. The only uncertainty which the event alone can dispel is whether the immediate cause will be political discord, an intensification of the internal run on the banks, or an aggravated recurrence of the gold efflux."

British views coincide closely with those held in this country with what the effect of devaluation likely will be—that is, the answer depends on how the trick is turned and the conditions obtaining at the time. Overnight devaluation at a proper figure (commonly supposed to be 20 to 25 per cent) and maintenance of the gold standard, as was done n Belgium quite likely would create no great disturbance. Our markets probably would lose a good deal of capital temporarily lodged here, and they might further be weakened for a while by a considerable movement of gold to Paris. That would help rather than hurt us in a long run, but it might for a while dampen speculative ardor built up on hope of credit inflation to flow from our huge gold supply. The gold outflow would cut down our excess bank reserves.

That sort of devaluation also might help our foreign trade, if it stimulated European business, for the other gold standard countries probably would follow France. It certainly would not do so if gold were abandoned without assurance of stabilized rates for merely to take up the challenge of Great Britain and the United States for a race in depreciated currencies would be disastrous for all concerned. It would be essential as an assurance against international monetary and trade chaos that neither Great Britain nor this country would meet the gold bloc action with fresh devaluation. At best, gold bloc devaluation might lead to all-round currency stabilization on gold, but there would have to be a meeting of minds, which does not seem likely.

If the markets on this side gambled on a race for currency depreciation, a stock boom, for a while, may take place here, for American securities would look as attractive as any, and the dollar could be shoved as low as most currencies. That would, nevertheless, be to count on a desperate procedure for us, and it is more reasonable to expect sympathetic help from the United States, and probably from Great Britain.

Utilities Strong In Curb Trading

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Heavy buying in the low-priced utility stocks held most attention on the curb market today. Cities Service rose nearly a point to 6⅞, within striking distance of the 1935-36 high; American Gas rose ¼ to 41⅞. Electric Bond & Share gained ⅝ at 19¼ and Niagara Hudson improved ¼ at 10⅝.

Elsewhere the trend was indefinite, due principally to backward tendencies in the oil group. Among losers were such active issues as Pan American Airways, Pioneer Gold, International Petroleum and Gulf Oil. Transfers of 991,000 shares compared with 1,263,000 last Friday.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

RESULTS of the application of Section 213 (the "marriage clause), are revealed in a statement made by Mrs. Edwins Avery, chairman of the Government Workers' Council, to the American Federation of Government Employees.

BAKER.

Of 643 persons dismissed under the section, about one-third had earned less than $1,500, and half had received only from $1,000 to $1,200, according to the report. More than 90 per cent of the men, and more than 90 per cent of the women got less than $2,000, it is shown.

About 78 per cent of those reporting were 35 years of age or older—in other words, so that their age is a liability in getting new work. Eighty per cent of those dismissed were still without jobs at the time they reported, and 15 per cent more received less than in the work they formerly did.

Nearly 75 per cent of those reporting were contributing to the support of dependents. In many cases the families of relatives or household employes were thrown directly on relief. In many other cases homes and life savings were lost.

Mrs. Avery points out that these hardships were due not to improvidence on the part of the persons affected, but simply to the operation of a Federal law. The questionnaire sent to persons dismissed under Section 213 did not inquire as to veteran status, but 29 replies mentioned veteran status. Twenty-two of the 29 had not been able to obtain other employment.

Federal Housing Administration's Athletic Association is looking forward to a large attendance at its leap year Valentine dance and entertainment at the National Press Club Saturday night.

SAMUEL.

Some call this "The City of Lost Dreams,"
And claim thy children leave hope behind;
They think us parasites, or spineless idiots
With no ambition and little mind.
Yet we are the vital human structure
Through which pulses a country's legislation;
And we look not with shame upon the fate
That made us Civil Servants of this Nation.
True, we amass not great fortunes,
And seldom comes fame knocking at our door—
But we aspire to serve thee faithfully and well,
Although we die unknown and poor.

MATTIE RICHARD TYLER (F),
Register's Office, Treasury.

Alden H. Emery, assistant chief engineer of the Experiment Stations, Division of the Bureau of Mines, has recently been appointed manager of the American Chemical Society, a newly created office.

Money for Research.

Q.—How much money is spent by the Federal Government for scientific research in a year?—C. M. Castleton (P).

A.—The total amount for scientific research and the administration of scientific bureaus and offices comes to about $2,000,000 for the fiscal year 1936-37. This is more than has been spent for this purpose in recent years, but represents only about six-tenths of 1 per cent of the total budget.

Credit Executives Named.

In addition there are 19 of the field staff serving the various States, of which Mrs. Louise Fox represents the District of Columbia.

Jury Chosen in Libel Charge Against Paper

Washington, Pa., Feb. 10 (AP).—A jury of five women and seven men will try the criminal libel case brought by Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti against the Philadelphia Inquirer. The attorneys completed their selections of the group at the end of the first day's session of the trial, started in this little college town after the newspaper won a change of venue from Jefferson County, Margiotti's home.

The attorney general chrages he was defamed by an article that appeared in the Inquirer last September 29. Charles A. Tyler, general manager of the Inquirer, and John T. Custic, editor, are named defendants along with the newspaper.

One Killed, 3 Injured In Indiana Mine Blast

Clinton, Ind., Feb. 10 (AP).—One miner was killed and three others injured, one critically, by an explosion today in the Northwest Coal Corporation Mine.

The miner killed was Ben Pitchkites, 29, of Clinton. The injured are Joe Rollins, 40, of Blanford, hurt critically, and Dan Momcilivoch, 45, of Blanford, and Frank Pangrazio, 33, of Clinton.

Panfrazio said he and his companions, aware tha shots to blast coal would be fired soon, started to leave the pit, but found the cage frozen. They doged into an entry, but the force of the explosion wrecked the pillar behind which they had sought refuge.

Susan B. Anthony Tribute Planned

Honoring the 116th anniversary of the birth of Susan B. Anthony, pioneer leader in the movement for women's suffrage, the annual banquet will be held at the Washington Hotel Saturday evening, with Carrie Chapman Catt as guest of honor and principal speaker.

This year's affair will be elaborate and unique inasmuch as it will include the impersonation by a hostess at each table of ten guests of some woman notable in history, beginning with Mary, Mother of Jesus. This part will be protrayed by Lady Mary Montague, chairman of the affair.

Mrs. Anna E. Hendley will be toastmistress. Among the patrons are leaders of the Federation of Women's Clubs, the League of Women oVters, the National Woman's Party and the International Humanity League.

Property Jury Sets Sum to End Death Crossing

$61,176 Held Fair Pay for Landowners so Viaduct Can Be Built.

The District Government moved a step nearer to closing the "death trap" Michigan avenue northeast grade crossing yesterday, when a condemnation jury in District Supreme Court returned a verdict holding the property owners who would lose their land, or a portion of it, upon construction of a viaduct, were entitled to $61,176.21 for their holdings.

Previously, the high value placed by the owners on their property had threatened to make the project so expensive as to be impractical. The 32 owners asked almost $280,000 for the property the District would have to take over to make the viaduct possible.

Real estate sought by the District stretched from Seventh to Tenth streets, along Michigan avenue. Ten "improved" pieces of real estate, and two gasoline stations were included in the ground sought.

Actual start of the construction of the viaduct, which is just beyond the eastern approach to Catholic University, is not expected until property owners have had a chance to appeal the jury's verdict. Justice Oscar R. Luhring, in District Supreme Court, granted them the usual 20 days within which to appeal.

Restoring of City's Health Items Asked

The health program for which Mr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, the District Medical Society and other organizations are fighting, last night received the indorsement of the Parkview Citizens Association, meeting at Parkview School.

The association expressed its belief that the health items, cut from the District budget, should be restored by Congress before the District appropriation is passed.

In other resolutions the association opposed compulsory mechanical inspection of motor vehicles twice a year, opposed legalization of horse racing in the District, asked for improved street car service on Seventh street, and recommended that the District Fire Department be authorized to enlarge its personnel and purchase additional equipment.

hospitals. If she has 88 on her hands, about all she can be expected to do is to go from one bassinet to the next and see that all the occupants are still alive."

From another physician:

"Two wards, both of which were sorely needed, have been closed at Freedmen's Hospital because funds are running low."

Others are concerned because Gallinger Hospital has no social service department, a lack which has been condemned alike by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, the District Medical Society and an untold number of individuals.

One correspondent was alarmed because she thought the summer health camp for children disposed to tuberculosis, which has been conducted each summer on the Tuberculosis Hospital grounds at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest, was jeopardized by the Budget Bureau's pronouncement that the hospital must be abandoned when the new adult sanitarium at Glenn Dale, Md., is opened next January.

In this connection, the medical service committee of the Board of Public Welfare met yesterday and decided to ask the National Capital Park and Planning Commission for permission to transfer the camp to a Government-owned site on Bald Eagle Hill, near the Blue Plains Home for the Aged and overlooking the Potomac River.

The Works Progress Administration has allotted $79,000 for construction of camp buildings, provided a Federal site can be obtained.

Hagood Asks Army Be Given Some of WPA 'Stage Money'

Could Furnish Troops Badly-Needed Shelter Instead of Teaching CCC Workers to Collect Butterflies, Says General.

By the Associated Press.

Congress received advice yesterday from Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood to take advantage of what he called "a lot of easy money floating around"—including "stage money from the WPA"—and use it to improve living conditions at Army posts.

The commander of the Eighth Corps Area and the Third Field Army told the House appropriations subcommittee for the Army bill during hearings made public yesterday what he thought of some of the New Deal relief spending. He suggested that this Congress turn $150,000,000 over to the War Department "with instructions to get the Army under shelter."

"At the present time," Hagood urged, "there is a vast flow of silver—I won't say gold—spreading out all over the country like mud. It will soon dry up without anything permanent to show for it. I shall not be accussed of profanity when I say, 'For God's sake, put some of it into stone and steel.' I am not asking you to build pyramids. I am asking you to put up useful buildings that will be occupied by your men in uniform for a hundred years to come."

Classifies Spending.

The major general said he was "not familier with the various pockets in which Uncle Sam keeps his money," but that he understood "there is budget money, which is very hard to get; there is PWA money, which is not so hard to get; and then there is a vast quantity of WPA money which is very easy to get for trifling projects, but almost impossible to get for anything worthwhile."

He said he called WPA funds "stage money" because "you can pass it around but you can not get anything out of it in the end."

"It is harder for me to get 5 cents to buy a lead pencil than to get a thousand dollars to teach hobbies to CCC boys," Hagood told the committee. "I do not like the Government standard lead pencils and I can not get by the comptroller with the kind of pencils that I like. But CCC hobbies are exempted from the comptroller's decisions. They do not have to come up to Government specifications. One man can be taught to collect postage stamps while another man can be encouraged to take an interest in butterflies.

$200 for Gravel Walk.

"Under the WPA I can get $200 to build a gravel walk to the garden house, but I can not get $10 to repair a 'busted' steam pipe."

The officer declared that since returning from the World War he had seen families of soldiers and civilian employes in the Army "living under conditions worst than anything I saw among the Belgian refugees."

"Now, the CCC is a fine thing—the best thing perhaps in the whole relief program. But the $45,000,000 I spent on it last year will all be gone away next year. Give me $38,000,000 for Army housing and my great-grandchildren will show it to your great-grandchildren 50 years from now."

J. R. Hewitt to Speak To Retail Credit Men

The Associated Retail Credit Men of Washington will hold a luncheon meeting today at 12:30 p. m. at Woodward & Lothrop Department Store. J. R. Hewitt, credit manager of the Hecht Co., will speak.

Hewitt, a former president of the National Retail Credit Association, has had wide experience with credit problems and is recognized as an authority in this field.

Hamlet's Attorney Suggests a Leash

Joseph Tumulty, who was Secretary to President Wilson, acting yesterday as attorney to Hamlet, 180-pound Great Dane owned by Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, suggested a compromise to James Lauderdale, assistant corporation counsel, who is to decide today whether Hamlet should face a judge on a charge of viciousness.

Tumulty wrote Lauderdale as follows: "Mrs. Forbes Morgan does not, of course, desire in any way to be the cause of any uneasiness to her neighbors. It is her sincere desire in every way to be the good neighbor and to relieve every fear on the part of her neighbors of the idea of the dog being at large on the streets. She is quite willing to see that the dog is never allowed out without being on a leash."

Yesterday Hamlet was supposed to put on a demonstration of his gentleness—several persons had volunteered to place their hands in the dogs mouth. Mrs. Morgan called this off because at a rehearsal Sunday, Hamlet didn't co-operate very well. It wasn't that he bit the hands of a reporter and Gorge Shires, the Forbes' butler, but that he first had to be chased and caught and then his mouth had to be pried open.

Ethiopian Emperor Returns to Capital

Addis Ababa, Feb. 10 (AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie was reliably reported today to have returned to Addis Ababa after spending many weeks in his field headquarters at Desseye, bombed again Sunday by the Italians.

An Ethiopian commmunique said one person was killed and five injured in the Dessye raid.

Two bombs, the government said, were aimed at a Dutch Red Cross ambulance.

Neghelli, Ethiopia (By courier to Mogadiscio, Italian Somaliland), Feb. 10 (AP)—The Italian mobile "hell on wheels" column is drawing tighter the noose of occupation in the southern region between the Dawa Parma, Ganale Doria and Webbe Gestro.

Fascist forces, aided by native warriors, have engaged in numerous hot fights resulting in casualties and prisoners as the motorized Italian armies drive to hold all wells and water sources.

Culbertson on Bridge

Challenge Match.

Not long ago I reported in this column several hands that had been played in a scrappy rubber bridge game composed of four old cronies, all friends of mine. The usual case of devoted pals in social life, implacable enemies at the bridge table. Since then each partnership had lost no opportunity to sneer openly at the other, with the not unnatural result that a challenge was issued and promptly accepted. Since the real issue involved was one player's mistakes against another's, it was agreed that there would be no stakes but that each error should be charged, at varying prices according to degree, to the guilty person. Obviously, a referee would be required, and I was beseeched to fill the office. Not without great misgiving, and only after making certain provisions, I accepted. The provisions were (1) that my decisions should be final and allowed to stand without tears, protestations or audible comments, and (2) that I should have a reporter's prerogative for my daily column. It was further agreed that errors should fall into four classes and be penalized commensurately: Class A: Slight, inconsequential, price $1. Class B: Rather serious, affecting the result, $2.50. Class C: Stupid, creating a "big swing," $5. Class D: Horrible! $10.

The Game Begins.

No sooner were the details arranged than the players, champing at the bit, sat down and dealt the first hand. This was it:

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

NORTH

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1 Cl.	1 Ht.	2 Sp.	Pass
2 N. T.	Pass	3 Sp.	Pass
3 N. T.	Pass	4 Di.	Pass
4 Sp.	Pass	4 N. T.	Pass
5 Di.	Pass	6 Sp.	Pass
Pass	Double	Redbl. (final bid)

It seemed to me that the North and South bidding had been perfect. South had not given a first-round cue bid in hearts, over East's bid, because of his freakish distribution and because he did not wish to imply a fit with his partner's club bid. His forcing spade bid insured that game would be reached and saved a round of bidding for future use.

North's responses were, of course, based on the fact that he had opened with a minimum bid and a broken suit. He had to apply the brakes on the early rounds. His no trump responses, however, made South proceed cautiously against the possibility that North had something like the ace-king of clubs and the heart king for his opening bid, and that two diamond tricks, therefore, would be off the hand. But when, over four no trump, North showed the diamond ace, South knew that, at worst, the small slam would depend upon a finesse.

Of course, there was nothing to the play. The slam was a laydown.

"Any comments, professor?" asked South.

"Good bidding," I answered. "But I think we'll charge East $1 for that double. It was tempting, I'll admit, with the ace-queen of clubs blank, but not wise. He should have realized that South's terrific bidding indicated a strong and freakish hand, and certainly should not have hoped to set the contract more than one trick. He should know it would be redoubled, and the percentage was all against him. One class A mistake for East."

Suspect in Alexander Murder Admits Killings

Aix-en-Provence, France, Feb. 10 (AP).—Zvonimir Pospechil, one of three Croats on trial for complicity in the assassination of King Alexandria of Yugoslavia, admitted numerous assassinations in Yugoslavia in a declaration today.

Pospechil's statement, in three languages, was made to police after the killing of the monarch at Marseille in 1934.

A statement from Mio Kraj, another defendant, said he had received 1,500 francs in Aix-en-Provence for his part in the monarch's killing.

Phone Scares Off Thugs.

Bradford, Pa., Feb. 10 (AP).—Three men gagged and bound S. J. Davidson in a laundry company office, knocked the combination from the safe, and set a nitro-glycerine charge. Then the telephone rang. They picked up their tools and fled.

Laredo Bru Hurt in Crash.

Havana, Feb. 10 (AP).—Federico Laredo Bru, vice president-elect of Cuba, was injured in an automobile wreck today in which Ramon Alvarez, a Spaniard, was killed. The accident occurred near the town of Los Arabos.
